STRIKERS RIOTING.

Attempt to Blow Up Building.

Dozen or More Men Injured in Clash Following Outrage.

Mob of Frenzied Women Break Into Restaurant and Steal Boiling Soup.

Timely Arrival of Troops Saves Lives of Trolley Passengers.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 21.—A night of wild rioting among the striking workingmen closed the week at the Pressed Steel Car Company's plant in Schoenville.

A daring attempt, partly successful, to blow up the office building of the company, was made. This was the signal for serious clashes between State troopers and strike sympathizers, in which a dozen or more men were injured.

Shortly after 10 p.m., 500 women and children gathered about the company's restaurant in McKee's Rocks, and were partially dispersed by mounted troopers. One woman stood out of the mob and drawing a gas pipe, loaded with powder, threw it at the feet of a trooper's horse. The bomb failed to explode.

The crowd of women was finally dispersed when fire hose was played on them.

STEAL STEAMING SOUP.

While the angry women swarmed the streets, a concerted attack was made upon the company restaurant from the rear, and attacking the negro cooks with ladles, cooking spoons, etc., about fifty women beat an entrance into the kitchens of the establishment, and made off with the potatoes, onions and even cauldrons of steaming soup.

Near a viaduct over the railroad tracks, strike sympathizers gathered and began stopping street cars. Three men could not satisfactorily explain their presence in McKee's Rocks, and were bodily hurled through a car window. When the men fell from the car, members of the mob on the street, attacked them. The men were dragged to the edge of the viaduct, fifty feet below which lay the tracks of the railroad, and only escaped being thrown over by the arrival of troopers.

Late tonight an attempt was made to blow up the office building of the car plant, a three-story frame structure, erected close to the stockade near the company house. Nitro-glycerin caps were thrown over the stockade, and over twenty feet of basement rocks supporting the office building was torn away by the force of the explosion. There is no clew as to the identity of the man responsible for the deed.

STREET CAR ATTACKED.

A street car from Pittsburgh was attacked by strike sympathizers and a dozen persons aboard the car were severely beaten and finally rescued by troopers.

At midnight the situation was quiet, but ominous. A charge of peonage was formally made late today against Frank N. Hoffstot, president of the Pressed Steel Car Company, and Samuel Cohn, head of the service bureau at the Schoenville plant.

In an affidavit sworn to by Albert Vamos before United States Commissioner Lindsay, the charge is made that Hoffstot and Cohn "arrested, held and returned the complainant to a condition of peonage."

Vamos alleges he was brought here in complete ignorance of the state of affairs at Schoenville. He avers that when he made an attempt to escape from the plant, first asking permission from Cohn to leave, he was beaten so severely that he had to go to a hospital.

Colombia, Miffed at United States, Gets England to Back Project.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PANAMA, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Colombia will not sign the tripartite treaty with the United States and the republic of Panama, relating to the Panama Canal.

So far from signing the treaty, Colombia seems determined to dig an inter-oceanic canal of her own—with the assistance of England.

Influenced by English capital, resolved to secure a canal free from American domination, a majority of the Colombian Congress is pledged to grant a concession to Luis Arturo Undurraga, who left here recently for Bogota. He claims to have discovered a new route for a canal a few miles east of the boundary line between Panama and Colombia.

INCENDIARY.

FIRE GUTS MONTEREY; HINTS OF POLITICS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 21.—Word reached here after midnight tonight that the central portion of the city of Monterey is burning, and that the Federal telegraph office is on fire. All telegraphic communication between Monterey and this city and Laredo has been cut off.

It is not known whether the fire has any connection with the political disturbances at Monterey, but the fact that it started in the wholesale drug store owned by the son of Gen. Trevino, commander of the Monterey military zone, and the opponent of Gen. Reyes, is considered significant.

The operators in the Monterey telegraph office bravely stuck to their posts until the flames reached the second story, when they were forced to abandon their keys.

The last word was that the bank of Nuevo Leon was threatened by the fast-spreading fire. There is absolutely no communication with the north now. Much uneasiness is felt here that the fire may have grave political significance.

MONTEREY (Mex.) Aug. 21.—The Botica Leon, a large wholesale drug store, is on fire, and threatens the business center of the city, and the Nuevo bank.

PRESIDENT AT WORK ON COMMERCE LAW.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BEVERLY (Mass.) Aug. 21.—For four hours and a half this afternoon, President Taft was closeted with three members of his Cabinet discussing changes to be recommended in the interstate commerce and the anti-trust laws.

Atty.-Gen. Wickersham presented the President a tentative draft of several of the proposed changes. These Mr. Taft in part approved.

The Cabinet conference was attended by Secretarys MacVeagh and Myer and Atty.-Gen. Wickersham. When the conference adjourned until tomorrow, President Taft announced that no definite conclusion had been reached on any one of the several matters under discussion. The final framing of the amendments to the inter- will be left to the commission designated by the President.

The Attorney-General will take to the commission, which is to meet in New York, August 30, a definite statement from President Taft in the matter. This will form the main feature of his forthcoming message to Congress.

Mr. Taft declared tonight that as a result of the report adopted by the Attorney-General, he was convinced that the amendments deemed necessary to the interstate commerce law would be simple matters to deal with. The coördination of the executive departments concerned in the enforcement of the interstate commerce and anti-trust laws, he said, could also be readily accomplished.

The proposed amendments to the anti-trust law offer greater difficulties, and it was to this law that the conference today was largely devoted. posed of today was an amendment to the interstate commerce act looking to a proper financial supervision and restriction to prevent excessive issues of securities by railways.

Plans approved by the President are designed to relieve the Interstate Commerce Commission of much of the work that is now heaped upon it. It is intended here that investigations from which prosecution may result, shall be conducted directly, either by the Department of Justice or by the Bureau of Corporations instead of by the Interstate Commerce Commission as at present.

The President desires a reorganization of the Department of Justice of the Interstate Commerce Commission and of the Bureau of Corporations looking to the effective coöperation of these agencies.

Secretary MacVeagh laid before the President a list of forty candidates for appointments on the tariff commission authorized by the Payne bill. The Secretary said he had been unable as yet to make a selection. There is some talk now that the commission will be limited to three or five members.

The President this afternoon had an extended interview with Charles R. Crane, the newly-appointed Minister to China and sent him away on his mission with a message of good will to the Chinese people. Mr. Crane will sail for his post on October 6.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 21.—Marian Bleakley, who was kidnaped at Topeka, today, was recovered by officers here tonight. Two kidnapers, with the child in their possession, were arrested.

The fugitives were taken from a passenger train upon its arrival here. The child was taken to police headquarters and will be returned to her home as soon as possible.

Mrs. Edith Barclay and John Gentry were arrested at the Burlington railroad bridge in this city late tonight. The man, woman and child were passengers on a Chicago, Burlington and Quincy train which they had boarded at Atchison, Kan.

The train was stopped at the bridge in accordance with telegraphic orders sent from Atchison.

John Gentry, who was arrested in company with Mrs. Barclay, is an alleged gambler of Kansas City.

Mrs. Barclay was until 1907 the legal foster mother of the child. Her claim that the child cannot be taken from her in Missouri is based upon the contention that the adoption papers, drawn in this State in 1904, have never been annulled by a Missouri court.

THEFT SENSATIONAL.
YOUNG GUARD BEATEN.
[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Aug. 21.—Marion Bleakley, the St. Louis World's Fair incubator baby, who was the cause of litigation extending over several years, was kidnaped in a sensational manner, from the home of her mother, at No. 1027 Garfield avenue, at 10 o'clock this morning.

A message to the Chief of Police this afternoon, stated that a party in an automobile answering the description of the kidnapers, had been seen eight miles south of Lawrence.

The little girl, who is 5 years old, has been carefully guarded in Topeka, and has been constantly attended.

This morning a woman appeared in the neighborhood ostensibly selling soap. She visited Mrs. Bleakley's house. A half hour later a buggy in which were two men and the same woman, appeared in front of the house and the kidnaping followed.

Mrs. Charlotte Bleakley, who was awarded the child by the Federal courts two years ago, lived with her mother. She worked as a stenographer. Today the child was left with a boy of the neighborhood. One of the men got out and entered the house where the child was playing. As he ran toward her, the boy interfered and the kidnaper shot at him, but missed.

He then knocked the boy down and carried the child to the buggy and drove off.

The police were immediately notified and a posse is now in pursuit.

INCUBATOR BABY.

Marion Bleakley, the kidnaped child, has had a stormy career. She was born in a hospital at St. Louis, and was placed in one of the incubators shown at the exposition. While there she was formally adopted by Mrs. James G. Barclay of Moline, Ill. Mrs. Bleakley signed a release, but she afterward tried to recover the child and was successful in the Illinois courts. She brought the child to Kansas, and the baby was kidnaped in Montgomery county, but later was recovered.

The fight for the possession of the baby was fought through the State courts, and the Supreme Court finally awarded the custody to Mrs. Bleakley.

Mrs. Barclay then instituted a suit in the Federal court for possession of the child, but was again defeated.

The Bleakley home is located on the west side, eighteen blocks west of the business district, and in one of the principal residence sections.

A month ago a strange woman visited the newspaper offices making inquiries about the whereabouts of Mrs. Bleakley. She claimed to be a friend, but it is supposed her business was to locate the little girl.

POSSE FOLLOWS AT ONCE.

All the railroad stations in the vicinity of Topeka were notified at once and a Sheriff's posse in automobiles has left for the west, the direction taken by the kidnapers.

The young man who was in charge of the kidnaped child, was Clarence Belknap of Jackson, Tenn., a cousin of Mrs. Bleakley, who is visiting at her home. After he had been struck down he recovered sufficiently to follow the buggy and caught on the rear of the vehicle, but was beaten off.

The kidnapers lashed their horse to a gallop and drove west on Tenth avenue, and it is supposed they headed for a small station on the Rock Island Railroad, six miles west of Topeka, where they expected to board a westbound train.

The buggy in which the kidnapers escaped, was found at 1 o'clock this afternoon in the street at Fifth and Fillmore streets, two miles from where the child was stolen. It was hired

MENTIONED AS SUCCESSOR TO DR. BURDETTE.

Rev. Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, noted Portland, Or., pastor, who starts today for Los Angeles to confer with Temple Baptist Church trustees regarding a proposal that he be called to pastorate.

CALL IS HEARD.

DR. BROUGHER MAY BE BURDETTE'S SUCCESSOR.

Portland Pastor Is Coming to Los Angeles to Preach at Temple Auditorium and Says He is Considering Informal Overtures.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Rev. Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, pastor of the First Baptist Church, known as the White Temple, will leave tomorrow night for Los Angeles to confer with the trustees of Temple Auditorium in regard to a proposal that he assume the pastorate made vacant by the resignation of Rev. Dr. Robert J. Burdette.

"I have not been called to the Temple Auditorium pastorate," said Dr. Brougher this evening. "I have received informal overtures from the Temple in regard to my taking up the work, and we have mutually concluded it will be more satisfactory to all concerned for me to go and talk the question over with them personally than to continue negotiations by correspondence.

"I shall leave tomorrow night for Los Angeles and I expect to spend several days there. I shall preach in Temple Auditorium morning and evening the next Sunday. If the people there seem to want me and if after looking over that field I feel that I am the man for the place, then I may stay. My recollection of my visit to Los Angeles two years ago, when I preached in the Temple Auditorium during Dr. Burdette's vacation, is one of the most pleasant of my career.

"It is a splendid congregation and a splendid field. But Portland also is very dear to me and so is my White Temple charge. If I leave them at all it will be with deep regret."

In his ministry of about fifteen years Dr. Brougher has held but three pastorates. After his graduation from the Rochester Baptist Theological Seminary in 1894 he was called to the First Baptist Church of Paterson, N. J. At that time it was one of the largest Baptist churches in New Jersey. In spite of this fact its accommodations were not sufficient for all those who desired to hear the pastor.

After six years' service Dr. Brougher was called to the First Baptist Church of Chattanooga, Tenn., which pastorate he held until his acceptance of the White Temple pastorate, six years ago.

Dr. Brougher is a native of Indiana, but lived for a number of years in Oakland, Cal.

He graduated from the California College there and married the daughter of Dr. Morse, its president. Dr. and Mrs. Brougher have four children, two boys and two girls.

He has had several calls to big eastern congregations, including one to Tremont Temple, Boston.

ANSWERS FOR HARRIMAN.

Railroad King's Secretary Laughs at Tales Concerning His Chief's Health and Plans.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "The talk that Mr. Harriman will be received with honors and pomp and powers of an uncrowned king is absurd to those who know him most intimately, as are the stories that he is virtually on his death bed, and that his active life is at an end."

Charles C. Tegethoff, E. H. Harriman's confidential secretary, thus set at rest today the rumors that the financier was to be met at sea by a private yacht and hurried to his home at Arden under such close guard as surrounds only a czar or an emperor.

"As for the so-called champagne baths and all that Dr. Struempel, the Berlin specialist, is quoted as having recommended. I don't know anything more than I have read in the papers, but it is my guess that Mr. Harriman won't have time to pay attention to fussy wrinkles about his goings and comings. He will just lead a quiet, sane life and nature will do the rest."

Mr. Tegethoff would not discuss the possibility of Mr. Harriman attending the meetings of the Union and Southern Pacific directors scheduled for Tuesday.

FOREST FIRE THEATENS TOWN.

Grand Forks, B. C., Surrounded by Flames and Rosebery Is Already Destroyed.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

GRAND FORKS (B. C.) Aug. 21.—This town is in danger of total destruction by a forest fire that has been raging in this vicinity for two days.

Already the near-by town of Rosebery has been destroyed, its inhabitants narrowly escaping with their lives.

The fires are now sweeping through residents of the little town are fleeing for their lives.

The forest rangers are recruiting fire fighters, and apparatus is being hurried to the scene from points outside the danger zone.

Although the flames have not yet touched Grand Forks, they are headed in this direction, and every preparation is being made to stop the fire before it reaches the city.

LOSE ON CONVICT LABOR.

Deficit of $82,000 Discovered by Auditors in Western Pennsylvania Penitentiary.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 21.—Discovery has been made, it is alleged, of a deficit of $82,000 by a board of auditors appointed to fix the financial status of the Western Pennsylvania penitentiary. The investigation was started by a number of bankers now serving time in the institution. The $82,000 is accounted for in the book-keeping.

Brooms and broom material to that amount is stored away.

This extraordinary purchase has submerged the finances of the big prison. The hosiery department, it is said, has been running at a loss of $100,000 a year, while rugs and carpets have been sold for less than was paid for the manufacturing material.

Temporarily the expenses will be met with borrowed money.

Aug. 15.—Via Hammerfest, Au
21.—Walter Wellman's second a tempt to sail over the North Pole in balloon has resulted in a failure.
The giant dirigible balloon "Ame ica," in which Mr. Wellman and h party of three set out, proceeded abo thirty-two miles from the starti point.
Mr. Wellman and his party su ceeded in making a safe landing, a returned to this point on board t steamer Fram, which also towed in t disabled balloon.
After a long preparation and waiti for favorable weather, the opportuni came today.
It was 10 o'clock in the morning wh the great airship was brought out its shed, and the explorers took th places in the car. When anchors w cast loose, the airship ascended bea tifully, the engines were set in m tion, and everything seemed to wo to perfection.

PROPITIOUS START.

Then its head was turned to northward, and it set out at a spe of twenty-five miles an hour.
After having covered some thir
two miles, and when everythi seemed to be going splendidly, t leather guide rope to which was tached a thousand pounds of pro sions and stores, broke away.
The accident occurred just as airship was nearing the pack ice
North Spitzbergen.
Released from this great weight, airship shot upward at a terrific p until it was at a great height abo the clouds.
The pilots succeeded, however, bringing it down near the earth, tu ing about, and set their way to southward against a strong wind.
The airship proceeded slowly sou ward to the edge of the pack i where the steamer Fram was chored. After much difficulty, a t rope was gotten aboard the Fra which started immediately to tow airship to Spitzbergen. The strain w so great, however, that it threate to tear the car to pieces,
Mr. Wellman finally decided bring the airship down to surface of the water. This was fected without mishap, and the rested on the surface of the water u til all members of the crew, the do and the scientific instruments co be transferred aboard the Fram.
The America was then towed ba to the landing stage.
But the ill luck of the expedition w not yet at an end. Just as the a ship had reached the landing stage sudden gust of wind caught the bag broadside-on, and snatched away from its tow lines. It was c ried, careening, over rough ice hu mocks for some distance, and then exploded. All the scattered parts w subsequently recovered, but the da age was so great as to preclude a further attempt to fly over the p this year.

SECOND FAILURE.

The attempt of Walter Wellman cross the North Pole in an airsh which began and ended today, mark his second failure in this hazardo undertaking. The enormous airsh was taken out of its shed this mo ing and Wellman, Melvin Vanim Loud and Popoff took their places the car.
Vaniman, who was the chief en neer of the expedition, gave orders the workmen to cut loose the ballo which lifted by a strong gust of wi leaped into the air. The ship swu out over the bay with Wellman holdi her steering wheel. The problem th was to get clear of the narrow b surrounded by high mountains, who the cross currents of winds harrass the craft. The course was finally for Sterneberg, the America passi

Wellman and Vaniman were d

Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress Closes.

Ask Congress to Repeal Tax on Oleomargarine.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DENVER, Aug. 21.—Further desultory debating in the forest reserve controversy marked the last hours of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress, and with the adoption of a resolution prepared by Thomas Patterson, former United States Senator from Colorado, the sine die adjournment took place.

One of the last acts was the adoption of a resolution calling upon Congress to repeal the 10 cent per pound tax on oleomargarine. There was some objection voiced by the dairy interests, but this faded away when the oleomargarine representatives offered no objection to the retention of the oleomargarine stamp on all imitation butter.

The Patterson resolution calls upon Congress for action defining the boundaries of the forest reserves in such a manner as to exclude mineral and agricultural lands.

Frank Gowdy of Denver, considered that the resolution inferred an attack on Gifford Pinchot, and opposed the resolution.

It was not until a resolution commending the forestry bureau was adopted that the Patterson resolution was accepted and peace was declared.

The next convention, the short session, will be held in San Antonio, Tex., in November, 1910.

The following officers were elected in addition to Col. Ike T. Pryor, of San Antonio, and Arthur Francis, of Cripple Creek, Colo., president and secretary, respectively, as already announced in the committee on permanent organization:

First vice-president—A. C. Trumbo, Muskogee, Okla.

Second vice-president—Sam Dutton, Denver.

Third vice-president—Col. L. W. Baker, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Fourth vice-president—C. A. Jastro, Bakersfield, Cal.

Treasurer—L. J. Hart, San Antonio, Tex.

Chairman Executive Committee—Fred W. Fleming, Kansas City.

Congressman J. A. McGuire spoke on inland waterways, during which he said the government would better spend money in developing inland water routes than giving it to shipping trusts and building battleships to ward off imaginary foes.

He declared the waterway will be the surest way of settling the rate question, and will work no hardship on railroads, because the latter are now unable to carry the commerce of the country and will be less able in a few years.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, of the Department of Agriculture, delivered a short address on the pure food question.

NEW BRUNSWICK (N. J.) Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In an automobile smash this afternoon George A. MacLean, Jr., was instantly killed, his father, George A. MacLean, manager of Marshal Field's retail store in Chicago, was fatally injured, and five others were seriously hurt. The elder Mr. MacLean's back was broken and his death is expected.

The others who were injured were Mrs. MacLean, Sr., Miss Dorothy MacLean, Miss Jeanette MacDonald, Miss Harriet MacDonald and Oscar Scott, a colored chauffeur. All the party were from Chicago, except the negro, whose home is in Indianapolis, Ind.

The party were on their way from Princeton to New York. The young man who was killed had intended to enter Princeton University this fall, and had been at the institution making arrangements. The automobile was running at about forty miles an hour when the chauffeur discovered that the steering gear was broken. He applied the brake, but before it had checked the car's speed it had crashed into a telephone pole, and the seven occupants of the machine were hurled in all directions, Mr. MacLean, Sr., 30 feet. The son was riding in front with the chauffeur, and was dashed head first into the post, being killed instantly.

The injured were rushed to a hospital. It is thought that all except Mr. MacLean, Sr., will recover, although all are in a serious condition.

Gen. Diaz Expresses Fear That Matters of State May Keep Him at the Capital.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Three more regiments of troops, two cavalry and one infantry, have been ordered north under sealed orders, but presumably to border States, making five regiments from southern districts to be ordered north within the last five days. In army circles it is admitted that the situation is becoming extremely disturbing in northern States, especially in the States of Nuevo Leon and Coahuila.

To a delegation of Mexican-Americans who called to extend an invitation to him to visit Texas this fall, President Diaz expressed the fear that he would not be able to leave the republic at least for some months. He said he had hoped to have the honor of meeting President Taft, but that he doubted very gravely if he would be afforded the pleasure.

Gen. Diaz explained that it was not a question of getting Congress's permission, but matters of state would require his presence at the capital.

GRACE VAN STUDDIFORD IN TEARS FILES DIVORCE SUIT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Grace Van Studdiford, comic opera star, filed suit today for divorce from Charlie Van Studdiford, member of an old St. Louis family. Her petition says that they were married in Chicago, April 27, 1897, and separated in May, 1908. Her only allegation is that her husband deserted her, and he has absented himself from her for more than a year.

In speaking of her determination to seek a legal separation, Mrs. Van Studdiford wept. She said that she had hesitated a long time, but that at last she had made up her mind that she and her husband had come to the parting of the ways.

The grief in the opera singer's heart over the suit was not apparent in her demeanor during the presentation of "The Bohemian Girl" at Delmar. Her beautiful voice was as clear and sparkling as ever, her vivacity and apparent gayety were so marked that admirers declared that they had never seen her in better form.

How deceptive her manner was, became apparent after the curtain had been rung down, and she had the final consultation with her lawyer. When she joined a group of friends in the office at the Garden her eyes were full of tears, and as she spoke of the suit she burst into sobs.

Friends of Van Studdiford think he will not contest the suit. They have known for years that his wife paid many of his bills, a large part of her income being spent in that way.

Mrs. Van Studdiford is living as a tenant in the St. Louis county estate, Atlasta Place, which she formerly owned.

The wooing of the beautiful Gracia Quive by Charlie Van Studdiford was romantic and spectacular. It was across the footlights that Van Studdiford, then one of the rich men in St. Louis, caught his first glimpse of the fair Gracia. She was singing a leading part in a Bostonian production. Fascinated by the charming young singer, Van Studdiford followed her about the country through an entire season. He occupied a box at every performance in which she appeared and he was lavish with his gifts.

At the end of every act and at the climax of every lyric he would send big bunches of flowers across the footlights to her and it was no uncommon occurrence for the singer to find a diamond ring and sunbursts hidden in the heart of a bouquet of American Beauty roses. So persistent was the wooer that at the end of the season Miss Quive surrendered and became Mrs. Van Studdiford. The doors of St. Louis society were thrown open to her because of the standing of her husband's family and of her own beauty and talents.

The Van Studdiford patrimony rapidly dwindled. From a home to a flat went the still devoted pair and receptions became less frequent. Five years ago, to relieve her husband's fortunes, Mrs. Van Studdiford returned to the stage.

BIG UNDERTAKING.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS PLAN TO REHABILITATE THE PARTY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Senator Robert Marion La Follette of Wisconsin has been invited by the radical Democrats of the State of New York to assist in the rehabilitation of that party in this State. Among the other "assistants" who have been invited are William J. Bryan and William R. Hearst. And if the New York State Democracy doesn't get thoroughly rehabilitated mighty quick it won't be because there is a lack of rehabilitators.

Some time ago the conservative wing of the Empire State Democracy announced its reorganization plans and called a conference of Democrats to meet at Saratoga, September 9. Among the "old line" leaders who handled the announcement was Alton B. Parker, and it was openly declared that the prime purpose of the conference would be to get rid of William Jennings Bryan and his radical phantasies, "Fingy" Connors and his State machine and "Boss" Charles Murphy and the Tammany influence. If there would be any Democracy left after such a house cleaning the rehabilitators figured that they ought to be able to win a bunch of victories in the city and State elections and sail into triumphant leadership at the time of the next national convention.

Now the radical members of the party have decided they don't want to be rehabilitated out of the party. They are going to do some rehabilitating themselves, and it won't take any very heavy imagination to figure out what will happen to Alton B. Parker et al under the latest brand of reorganization.

The radicals have secured the active indorsement of Mr. Bryan and are going to hold their reorganization session at Utica, September 4. It was announced today that Mr. Bryan had sent a letter to the up-State backers of the movement indorsing their step. James L. Dempsey of Clinton, N. Y., is the leader of those who are behind the Utica conference and J. Francis Condon of No. 166 Genesee street, Utica, is secretary.

Invitations have been sent to Mr. Bryan, Senator La Follette, William R. Hearst, Senator Gore and others to be present. The backers of the movement hope to rally the radical Democrats and thus offset the effect of the Saratoga conference which is to be held a few days later.

TWO newspapers, one in the extreme southwestern corner of the United states, the other in the far northwestern corner, both named "The Times," in the respective cities of Los Angeles and Seattle, enjoy the remarkable record of leading the newspapers of the country in volume of advertising printed during the month of July, 1909. The Los Angeles Times distanced its namesake in Seattle by 533 columns, and published 50% more advertising for the month named than any New York, Chicago, Philadelphia or St. Louis newspaper.

The Los Angeles Times shows a gain of 361 columns for July of this year over the same period of 1908. This is an indication of the upward trend of business growth in this region, and all the figures here given are indisputable evidence of the continued lead of The Times over local competitors and its esteemed contemporaries throughout the country.

The table below gives the aggregate volume of paid matter published during July in each of the papers named:

KING SMITTEN WITH MAXINE.

ENGLISH RULER AND ACTRESS CROQUET PARTNERS.

Miss Elliott, at Marienbad, Is Adopted as Member of Royal Set and Is Invited to Select Events Given in His Honor—Edward Unusually Well and Happy.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MARIENBAD (Bohemia) Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The social triumph of Miss Maxine Elliott, the beautiful American actress, has been the sensation of the season here. The day after King Edward arrived he drove his automobile to the golf grounds and invited Miss Elliott and the Hon. Mrs. Albert Petre to drink tea with him on his private veranda of the clubhouse. Afterward they played croquet with His Majesty and the Hon. Sidney Greville, the King having Miss Elliott as partner.

Plainly His Majesty enjoyed himself unusually, for he repeated the agreeable entertainment next day.

The King seems greatly attracted by the handsome American. He met her here last year and since then he has met her two or three times in London.

One significant result of Miss Elliott's success is that Mrs. Arthur James and Mrs. Hall Walker, both belonging to "the King's set," repeatedly ask her to lawn tennis and bridge parties, to luncheon or dinner. The Hon. Mrs. Petre gave a dinner for the King Saturday, Miss Elliott being one of her nine guests. Returning to London shortly, Miss Elliott will stay at the Ritz Hotel for a couple of weeks.

The King is looking rarely well and seems in high good humor now. But at first the offensive attentions of the crowd on the promenade so infuriated him that he let it be known through an equerry that he probably would never return here. But the manners of the crowd have so improved that the King can walk around unmolested like an ordinary mortal.

TRAIN DROPS THROUGH TRESTLE

Engineer Prevented from Seeing Bridge is on Fire by Smoke—Passengers Saved.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SPOKANE, Aug. 21.—Fatally injuring Engineer Gillett and seriously injuring the mail clerk, the engine and baggage car of the southbound Spokane Falls and Northern passenger train plunged through a fifty-foot trestle two miles south of Darts siding today. The rest of the train remained on the track. The mail car caught fire. The wreck occurred about twenty miles south of Spokane while the train was rounding a curve. smoke from brush fires prevented the engineer from seeing the bridge was on fire until it was too late to stop.

The engine ran clear across before the bridge broke, letting the baggage and mail cars drop into the ravine. The weight of the cars dragged the engine back and down, but fortunately coupling connection with the rest of the train broke, leaving the two passenger cars standing on the brink above.

All the passengers escaped safely, but the blazing wreck communicated to the cars still on the track and all the coaches were burned.

Latest reports state that Engineer Gillett is not dead, but sustained injuries about the head.

Mark Hanna was the conductor of the train, but escaped injury.

Wife Says Husband's Business Was Beneath Her Social Station, He Pleads Cruelty.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Vada H. Myers, defendant in the suit for divorce by her husband, Renie I. Myers, filed her answer to the complaint here today. The couple, both of whom were residents of Fresno and Los Angeles, were married in Sanger, Cal., in May, 1909. The answer contains the admissions by the wife covering a period beginning during the first month of their wedded life.

"I objected to my husband starting an ice cream parlor because I occupy a high station in society, and my people are wealthy, and that business is not compatible with my station in life. I returned to my parent's home because he could not provide a home and apparel such as I have been accustomed to, and so that I can frequent the social circle to which I belonged previous to my marrying him. I prefer to live with my parents at Fresno now where I can have a happy, luxurious home."

The husband says that she left him and went to her Los Angeles home refusing to have him accompany her because "he did not have money enough to make a good showing and she would be ashamed of him."

She slammed the door in his face when he went there. His ground of action is cruelty.

ACTRESSES ATTACH CONSTABLES

Men Who Attempt to Serve Paper at Theater Are Dragged on Stage.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Katherine Hayes and Sable Johnson, two big girls doing a turn at a local theater, this week, weighing 248 and 218 pounds, respectively, had two supers in an act that was not scheduled this afternoon.

The unwilling assistants were Constable Lou Wagner and his deputy, Frank Kiernan. Armed with attachment papers, the two constables attempted to serve them on the two husky actorines just as they were going on the stage to play supers themselves in an act of another member of the company.

"We're broke," said Katherine.

"Can't help it," said the constable.

"Oh," said both girls, and each seizing a minion of the law, they went on the stage dragging the unwilling officers with them. The audience gasped, then as the identity burst upon them, the applause was terrific. As soon as they could, the constable and his deputy broke and ran.

FOREST FIRE SPREADS.

HOMES IN DANGER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SPOKANE, Aug. 21.—The forest fire near the borders of the Coeur d'Alene reserve is spreading through the fir and tamarack, and is now sweeping a path five miles wide across the thinly settled region northeast of the reservation. It is now traversing the Lake Creek country, and the homes of fifty or more settlers are endangered. Some homes are reported as already burned.

One hundred men are fighting the fire today, and are endeavoring to turn the flames toward the open country.

A destructive fire is reported near Ruby, Wash., on the Pend O'Reille River, thirty-six miles from Newport. Steamboat crews report it is spreading rapidly, and probably will burn to the river bank.

FINAL SUMMONS.

J. B. STETSON DIES SUDDENLY.

RETURNS FROM VACATION AND IS STRICKEN.

Prominent Figure in Commercial and Railroad Circles of Coast, Having Organized California Traffic Association, Which Secured Reduction of Transcontinental Freight Rates.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—J. B. Stetson, president of the California Street Railway Company, one of the two street car systems of this city not controlled or owned by the United Railroads, died at his home today, after an illness of less than a week.

Mr. Stetson returned from a vacation last Sunday, apparently in good health, but was stricken next day, and did not rally.

James B. Stetson was a prominent figure in commercial and railroad circles. He was one of the founders of the hardware firm of Holbrook, Merrill & Stetson of this city, organizer of the company, which constructed the San Joaquin Valley Railroad, and of the California Traffic Association, which combined the merchants of this section during the 90's in a concerted effort, which brought about a 75 per cent. reduction in transcontinental freight rates. The organization of the North American Navigation Company followed this movement, and a line of freight steamers operating between this port and Panama was started to combat the railroads.

Stetson was a native of Massachusetts, born in 1832. He leaves a son, Harry N. Stetson, and two daughters, Mrs. Sallie Stetson Winslow, and Mrs. Robert Oxnard, both residing in Paris.

COURT OF APPEALS.

SIX DECISIONS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 21.—The Third District Court of Appeals signalized the end of the vacation period today by handing down six decisions on appeal from Superior Courts.

The most important of these is that in which Gray Bros., the San Francisco contractors, are plaintiffs against the Los Angeles Times for the publication of an alleged libelous article on July 3, 1904. The decision of the lower court dismissing the suit for the lack of reasonable diligence in its prosecution, is sustained.

The decision of the San Francisco Superior Court awarding $7500 damages to Donald Scally for personal injuries received in the foundry of W. T. Garrett & Co., is affirmed; also the decision of the Tuolumne Superior Court in the case of the Aetna Indemnity Company against the Altadena Mining and Improvement Company, on a note for $6000; also, the decision of the San Francisco court in the case of the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific Company against Susie D. Wright and Frank V. Wright, from which the defendants appealed from a default judgment.

The decision of the Kings County Court dissolving the injunction of W. E. Dingley against W. V. Buckner, is reversed; also, the verdict of the jury in the case of T. H. Muhley, convicted of manslaughter in Madera county.

NEW THING IN AIRSHIPS.

PLACER COUNTY PRODUCT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

AUBURN, Aug. 21.—Lyman Gilmore of Colfax, Placer county, after experimenting for years with aëroplanes, has completed a working model which has made several successful flights from the summit of Cape Horn Mountain. The machine's most important features are a gyroscope that is said to keep it level at all times, and sails by which Gilmore claims it can be operated in much the same manner as a ship at sea. A large machine will be built at once and Gilmore will then make flights in it.

ON NEW BATTLEGROUND.

RUEF AND SPRECKELS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—The battle between Abe Ruef and Rudolph Spreckels was transferred to a different ground yesterday, when the two appeared as rivals in a civil suit in Judge Seawell's court in this city. The two chief actors in San Francisco's graft cases are both interested in a block occupied by an amusement company. Spreckels owns part of the land, and Ruef has an interest in the lease of the present tenants, the eviction of whom, the owners of the land are seeking to secure.

EXPLOSION STARTS PANIC.

ONE MAN INJURED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MARYSVILLE, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The explosion of gas in a boiler in the cannery of the California Fruit Canners' Association here this morning resulted in the injury of one man and the stampede of all the employés of the big plant. Fully a hundred people left the building, expecting a disaster of some sort. The injured man is the engineer, Joe Berry. He was struck in the chest with the door of the furnace, which was blown off, and also burned with flames that were shot from the furnace. The building had a narrow escape from being wrecked by the force of the explosion.

The Senate also killed the bill providing a direct primary for the nominating of candidates to fill vacancies in Congress and the Supreme Court, both of which passed the House.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—Michael Newman, a bricklayer, and three fellow workmen were hurled sixteen feet to a pile of bricks and broken rock today, when the scaffold on which they were working collapsed.

Edward Dickinson sustained a broken leg, and the other two men escaped with cuts and bruises.

When the men fell, the bricks and mortar with which they had been working came down on top of them, and it required quick work by the other employés about the building to dig them out.

HOW TO MEASURE WAVES.

Navy Hydrographic Office Gives Method of Determining Length and Places Average at Twenty Feet.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—A puzzling question to all seagoers, that of the lengthened height of ocean waves and how to measure them, is answered by the navy hydrographic office in a recent publication. Determination of the length of waves at sea may be obtained by direct comparison of the length of the observing vessel with the length from crest to crest of the waves over which she is riding, and when ships are sailing in company a good estimate of the length of the waves may be made by comparing the known length of a neighboring ship from the distance from crest to crest of the successive waves.

Another method of measuring the length of waves consists in towing a log line astern of a vessel and noting the length of the line when a buoy attached to the after end floats on the next wave crest abaft that on which the stern of the vessel momentarily floats.

Replying to an answer regarding the height of ocean waves, the hydrographic office says its measurements and estimates from mariners and observers at sea indicate that the average height of all the waves running in a gale in the open ocean is about twenty feet.

"About forty feet," it says, "is a common estimate of the height of the larger waves in a severe gale on the North Atlantic, and this estimate is really not incompatible with a recorded average of a little more than twenty feet."

ACCIDENT.

FALL IS FATAL TO SWITCHMAN.

MANGLED HE DIES ON THE OPERATING TABLE.

Sudden Jolt Causes Him to Tumble from Top of Box Car Between the Bumpers So That Wheels Run Over His Limbs—Stays Game as Death Approaches.

Peter McPherson, aged 27, a switchman in the employ of the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railway, died on the operating table at the Receiving Hospital at 11:45 o'clock last night, a couple of hours after he had been run over and shockingly mangled by a freight train near the Salt Lake depot.

McPherson was standing on top of a string of box cars, setting brakes as the cars were being shunted about the yards. A sudden and unexpected jar, threw him off his feet and he fell from the top of the car between the bumpers. The wheels passed over his right hip and hand, dragging him along until his left leg was twisted around four times, shattering the bone to splinters.

The patrol wagon made the run from police headquarters and back with the injured man in nine minutes. McPherson, sweating cold, was still conscious when he arrived at the Receiving Hospital, but the shock was so great that he did not seem to realize what had happened.

"There's something holding my leg and I wish you would get it off," he said quietly to one of the attendants. "Thank you," he said, when one of the surgeons hacked off his mangled leg—he seemed to be relieved by the temporary operation. But all who saw him knew that his life was a matter of but a few minutes.

A little later the unfortunate nodded to a Times reporter standing beside the table. "Doctor," he said, "those legs of mine are hurting quite a bit; couldn't you do something to ease off the pain?" Ether was given him as soon as possible, and the amputation of his mangled limbs was begun, but he died under the knife.

Quietly and without the least sign of emotion, McPherson said soon after his arrival at the hospital that he was 27 years of age, a native of Skyland, Neb., where he has a father and mother. He said that he was unmarried, and that he had a sister, Mrs. Sadie Cunningham, who lives in Oakland.

TESLA ON RAIN-MAKING.

Inventor Writes to Kansas Man That He Believes Problem Will Be Solved.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WICHITA (Kan.) Aug. 21.—Nikola Tesla, the inventor, in a letter received here today by George G. Matthews, a "rainmaker" of Wichita, predicts a final successful solution of the problem of the artificial production of rain.

He says: "I cannot recall that I have expressed myself on that subject before, but it is a fact that I have developed certain electrical appliances with which it will be possible to control the precipitation of moisture from the atmosphere.

"A great problem of this kind cannot be solved by one man. But a successful solution will come, the result of the coöperation of many."

Mr. Tesla asks Matthews, who is trying to produce rain by putting chemicals in the air, to report to him regarding what is accomplished.

TO CROSS OCEAN IN AIRSHIP

Across the Atlantic in an airship within the next year is not only a possibility but a probability. This is the opinion of experts after learning of the successful sailing of an airship recently in Europe. Now that the basic principle has been established, rapid developments are expected which will result in perfecting these airships. The basic principle of health is a strong stomach and it is an established fact that no man "is stronger than his stomach." Therefore, the first and most important thing for the man or woman to do who suffers from a weak stomach is to get a bottle of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and let it tone and strengthen this important organ as well as the Kidneys and the Bowels. It thus prevents Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver and Kidney Ills, Costiveness, Sick Headache, General Weakness and Malaria.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

DETROIT, Aug. 21.—A uniform state corporation law, which will prevent corporations from taking out charters in States where there are few, if any, restrictions, and then carrying on operations in a State where it would have been impossible to get the original charter, was under consideration today by the commissioners on uniform State laws, who are in session here, preliminary to the convention here next week of the American Bar Association. RECEIVER FOR BEELER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

TIPTON (Ind.) Aug. 21.—On application of the First National Bank, which has recently reopened after a shortage of $150,000 in its funds had been made good by stockholders, a receiver was appointed today for the Beeler Manufacturing Company, with factories here and at Alexandria, Ind. The liabilities of the company are $58,000. The bank is the most concerned creditor. This action is the first step in the courts toward clearing up the complications in the affairs of the bank under the management of W. H. NEGLECTFUL FATHER SPURNED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—"A father not willing to regard his children as a liability when they are powerless to help themselves, is not entitled to consider them an asset when they are enjoying the fruits of prosperity." This ruling made yesterday by Judge Williams, spoiled the prospects of John Griffin from becoming a charge on the family he is alleged to have deserted thirty-seven years ago. Griffin is 87 years old. His four children told the court of the existence of their dead mother and how she labored at the wash tub to educate and clothe them. In leaving the courtroom the son said: "I am worth at least $20,000 and am willing to make a liberal donation to any worthy person who appeals for it, but that old man will never get a cent from me. I'd go to jail first."

"O. K.'S" SON DEAD.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Cornelius Kendall, youngest son of Orrin Kendall, from whose initials, the use of the "O. K." (meaning "all right") is said to have sprung, was buried yesterday in Toledo, O., his death having taken place there Sunday. During the Civil War, Mr. Kendall was a member of the firm of O. Kendall & Sons, whose bakery was in Chicago. The firm furnished bread and crackers for the army and on the crackers were the initials "O. K." These crackers are said to have been the only ones the soldiers relished and their expression, "These are all right," later developed into "These are O. K." After the war Cornelius Kendall left Chicago and for the past thirty-eight years had been prominently identified with the milling business interests of Toledo.

MIXED POISON MADDENS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LA CROSSE (Wis.) Aug. 21.—Made mad by a combination of bee and rattlesnake poison, R. Lane, a farmer of French Creek, fought his companions for three hours until medical aid arrived. One of the men killed a rattlesnake, and donning a pair of gloves, skinned the reptile. In the afternoon Lane borrowed the gloves to wear while loading lumber. While engaged in this work, he disturbed a nest of little yellow bees which stung him on the neck and arms. In fighting them he kept rubbing the gloves on the spots where the bees had punctured his skin. The poison took effect at once and Lane became a maniac. He is recovering.

EGYPT NEXT TO AWAKEN.

Khedive Willing to Give People a Constitution.

Nationalist Party at Cairo Shows Activity.

Final Word Not Alexandria's, But London's.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The awakening of China, the "rebirth" of Japan, the unrest in India, the revolution in Turkey and the new order of things in Persia are precursors of a similar outburst of nationalist spirit in Egypt.

This is the newest possibility which the week offers in respect to the fast joining affairs of Asia and of Europe. The revivification of the land of the Pharaohs has formed itself into a concrete issue under cover of the recent sensational changes in the countries of the near East.

There is now an active nationalistic party at Cairo and Rushdy Pasha, Egyptian Minister of Justice, makes a surprising statement of the results which its efforts already have brought into sight.

"The Khedive is desirous of giving his people a constitution," he says, "although Boutros Pasha, the president of the ministerial council, has expressed the opinion that the country is not yet ripe for it. It is probable that as soon as the Khedive returns from Egypt he will grant the Egyptians a constitution."

According to the London view this is a rash prophecy, and it must always be remembered that London, rather than Alexandria, has the final word. Yet it is known that something must be done to avoid a dangerous ministerial crisis on the banks of the Nile, and there are reports through ministerial channels that the Khedive was subjected to considerable pressure by the "Young Turk" constitutionalists during his recent visit to Constantinople.

Hilmy Pasha and other influential leaders pointed out to him the necessity of granting his people the liberty acquired by European Turkey.

MARLBOROUGHS UNRECONCILED.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Father of Duchess, Denies Report, Calling It Servants' Gossip.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There is nothing to justify the [illegible] of the report that the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough are reconciled. W. K. Vanderbilt, the Duchess' father, emphatically denied the story of reconciliation and attributes its origin to servants' gossip.

But while the Duchess felt hurt that the King and Queen had ceased to receive her with the warm friendship they formerly showed to her. But she has ceased to worry about this especially as it is understood, though not admitted, of course, that both the King and Queen sympathize with her as against the Duke.

The improvements on Sunderland House are finished at last and the splendid ball-room is completed. In it are few signs that the wife of a Vanderbilt is mistress of the house. The Vanderbilt arms, portraits of the Duchess' father, grandfather and great grandfather and pictures of ships which the founder of the family owned, fill spaces on the walls.

RICH DUKE WHOSE SUDDEN DEATH STIRS ITALY.

The Duke of Laurito, victim of a poisoning plot that recalls the crimes of the Borgias.

FROM THE LAND OF ROMANCE.

ITALIAN MYSTERY RECALLS CRIMES OF THE BORGIAS.

Millionaire Duke and Wife Die Suddenly, House Found Stripped of Valuables, Monk and Beautiful Young Countess Whom He Visited Often Arrested and Found to Have Many of the Missing Articles.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NAPLES, Aug. 4.—All Italy, the land of romance, is discussing a tragic mystery which recalls in many of its details the crimes of the Borgias. Murder, intrigue and avarice are the ingredients which go to make up this choice tit-bit of gossip and the victims are an aged and wealthy duke, his wife and a maid servant. True to the canons of medieval romance the villains of the piece are a handsome monk, a beautiful countess and the duke's valet.

On one of the most beautiful hills near Naples, that of the Vomera, overlooking the bay and the surrounding country, and set about with magnificent chestnut trees nestles the Villa Lydia. Here lived for many years Duke Alfredo di Montfort d'Aquino Pico, Duke of Laurito, and his wife. They were known to all the country people as "The Lovers," so great was the affection for each other displayed by the old couple. The Montfort family is very old and aristocratic, having come to Italy during the Bourbon days in France. The autumn of 1907 was fatal to the last Duke of his line who, at sixty-six years of age, was still robust and youthful both in body and mind. With the falling of the leaves came the breaking up of his home and life. The Duchess, until then, strong and active, complained of illness one morning, and a couple of days after she was dead.

The household consisted of a maid, a valet and butler, a cook and a few unimportant servants. Just after the funeral and before any suspicion had arisen, the maid complained in the same way as her mistress, and like her died within a few hours. The Duke, however, now alone in the hands of his household, whom he trusted, saw nothing abnormal, and it was not many days before he, too—heartbroken over the death of his wife, it was given out—fell ill and died. It began to be whispered—probably the story was circulated by those interested in cheapening its value—that the delicious Villa Lydia, which seemed the home of peace and tranquility, had been "overlooked," that it was affected by the "evil eye," that it had become the home of malign spirits, and that people not of this world had been seen moving about in the house and garden. To inspire dread of this kind in the minds of the superstitious people about, was not difficult, and the Villa Lydia was studiously avoided.

FIND VILLA STRIPPED.

In due time, the heirs, who lived mostly in Paris, and the Duke's favorite niece, who had a house in Naples, and was not informed of her uncle's illness until he was too far gone to speak, ordered their lawyers to make an inventory to facilitate the partition of the estate, as they knew he kept rather large sums in cash, and stocks and bonds in the house, while the Duchess had quantities of most valuable old and modern jewelry, and the collection of pictures and objects of art represented a large sum of money. The lawyers arrived at the villa but made no inventory, for there was nothing to catalogue. The house had been stripped of all valuables and it was learned that after the death of the Duke only the valet, Salvatore Siciliani, and a monk, known as Fra Valeriano, both of whom had enjoyed the confidence of the Duke, had lived there, but the heirs who were all rich and didn't care for the publicity of an investigation, decided unanimously to let the matter drop, although it was considered more than suspicious that not one of the Duke's family had been called in time to see him alive.

Meanwhile, Naples society had received a most welcome addition in the person of the young, charming and wealthy Countess Vincenzina Ciura of Taranto, whose husband, a large land owner, visited her at short intervals. Her father had been a Senator and an author, besides fighting for the liberty of the Naples provinces, so that the Countess was received with open arms and without question. She lived in a sumptuous apartment with her two pretty little children, and received her friends frequently. The most regular of her visitors was Fra Valeriano, and soon the Countess and the monk became the subjects of gossip, as the monk was young, elegant and handsome, and the lady, also youthful and attractive.

SHADOWS MONK.

Thus the matter stood, when rumors of something wrong reached the police, and as the Chief of Police had been a friend to the Duke, he took the matter up personally, and at last, after shadowing the monk for a long time, he found that Fra Valeriano had pawned a large quantity of antique jewels, strings of pearls, diamonds and rubies. About this time the monk got wind of the police investigations, and disappeared, leaving absolutely no trace. The police were distracted until, thinking over his companions, one suddenly exclaimed: "I have it! He is said to appreciate the charms of women, and to find Countess Ciura too fascinating."

"Pshaw!" said his companion, "do you want to insinuate that a person like the Countess would stoop to a vulgar theft, if not murder? Try again!"

"Not at all," said the other. "I do not say she had anything to do with it, but the monk, if he is still in Naples, will not be able to keep away from her long. Watch her door and we have our man."

This was done, and, in fact, before many days had passed Fra Valeriano ran up the stairs, the police watchers heard him tap three times on the door instead of ringing—evidently a preconcerted signal. When he came out it was the work of a moment to clap on the handcuffs, and the bird was in the net.

That night the Countess waited in vain for her friend, but she had no suspicion of what had befallen him. She had a few friends to dinner, and when the rumors of dread things at the Villa Lydia, which were now public property, were freely discussed, she exclaimed: "It is nonsense to talk of foul play! Don't old people die every day, and don't they give away their possessions, even the most precious, and don't the heirs always raise an outcry of rage that they have been defrauded? I see nothing in it but the anger of a few rich people, who are always greedy!"

STORY OF "GIFTS."

All laughed and applauded but afterward it was considered curious that she should hint that certain things were "given" away just at the moment that the monk was saying the same thing in prison, for Fra Valeriano, put to the test, had finished by confessing that he had come into possession of much of the missing property, but insisted that it had been a spontaneous gift from the dying duke. The gay heart of the little Countess would probably have beaten considerably faster that evening could she have heard her friend saying that he had lent part of the money to Count Ciura. The net was closing about her, too, but she went to bed with no other feeling than that of disappointment that she had not seen the attractive monk.

Meanwhile it came to the ears of the valet that the monk had been arrested, so, thinking it best to come forward, he gave himself up to the police, stating that he was a victim of the churchman, as the stocks and bonds had been given to him personally by the duke, as a reward for his faithful services, and the monk had taken them from him. The police, now thoroughly on the alert, thought that a search in the Ciura houses at Naples and Taranto simultaneously, could do no harm and might be profitable, so the pretty Countess was awakened from her dreams of the fascinating monk by a knocking on her door which would have raised the dead.

"Oh, bother," she exclaimed, "now I shall look a fright all day! Really, Maria," she added fretfully to the servant, who entered, "you must teach your friend the milkman to make less noise."

COUNTESS IN CELL.

"The milkman," exclaimed the white-faced maid, "altro che milkman, it is the police!" and in spite of the protests of the lady they entered and made a thorough search of the bedroom. In both the houses were found pawnbrokers' receipts for jewels and works of art, besides pictures and other things easily recognizable as having been once the property of the duke. The Count was arrested at the Taranto station on his way to Rome, and the Countess had to bundle into her clothes and exchange the comfort of her warm apartments for the chill of a prison cell. Neither attempted to deny that certain objects were or had been in their hands, but what they most vehemently did deny was that they knew them to be stolen, insisting that Fra Valeriano had given the articles to them.

It was discovered later that the Count was in a very bad financial condition, from speculations which had gone wrong, and that the Countess was never out of funds although she never hesitated when it was a matter of spending. When the case is tried the valet and monk will be accused of theft if not of a graver crime and the Count and Countess for receiving stolen goods.

INDIAN GIRLS MAKE ESCAPE.

Four Students at Haskell Institute Caught.

Making Way to Kansas City to Get Work.

Official Believes There Is Criminal Traffic.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LAWRENCE (Kan.) Aug. 21.—Four Indian girls, students at Haskell Institute, yesterday attempted to make their escape from the institution, and were ready to board a train for Kansas City, when taken in charge by a policeman.

The girls had been promised work in Kansas City if they would come there, and their expenses were being paid by some person unknown to the authorities at Haskell.

When the girls were taken back to the school, it was learned that attempts of the girls to escape from the school have been frequent, and a number have gone to Kansas City, where efforts to locate them have proved futile.

J. O. Milligan, disciplinarian at Haskell, said today that it was the belief at the school that a regular traffic had existed for some time in the girls at Haskell.

Mr. Milligan said that investigation carried on in Kansas City had divulged the fact that Indian girls were being taken there from reservations as well as from the school here.

Superintendent H. B. Peairs has asked the Department of the Interior to send secret service officials to Lawrence to investigate the matter.

POLICE DOUBT STORY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 21.—"I know of no traffic in Indian girls here," said Frank F. Snow, Chief of Police, today. "The police know of no Indian girls in immoral houses in Kansas City. The traffic could not be very extensive in operation here or we would know about it."

The negro was captured and taken to the scene of the murder. Feeling was high against him and a rope was tied around his neck, but he stoutly declared his innocence and the people believed him. Vickery and Robinson are being held on account of alleged conflicting statements they have made.

Attacks Woman With Razor.

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 21.—Jealousy or some similar strong motive for revenge, prompted Larry Cavanaugh, a porter employed at a local hotel, to make a deadly assault with a razor upon Mrs. Elma Crandall, in a lodging-house, in this city today, and then to take his own life, after attempting to elude the police.

AMERICANS LEAVE LONDON.

Tide of Travel Sets Away from British Capital—England Has Heat Wave.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The week has marked the turning point from east to west in the tide of traffic. Next week, as indicated by the orders for rooms now pouring into the principal London hotels, the real trend of Americans going home begins.

The recent hot weather, which lasted for fourteen days, and up to last Wednesday, drew lots of people into the country, and these are now beginning to flock back and add to the stream of homeward-bound. It was not very hot for a New Yorker, or even the Chicagoan, but John Bull, senior and junior, simply broiled and consumed ice.

This question of getting ice in London is coming to a more satisfactory solution, so far as Americans are concerned, than seemed likely a year or two ago. Then ice water was a luxury, even in some of the best London hotels. Now it has become more or less a common beverage. Even the English are taking to it.

IOUS UPS AND DOWNS.

Colborn, the irrepressible Upstler, has put another crimp prospects of the "Redlands Rustler," Murrey Royar, by registering a gain of 16,100 to Royar's 1105. This places Colborn in seventh place again, with a lead of more than 10,000 over Royar.

Miss Florence Lambert returned from Covina yesterday, where she was most hospitably entertained by Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Lee, and registered a gain of 18,300, which moved her up to tenth place, at the expense of Miss Edith Tidball of Santa Ana, who failed to tally.

Miss Tidball was also given a setback by Miss Anna Bloom, who registered a gain of 15,000 points, and moved up two degrees to eleventh place, while Miss Tidball fell from tenth to twelfth.

Miss Bloom owes her 15,000 gain to her wee sister, Augusta, who personally solicited the support of that great captain of industry, Henry E. Huntington, for her sister. Mr. Huntington received the brave little girl very courteously and kindly, and instructed his treasurer to pay for fifteen yearly subscriptions to The Times and cast the votes for Miss Anna Bloom. Anna's older sister, Jennie, who won a scholarship two years ago, has been her principal helper in canvassing for subscriptions, but little Augusta, a most charming little lady, is in training to win a scholarship for herself several years hence, and surprised Anna and Jennie greatly by getting the biggest block of votes for Anna that the latter has received yet from any single source. What other contestant is there who can land fifteen yearly subscriptions in one bunch? Mr. Huntington may rest assured he will always have the admiration and gratitude of the Bloom sisters, as bright a trio of little ladies as can be found in all Los Angeles.

Miss Grace Wagner was set back one degree to thirteenth place by Anna Bloom's advance. Grace's gain for the day was only 1000. No millionaire has yet come to her assistance, but she hopes she may yet have such rare good luck as her friend, Anna.

Miss Helen Wilson rode fifty miles on horseback Friday and rounded up 7210 points, which took her ahead of Edwina Lloyd, Miss Wilson now being No. 16 and Miss Lloyd No. 17. Edwina has not had much luck during the past week.

Florence Barlow registered a gain of 3285 and advanced four numbers to twenty-ninth place. Miss Barlow is making a very determined effort to win an art scholarship, and bids fair to succeed, if she can keep up the gait she has struck during the last few days.

Albert Lesher, the "little giant" of West Thirty-eighth street, took a fall out of the "little giant" of Boyle Heights, John Keble Thursby, by registering a gain of 3075, and moving up to thirty-eighth place, which corresponds with the number of his street.

Others who made handsome gains without changing positions are: Frank Maine, 16,006; Florence Pedley, 2730; Elizabeth Glasscock, 1300; David Boardman, 3018; Teresa Camp, 1460; Kessler Bros., 1000; Fannie Swem, 1000; Florence Peterson, 1000;

The special prize winners for the week ($5 each,) are:

First division—Mary Pearl Pottol, with a gain of 61,320 points. Next in line: Dorothy Scherer, 50,539; Amos Colborn, 42,983; Alice Capron, 39,483.

Second division—Anna Bloom, 33,-275. Next in line: Elizabeth Glasscock, 27,125.

Third division—Florence Barlow, 7520. Next in line: Fannie Swem, 5080; Kessler Bros., 5005.

CONTEST PICTURE GALLERY.

On page 20, part V, of today's paper will be found a group of the forty-two leading contestants for The Times' scholarships, arranged in the order in which they stood Saturday morning. It forms an interesting page. Cut it out and keep for handy reference. They are a good-looking lot of youngsters and some of them are destined to become famous as the result of the education they will get through the help of The Times. About $5000 in cash and scholarships will be distributed among them a little over two weeks hence.

Let every subscriber of The Times help some one to win a scholarship. If you have not yet renewed your subscription in favor of some contestant, or taken out a new subscription in addition to the copy of The Times you are already getting, be sure to do so within the next two weeks, and give some worthy boy or girl the benefit of your votes.

Incidentally, it may interest the contestants to know that the grouping of their pictures and the artistic framework surrounding them, was designed and executed by Ralph McNitt, a scholarship winner in the contest of 1905, who took a course in the Los Angeles College of Fine Arts, an adjunct of the University of Southern California. Mr. McNitt owes his start in art to the instruction he received in the College of Fine Arts, under the tutorship of Dean William L. Judson, through the opportunity given him by The Times. He is now a valued member of The Times art staff. This is but one example of many in which Times scholarship winners have made good.

The contest will close on Saturday night, September 4. Only two weeks more to make a winning score.

Mary, Marie and Myrtle Boardman, three little sisters of scholarship contestant, David Boardman, who are cheering him on to success with their winsome smiles. Mary, the eldest, is at the top, Marie at the right, and Baby Myrtle at the left. They are children of Mrs. Mary Hilton Boardman. The little girls are very fond and proud of their big brother, David, who is more like a father than a brother to them, since he is the bread-winner of the family, and David is very fond and proud of his bright little sisters. At a recent meeting of the Pennsylvania Society, the two youngest little girls, Marie and Myrtle, sang "My Dear Old Pennsylvania Home," while Mary, the eldest, waved the United States and Pennsylvania flags, to an accompaniment played by their music teacher, Miss Luella McCune, principal of the Lyric School of Music. They were taught the gestures for the piece by Mrs. Laura Wilson White, and each performed her part very gracefully.

TO KEEP OPEN HOUSE.

Y.M.C.A. Will Celebrate Anniversary of Occupancy of Hope Street Building.

On September 1, the anniversary of the occupancy of its splendid building on Hope street, the Y.M.C.A. will keep open house from 10 a.m. until 10 p.m. Refreshments will be served in the morning and afternoon and in the evening various forms of entertainment will be provided. An orchestra will play on the roof garden, the glee club will sing, there will be a gymnastic exhibition and the work of every department of the association will be demonstrated.

In a year the membership of the organization has been increased from 1743 to 3385. It is hoped to increase the number to 5000 by January 1. With this end in view, every department is offering opportunities for the fall and winter. Thirty-five subjects will be taught in the educational department, in which, last year, 1000 men and boys were enrolled.

The triangle department (for young men from 16 to 21 years of age) has an enrollment of 441, and the department for boys, 524.

One of the other notable things accomplished during the year was the establishment of industrial work for the employés of the aqueduct, under the leadership of D. K. Edwards, chairman of the Aqueduct Committee. The secretary is J. E. Berry, an industrial expert, who has established headquarters at Cinco camp, in the Jawbone division, and visits from time to time the various other camps. The public has coöperated in furnishing magazines, but every week the local secretary receives requests for more magazines. The public is also asked to give phonograph records. These, if sent to the local building on Hope street, will be conveyed to the secretary in charge at the camps.

Last year, $3800 was raised for the Shanghai Young Men's Christian Association and a like amount has been pledged for this year.

FRENCH SOCIALIST LEADER OPPOSES LISTING.

M. Jaures Publishes Article in Which He Says That Attempt to Get United States Steel Shares on Paris Bourse Is Effort to Get at Savings of France.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The Humanite today published an article by M. Jaures, the Socialist leader in the Chamber of Deputies, in which the writer explains his proposal to interpellate the government regarding the proposition to quote officially in France, American speculative stocks, but notably the common stock of the United States Steel Corporation.

This interpellation will come up in October. M. Jaures charges that, under the guise of obtaining for France the minimum rates under the new American tariff, the French government contemplates permitting the listing of steel common on the Paris bourse.

This, he contends, is a result of the raid on French savings by American speculators, who long have been anxious to get access to French money.

Irrespective of the chances of heavy losses through speculative investment, which M. Jaures considered likely, he insists that the policy of allowing French money to go abroad to Russia and other foreign countries is wrong, as this money is needed in France for the development of French industries and the amelioration of social conditions.

He declared the settlement of the tariff differences between the two countries should be in accordance with the interests of the two states, irrespective of outside interests.

In regard to the above, it is semi-officially denied in Paris today that the question of listing the shares of the Steel Corporation ever has been the subject of negotiations between France and America.

RAIN SCARES AVIATORS.

Storm Sweeps Over Rheims and Holds Aeroplanists to Earth—Large Crowds Are Disappointed.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

RHEIMS (France) Aug. 21.—The first series of races between heavier than-air craft ever held will be inaugurated in this quaint old French city tomorrow. The next seven days will be known as aviation week and there will be races daily, weather permitting, between the thirty-eight airships that have entered for the various contests.

Rains fell from early morning until nightfall today, and at a late hour tonight, there were no signs of clearing weather.

The committee declared tonight, however, that the week's great show will be inaugurated tomorrow, rain or shine, and that only a strong wind can upset the programme.

The aviators spent today indoors giving their racers a final tuning up. The shed which houses the aëroplane of Glenn H. Curtiss, the American aviator, was one of the centers of attraction for the crowds. The visitors found Curtiss trying a new propeller, theoretically capable of driving his machine eighty miles an hour. Curtiss declared that he was not afraid of the sodden field and was quite ready to start tomorrow in the speed contests which follow the French elimination trials for the international cup.

Every precaution is being taken to prevent accidents in the handling of the vast crowds.

Wise Talks
By The
"Office Boy"

The employee who gets the big salary and the best job is the one who puts heart and soul, good cheer and good will into his work.

The Old Man says: "If I were working in a business I didn't own, I would do just as I am doing in a business I do own, and enthusiastically plan and work for its greatest success. That's what I did in my early days, and I own a business now just like that of my former employer's, only better." That's what all successful men are saying today, and they will be saying it always. If you have a boss give him the benefit of all the planning you can; he needs it. And, besides, it gives you practice in planing, too, and you may be able to plan some day for others who forgot to plan for themselves. The best way to get promotion is to make the firm you are working for prosperous. Napoleon once planned a whole campaign between the acts, while at the theater, so you don't have to take a day off, thinking out things during one's spare moments gives one a hundred years instead of fifty in which to do business. A big manufacturer in New York said to the Old Man one day: "Mr. Silverwood, how can you possibly exist in a city like Los Angeles, where your competitors give one-half off on their merchandise?" The Old Man smiled and said: "Those chaps out home are all good fellows. They remind me of those ticket scalpers in front of your New York theaters. A friend invited me to go the the New York Roof Garden the other night. He went up to the window, but the house was sold out, so he was informed. A couple of ticket scalpers came up and offered us dollar seats for $2.50 each, but I wouldn't let him buy them. We walked up Broadway some distance. In passing by the theater on our return one of the same scalpers recognized us and offered us the same two tickets for $1.50 each. We bought them. Still they were dollar seats."

WORK AHEAD.

EIGHT CLUBS A POSSIBILITY.

M'CREDIE'S PLAN TOO MUCH OF A WILD PIPE DREAM.

If Seattle Is Taken Into the Coast League Next Year Sacramento Must Be Dropped, If Los Angeles Is to Have Continuous Ball—New President Being Hunted.

McCredie's scheme for an eight-club Pacific Coast League next year, with four clubs in the Northwest and four in California, seems to be sleeping quietly, for nothing was heard of it in the last week. As the young man's plan is to get Cal. Ewing out of the presidency, he should not talk of an eight-club league to accomplish this, for Ewing is filling his final term of office this year, and has already offered several times to resign if some one could be found for the place.

As a matter of fact, there will be no eight clubs in the league next year, if such a plan would deprive Los Angeles of continuous ball, for that is what Manager Berry of the local team intends to give this city, or know the reason why. He says that this kind of ball has been a success in every way this year, and he proposes to have it hereafter.

As it would require four votes of Coast League directors to agree to the scheme, even if the Northwest League clubs were all in favor of the change, all Berry would need to do is to secure the vote of either Sacramento or Oakland, in addition to Vernon, in order to block McCredie's scheme, which appears to be to get Class A ball on a footing in the Northwest, and then when that is accomplished, to jump the Coasters, with Portland, and form a Northwest Class A organization.

Continuous ball would not be possible for this city with four clubs in the Northwest, and the railroad traveling expenses could not be met by such towns as Tacoma and Spokane, and the Northwest certainly could not pay Class A salaries or maintain teams to compare with the present Portland team. It is more than likely that Seattle will be taken into the Coast League next year, and if it is, Sacramento will probably be dropped; and f it is, then the outlaws could come e life again. Sacramento is not a Class A town, but is a good outlaw own, for it draws little except on Saturday and Sunday. Vernon must be etained in order to provide continuous all for Los Angeles.

Efforts are being quietly made to select a suitable man for president of the oast League, but no one has been deided upon as yet. The idea is to get ome practical business man, who unerstands the game and takes an interest in it, to head the league. This ind of a man is rare, for all such ave private interests of their own at they would not care to sacrifice r the poor honor of being at the ad of the league, which is not a very easant office.

With the selection of a suitable present for the league, the settlement of e McCredie-Dugdale unrest in the orthwest, and action in regard to the alifornia outlaws, the fans can ready see that the comnig winter meetg of the Coast League will be the ost important ever held by the ornization. Portland will not be given to the Northwest League at any ice, and Manager Berry of this city ys he will not surrender continuous all for Los Angeles without a fight at will make all kinds of fur fly.

HOUSES OF SILENCE.

Leader of Anti-Noise Society in New York Returns from Abroad With Ideas.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, who is head of the anti-noise society here, arrived from Europe yesterday. She returns with a scheme for the "houses of silence." She said on arriving:

"The first anti-noise convention, held in London, was a great success despite the fact that only four countries were represented by the three delegates present. These countries were America, England, Austria and Germany,

"Life in Germany is bliss and rapture," said Mrs. Rice. "Why, even the railroads stop blowing whistles after sundown. The engineer gives notice of danger by blowing a horn. There are societies in thirty cities, with a total membership of 1200. This society has issued a 'blue list' of hotels and apartment houses where one may have a reasonable amount of quiet. The landlords pledge themselves not to rent rooms to any one unless the person will agree to make as little noise as possible.

"Better than these, however, are the 'houses of silence,' which are springing up all over the empire. These are in every case owned by members of the society and only members may obtain accommodations in them. No noise whatever may be heard in them."

THEIR MISTAKE.

SONS OF NIPPON NIP A TARTAR.

FALLS VICTIM TO KNIFE OF MAN THEY ATTACK.

Attempt to Bounce Berry Boxes on His Head When He Takes Too Many Bunches of Carrots for Nickel, But Quickly Repent Them of Their Haste.

Waving six bunches of carrots in one hand and a long-bladed knife in the other, S. Batista attempted to cut his way out of a circle of Japanese, who were bouncing berry boxes on his head at the Los Angeles market, Ninth and San Pedro streets, yesterday morning.

When the fray was over and Batista was brought to bay, four men were sent to the Receiving Hospital to have stab wounds attended to. Batista was badly bruised and needed medical attention. He was locked in the City Jail, but may be released, as there is evidence that he acted in self-defense.

Batista bargained with the Japanese ranchers for 5 cents worth of carrots. They told him to take three bunches, and he took six. They remonstrated by throwing boxes at him. Other sons of Nippon joined in the fun. The man with the vegetables started to run, but they closed in on him.

Batista whipped out his knife and began slashing a way through the ranks.

Antonio Carlisi, a watchman, attempted to arrest him, and was cut in the right thigh. He drew a revolver, frightened the uninjured Japanese away and took Batista into custody.

The injured were loaded in an ambulance and taken to the hospital. S. Hasegawa was stabbed in the chest. The wound extended into his stomach. The surgeon performed an operation, and says his patient will get well.

S. Nagano had a wound in the abdomen, which will lay him up for some time. K. Yoneda sustained a cut above the left eye.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

PASADENA.

CHARGES HER WITH INSANITY.

MOTHER LODGES COMPLAINT AGAINST DAUGHTER.

By Ruse Latter Is Induced to Go to the County Hospital Where She Is Kept Under Care of Physicians and Nurses—Extreme Melancholia Follows Death of Husband.

Office of The Times, No. 24 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Aug. 22.—Mrs. E. B. Lee of No. 460 Bellefontaine street will appear before Superior Judge Wilbur tomorrow to answer to an insanity charge preferred against her by her mother, Mrs. Perkins.

Pasadena society is shocked by this announcement, but understands that the action is necessary to protect Mrs. Lee's property interests and guard her from an adventurer.

The case is a particularly sad affair. Two years ago Larry Lee, one of the most popular society men ever known here, died in Arizona. Larry Lee was musical, a keen wit, a good story teller, and carried merriment with him at all times. Following his death, Mrs. Lee suffered an attack of melancholia, which she has never been able to throw off, and her health has gradually broken.

The sad part of it all is, that society circles have known of these facts. Complete ostracism has been accorded the divorced adventurer, who, aware of Mrs. Lee's condition, has pursued her.

Night before last Mrs. Perkins persuaded her daughter to go for an automobile ride with her physician, Dr. C. D. Lockwood. Considerable strategy was necessary to transport the young woman to the County Hospital without arousing her suspicions. In the front seat of the automobile was a supposed friend of the chauffeur, but in reality a deputy sheriff. Near the hospital, the gasoline supposedly became exhausted, and it was necessary to run the machine into the hospital grounds for a renewal of the tank. Here the papers were served on Mrs. Lee, and it was with much difficulty that she was removed to a ward.

It may be in point to explain that while both Mrs. Perkins and Mrs. Lee are well-to-do, that the law requires all people charged with insanity to be brought before the county authorities at the County Hospital, in order that an investigation may be made. This is done to prevent waht is termed "railroading," or rushing patients through in order to dispose of their legal rights or competency to transact business.

The patient is being well cared for at the hospital, and is in charge of a physician and two nurses. It is highly probable that her mother will be appointed her guardian in case she is adjudged insane or irresponsible.

BOLT MARRIES.

Frank C. Bolt, president of the San Gabriel Valley Bank, a resident of Pasadena for twenty-five years and a prominent capitalist, stole a march on his most intimate friends by getting married in Stockton Thursday.

His bride was Miss Clara M. O'Brian of Long Beach. The wedding took place at the Central Church, Stockton, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. John S. Stevens.

The wedding was a complete surprise to his daughters, Mrs. J. W. Hugas and Miss Marjorie Bolt of Grand avenue. A letter from their father containing the information reached them yesterday noon and the tidings were at once telephoned to Mr. Bolt's intimate friends.

The popular bank president has been a widower for many years, and his unexpected marriage will cause a stir in society circles. After a month's honeymoon spent in the northern part of California, Mr. and Mrs. Bolt will return to Pasadena, where they will make their home.

ALLEGES LAW VIOLATED.

City Plumbing Inspector A. C. Shaver said to a Times reporter, for publication, yesterday, "The action of the city health department has placed the lives of pupils at the McKinley and High schools in the hands of janitors.

"While the matter of unsanitary plumbing in those schools has been taken out of my hands by the action of the Council in deciding that the plumbing should remain as long as Dr. Black O.K.'ed it, I have not changed my opinion about the matter one whit, and I believe that the law is being violated.

"Of course, that is up to the City Attorney to decide, and I have no desire to stir up this matter which caused such a rumpus a year ago."

City Health Officer Dr. Stanley P. Black day before yesterday instructed the City Council that, in his opinion, the plumbing was all right in the two schools in question, provided that the stack burner was kept going all the time.

When the controversy over the conditions at these same schools was up a year ago, Dr. Black stated very emphatically that the only way the schools could be made sanitary would be by "tearing out all of the plumbing and putting in new plumbing." He said that he had been in the basement of the High School when the conditions were offensive and unsanitary, and that janitors could not be relied upon to keep the burner lighted.

The matter of renovating the plumbing has been indefinitely postponed by the City Council for the reason that the Board of Education held that it could not afford the $2000 necessary for the work. The same question was haggled over last year until it became too late to make the improvement without interfering with the opening of the schools.

NO MORE DRY TRACT.

Residents of the northwest section of North Pasadena are jubilant over action taken by the North Pasadena Land and Water Company, whereby the dry tract is no more.

At a meeting of the board of directors, it was decided to increase the number of connections in the tract for the present, and to call a meeting of the stockholders for the purpose of considering an amendment to the by-laws. The company has been a mutual concern, and under its present by-laws was not authorized to sell water outside of what was formerly known as the Ball & Painter Tract.

The proposed amendment will provide that water may be sold to outlying consumers, and for the sale of about 300 shares of water stock to residents of the dry tract. The committee appointed to formulate the amendment is composed of Directors Mason, Stone and Toolen.

CONCERNING SCALE.

A. G. Smith, horticultural inspector, representing the Los Angeles county horticultural department, states that the fumigation of the trees here has been held up by the summer weather, but is to be taken up again soon. Three crews are to be put in the field, and will work south from Altadena.

Smith says it is optional with the property owner whether he will pay for the fumigation of a tree or cut it out, and that many are resorting to the latter measure to avoid the expense. It is hoped that by the thoroughness of the work to be done this fall and with a little coöperation on the part of the public, that fumigation will not be necessary again for some time.

"We have had considerable trouble with deadly nightshade about Altadena," said Smith, "and people should uproot it whenever it asserts itself, as it is a bad breeder of scale."

NINETY-NINE LIGHT CAKE.

Birthday Candles Seen by Seventy-five Descendants of Still Young Lady.

WHITTIER, Aug. 21.—Ninety-nine candles, indicating the age of a charming Quaker, Mrs. Lydia Sharpless, blazed on the birthday cake which graced the center of a large table set in the dining-room of the Friends Church today. Seventy-five of her descendants were present to offer congratulations to the lady, who clings to the dress, manner and speech of the Friends of other days, but keeps informed as to events and movements of the present. She was born in Middletown, O., but has lived in this city for many years.

MARENGO AVENUE DRAIN.

Will Cost South Pasadena Twenty-seven Thousand Dollars—Sewer System Projected.

SOUTH PASADENA, Aug. 21.—The first definite steps toward the building of the Marengo-avenue storm drain have been taken. Trustee Booth reported at the meeting of the board that the firm of Olmstead & Gillelen had been employed to pass upon the plans prepared by City Engineer Dupuy and to offer expert opinion as to the proper disposition of the storm waters. The drain will serve an area of practically 500 acres and will cost about $27,000.

The Trustees have also ordered plans prepared for a sewer system.

WILL HEAR "LARK ELLEN."

Mrs. Goldthwaite to Be Heard for Charity at Her Country Home at Covina.

COVINA, Aug. 21.—The residents of Covina and vicinity will again have a nopportunity to hearing Mrs. Goldthwaite (Ellen Beach Yaw,) who has recently returned from Europe. She will dedicate her talents and a great deal of work and energy to the cause of charity.

The object is the Children's Day Nursery of the Daughters of the King, Los Angeles, where helpless children are cared for while their widowed mothers are earning a livelihood. This charity was dear to the heart of Mrs. Goldthwaite's brother, the late Charles Yaw, and is an offering to his memory.

This moonlight fete will be held on the evening of the 30th inst. in the grounds surrounding the home of the singer, "Lark Ellen," and seats will be provided for over 500. The veranda for the occasion will be converted into a rostrum, and the programme will consist of vocal solos by Mrs. Goldthwaite, who will be assisted by Mrs. T. Newman of Los Angeles, on the piano, and violin solos by Prof. Robert Philleo.

Scores of ladies are interesting themselves with Mrs. Goldthwaite in this cause.

CAUSES NO FLURRY.

Prospective Visit of the Board of Managers Makes No Apparent Stir at Soldiers' Home.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Aug. 21.—The board of managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, now on its annual tour of inspection of the various branches of the Home, is scheduled to arrive at this branch on September 6. None of that extra activity which ordinarily preceeds visits of this nature is observable. This, one of the inspecting officers of the Home explained, is because affairs in the Home nowadays are continuously in such excellent condition that a flurry of preparation for inspection is not necessary.

A contract was let to a Los Angeles firm on Thursday for raising walls of the service reservoir at the powerhouse and for placing a roof over the same.

LONG BEACH.

CRUEL TO HER, DECLARES WIFE.

REAL ESTATE MAN DEFENDANT IN DIVORCE SUIT.

Court Issues Order Prohibiting Him from Touching Plaintiff's Property—Tax Rate Fixed at Ninety Cents—Thousands of Former Nebraskans at Picnic.

LONG BEACH, Aug. 21.—Mrs. Anna E. Holman filed a suit for divorce yesterday in the Superior Court against Guy W. Holman. Judge Wilbur issued an order to prevent the husband from touching any of his wife's property. Holman is a real estate man of this city and Los Angeles.

Mrs. Holman alleges that she was married in Anaheim in April, 1907, and ever since has been treated in a cruel and inhuman manner. June 19 last, she states, her husband beat her, and since then he has appropriated $3500 of her money. She charges that he has called her "crazy" and a "dope fiend."

In seeking the order to prevent Holman from disposing of her property, the wife said her husband has duplicate keys to deposit boxes in the All Day and Night Bank and the Commercial Bank of Los Angeles, in which there are said to be, besides deeds and other valuable documents, diamonds and jewelry worth $4000.

Holman, who was served with the papers in the suit this morning, denies the charges. He says his wife has been in very poor health, and that until recently he has taken care of her. He alleges he can prove she uses drugs.

Mrs. Holman is a member of a wealthy family, and, it is said, has an income of $7000 a year. She has a brother, O. S. Hershman, in Pittsburgh, whose income is stated to be $1000 a day.

TAX RATE NINETY CENTS.

City Auditor Hatch today announced that the tax rate for the city for the fiscal year would be 70 cents for general purposes, 8.5 cents for the library fund and 11.5 cents for redemption purposes. The budget for the year is $235,722.96. It is the intention of the Council to divide the money into equal parts, reserving half for the administration which assumes charge January 1.

NEBRASKANS PICNIC.

About 2000 former Nebraskans attended a picnic here today. Every one wore a badge bearing the name of the State, and another showing the county in which the wearer had resided. A business session followed an address of welcome by Mayor Windham and short speeches by M. M. Davison, Judge W. H. Morris, R. W. Richardson and S. M. Smyser. For the ninth consecutive term Judge Morris was elected president and M. M. Davison, secretary and treasurer.

The Board of Education, today, appointed Miss Eleanor Thayer of Chicago, teacher of Latin in the High School, to succeed Miss Florence Kimball, who has been given a year's leave of absence on account of ill health.

Homer Heap and Willie Davies, two boys, were arrested, today, charged with breaking into a boat-house on the river and doing $200 worth of damage to a launch. They have been in trouble before and will be certified to the Juvenile Court.

A. L. Thomas was arrested at Riverside, yesterday, on a Long Beach warrant charging him with having issued a worthless check. Investigation seemed to show that the young man had signed the check in good faith and that the Riverside bank sent it back under a misunderstanding. The amount has been made good and the District Attorney will be asked to dismiss the complaint

WOMAN SEVERELY BURNED.

Mrs. Frank Thomas, who lives at the corner of Tenth street and Obispo avenue, was severely burned on the face, head and arms, today, when a gasoline stove exploded.

Today's session of the Christian Assembly was devoted to the reports of educational institutions. During the year $25,000 was added to the endowment fund of the Bible school at Berkeley. The assembly closes tomorrow.

Mrs. Elizabeth Carr died, last night, at her home on East Second street. She was a native of Massachusetts and 69 years of age. She had resided in Long Beach for four years. She leaves one daughter.

JAPS CELEBRATE.

Exercises of Various Kinds Are Seen by Throngs at Venice—Death of Ernest Searelle.

VENICE, Aug. 21.—Japanese were good Americans and Americans were good Japanese at this beach today. Several thousand of the brothers and sisters of the brown men came to the seaside this afternoon to enjoy the programme that had been prepared in honor of the second annual celebration of Japan day. Side by side the flags of the two nations fluttered in the breeze as in unison the people of the two races raised their voices in shouts of approval when some feature of the performance was recognized as particularly meritorious.

Trolley trains bore heavy loads from the city throughout the afternoon, although the beach was already lively when the discharge of the daylight fireworks was commenced. This was followed by fencing, wrestling, dancing and other athletic sports, in which the contestants were all sons of the Mikado. The evening attraction consisted of a lantern parade, followed by an attractive exhibit of fireworks. Music added to the pleasure of both afternoon and evening entertainments.

ERNEST SEARELLE DIES.

Ernest Searelle died this afternoon at his temporary home on the beach, where he had been a sufferer a number of weeks. Diabetes was his ailment. He was closely connected with the early stages of the development of Venice, having taken an active part in the management of the auditorium during the year in which the assembly was held. He was 43 years of age, and unmarried. He leaves one sister. His late brother, Luscomb Searelle, was joint author with Ella Wheeler Wilcox of the poetical drama, "Mizpah." Contracts for the production of this are held by Charles Frohman, Oliver Morosco and Chester Arthur. These contracts were left to Ernest Searelle by his brother, and the last months of his life were made happy in anticipation of the expected royalties.

BAD BLOOD LETS BLOOD.

Family Feud in Santa Monica Results in Display of Gore and Call on Surgeon.

SANTA MONICA, Aug. 21.—The Robison family feud broke out in a new place tonight. The development in this case came in the form of a personal encounter, after which C. W. Robison was borne to a surgeon's office for repairs, and J. W. Robison was removed to the City Jail. The fight occurred in the harness shop of Robison & Robison, whose ownership is now the subject of inquiry by the Superior Court. The Robisons who engaged in the fight are brothers. Although much blood was spilled, nobody was seriously injured.

HURT BY FALL.

Luther A. Briggs of this city is suffering in a Los Angeles hospital as the result of a fall sustained by him yesterday. He was working in Los Angeles when he fell from the roof of a building to the sidewalk, a distance of sixteen feet. Collar, shoulder and hip bones were broken. He will be an invalid for many weeks.

The new pier will be thrown open to visitors tomorrow, but it will be closed during the week. Having a length of 1600 feet, the structure has much to attract the pleasure fishing people. The work is finished on it, excepting the installation of the lamps and some of the ornamental features.

Every tent house in Rustic Cañon's shady summer resort is occupied, the visitors coming from all parts of Southern California, Arizona and Nevada. For Admission and Mexican days appropriate programmes of entertainment are being arranged.

TRACES TYPHOID TO LATERALS.

MONROVIA PHYSICIAN FINDS DISEASE IN DEAD ENDS.

Unused Parts of Water Pipes, According to the Results of Tests, Are a Source of Danger to the Public Health—Care Exercised to Secure Proper Circulation.

MONROVIA, Aug. 21.—As a result of an investigation and the analysis of drinking water used in each house in the neighborhood, Dr. Bertram C. Davies has apparently located the origin of typhoid cases which have baffled explanation for two years.

Two children in the same block have died of typhoid within the two years and one is now slowly convalescing from the same disease in a malignant form. They were all playmates and it seems to be settled that in each instance the disease was contracted by the children drinking stagnant water from an unused lateral.

The pipe joined the main supplying the neighborhood but the hydrant attached to it was seldom used. All other samples of water were pure, according to the tests. These have been the only cases of typhoid in the city in several years. Efforts to discover the source of the fever germs in the first case proved futile and it was believed that infection must have come from some outside source. The second case in the same block was as unexplainable as the first.

Hundreds were supplied with water from the same main, which comes direct from the mountains and analysis showed the water beyond suspicion. The district is one of the best in the city, all houses being new and modern sanitation prevailing. At the instance of Dr. Davies the health board has today issued a circular warning residents of the danger in dead pipe lines and insisting as protection to public health that all distributing laterals be regularly flushed.

In the rehabilitation of the municipal system great care was exercised in eliminating all pipe lines having imperfect circulation but water department officials cannot control the distributing systems on private property.

FUMIGATORS TO BEGIN.

Four fumigation outfits will begin the season campaign in the Duarte-Monrovia district Monday. Work will be supervised by Inspector C. B. Blain. This year the war against scale foes will extend over 1000 acres and will cost fruit growers about $40,000. The acreage now listed for fumigation and which may be considerably increased consists of 100 acres of twenty-five-year-old seedlings at $110 per acre and 900 acres of navels and Valencias at $30 per acre. About half the district will be covered between now and the end of the year.

DIES OF APPENDICITIS.

The death of Arthur W. Handyside, a prominent Englishman of this section, occurred today at the Good Samaritan Hospital in Los Angeles as a result of an operation for appendicitis.

Coronado is pronounced "ideal."

SAWTELLE.

SAWTELLE, Aug. 21.—The City Trustees individually resent the manner in which County Supervisor Nellis's name has been linked in connection with the refusal of the city to grant the Sheldon grocery license. Trustees Farley and Fairbanks say that to their personal knowledge Nellis had nothing whatever to do with the refusal, and they doubt very much if he knew anything about it at the time. They say they declined to issue a license to Sheldon for the reason that he had no store in the city and because the Trustees had no jurisdiction over his store at Westgate, which is outside the city limits. Without criticising the ruling of the court, they say they are surprised that the order should have been made for the issuance of the license. There are five grocery stores in Sawtelle aside from the one owned by Nellis, and the Trustees say it is an injustice to blame the Supervisor for something with which he had nothing to do.

Schools and Colleges

They Do It Bettter

That is the secret, and young people who expect to enter the best business college in the city should seriously consider this point. Heald's College does it better. It is true that rival schools have graduated young people who are doing fairly well, but they might be doing better. If they had received the high-grade instruction given at Heald's they surely would be doing much better. If they had the influence of Heald's Colleges to assist them in receiving deserving promotions, they would be doing much better.

There's A Reason

Heald's Business Colleges are located in the principal cities of California and Nevada. In each of these cities the most influential college is Heald's. They set the standard of business education on this Coast. Why is this true? Because they do it better than their competitors. They strive not to equal—they surpass. Their teachers, courses and methods are superior. Their graduates do it better. They have better positions, better salaries, and are better satisfied. Get the best—the cost is the same.

addition to the population of the county. There is also a plan on foot to place an Italian colony on the ranch.

APRICOTS MOVE.

Warehouse reports show that dried apricots are moving out rapidly, and prices are good. Standard fruit sells from 7 to 7¼ cents a pound, and fancy lots have brought as high as 7¾ cents. The total crop of the county will be close to 2000 tons, on a conservative estimate.

THOUSANDS SEE RESCUE IN BAY.

OCCIDENTAL COLLEGE MAN SHOWS AS HERO.

One of Party of Three Out in Boat Begins Rocking the Craft With the Usual Result—Two of the Trio Thrown Into the Water Unable to Swim.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Kenneth Kellogg, swimming expert of Occidental College, today played a prominent part in a thrilling rescue of three men, who upset a boat in Glorietta Bay, Coronado, and a woman, who became exhausted in attempting to lend assistance to the men.

By swimming from shore in record time and with the aid of two companions, who swam with him, Kellogg righted the upturned boat and swam back to shore with the half-drowned woman.

A. L. Yago, John Flores and Otto Nelson were in the boat when one of the trio began rocking it. They were thrown into the water. When it upset Mrs. H. Clifford Loos and her brother, Charles Kohler, who were swimming in the bay, went to the assistance of the struggling trio. Yago and Flores could not swim and the woman was unable to handle either of them.

While she and Kohler were struggling to assist the others, Nelson swam ashore. Kenneth Kellogg, Howard and Charles Lattimer and Ed Eliot, who were on shore, went to the rescue of the others.

These, being rapid swimmers, reached the scene of the spill, which was some distance from shore, in time to prevent all from going down the third time. The rescuing party was in the water for nearly half an hour. Thousands of spectators at Tent City witnessed the rescue.

HUNDREDS OF CARS SHIPPED OUT OF EL CENTRO.

Total for Last Month Nearly Three Times Greater Than That of Year Before—Postoffice in New Home. Carnegie Library Plans Complete. Valley Briefs.

EL CENTRO, Aug. 20.—During the month of July, El Centro shipped two cars of honey, 208 cars of cantaloupes, five cars of watermelons, forty-three cars of hay, twenty-six cars of live stock, six cars of brick, two cars of shook and twenty-five cars of ice, making a total of 317 full carload lots. One hundred and eighteen cars were shipped from this station a year ago.

POSTOFFICE MOVES.

El Centro's postoffice has been moved to the west room in the Thomas Beach block, at the northwest corner of Sixth and Main streets, and an entirely new equipment put in. Postmaster Miller has expended about $1200 in the new outfit, which includes 236 combination lock boxes.

NEW BANK BUILDING.

F. B. Fuller, president of the El Centro National Bank, is having plans prepared for the erection of a two-story brick or concrete-block building at the northeast corner of Fifth and Main streets as a permanent home for the bank. The second story will be arranged for suites of offices.

CARNEGIE LIBRARY SOON.

Plans have been completed for the proposed Carnegie public library, to be erected on two lots on the south side of State street, near Fifth street. These plans, which have been approved by the library board, will be submitted to the Trustees at their next meeting, and then will be forwarded to the Carnegie Library Commission for final approval or suggestions for changes. It is expected work on this building will be started in October.

PORT OF ENTRY.

Campo, Imperial Valley's nearest neighbor in San Diego county, has been made a port of entry by the Department of Agriculture, in order to assist Dr. W. R. Selleck, live stock inspector of San Diego county. Trouble has been caused by the importation of cattle infected with the tick which produces Texas fever.

VALLEY BRIEFS.

Imperial County Superior Court was reconvened after the summer vacation today, Judge Franklin J. Cole having returned from Los Angeles.

The El Centro Presbyterian Church has been granted permission to mortgage its property to the Presbyterian Board of Church Extension.

C. K. Clarke has been elected superintendent of water company No. 1 and proposes radical changes in the management of the principal water company of Imperial Valley.

Carload of Apricot Kernels Shipped to Germany from Colton for Making Almond Oil.

COLTON, Aug. 21.—A carload of apricot kernels was shipped to Germany this week by the Gregory Fruit Company, to be used in the manufacture of "almond oil." This is the first shipment of many carloads to be sent. They were first taken to Los Angeles, where the shells were removed and were then treated to a chemical process to keep them until they reach their destination.

BELDING FAILS TO GIVE BOND.

ALLEGED BAD CHECK MAN IS STILL IN JAIL.

San Diego County Prisoner Is a Son of a Government Official Connected With the Postoffice Department in Washington—Prisoner Retains Former District Attorney.

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 21.—W. T. Belding, the alleged fake "diamond king," was placed under $3000 bonds to appear in Justice Court September 7, to answer to a felony charge of uttering a fictitious check. The complaint was sworn to by William Cross, the merchant who indorsed a draft for $500. There are four other charges against Belding.

It develops that Belding is the son of a prominent government official connected with the Postoffice Department at Washington. He came West on a pleasure tour several months ago. High living depleted his funds, and, it is charged, that he gave drafts right and left, expecting his father to honor them. However, it appears that the money to meet obligations to the banks was not promptly forthcoming and the law soon enveloped the pseudo "diamond king."

Belding is in jail in default of bond. He has employed former Dist.-Atty. Kirby to defend him. The attorney is in correspondence with the young man's father, who will probably send financial aid as soon as he learns the circumstances of the case.

WILL BUILD THEATER.

Negotiations conducted quietly for several weeks result in the announcement of the construction of an elegant theater at the southeast corner of Fifth and C streets by the William Morris syndicate of New York. The house is to have a seating capacity of 1500. Work is to begin immediately. The line of attractions will be of those to be presented in other Pacific Coast cities in houses recently acquired by the Morris corporation.

TORPEDO BOATS ARRIVE.

The Farragut, Goldsborough, Davis and Lawrence of the United States torpedo-boat flotilla, reached the San Diego Harbor at noon today. The boats left Mare Island several days ago. They will remain here for some time. They sailed from Avalon at 1:15 o'clock this morning.

PLIGHT THEIR TROTH.

Crawford Harding of Santa Paula and Esther Elvera Young of Fillmore were married here last night by Rev. W. E. Crabtree. The couple came here alone on the afternoon train and left again on the Owl last night. An elopement is suspected, but neither of the participants in the marriage would admit it.

AH SIN CHANGES MIND.

After Ah Sin had offered to pay his fine for conducting a lottery game and had deposited the money with the desk sergeant, the Celestial changed his mind, at the suggestion of his attorney, who succeeded in securing a temporary writ of release under habeas corpus. Ah Sin was allowed to give bail until September 7, when the merits of the lottery ordinance are to be argued before the District Court of Appeal.

ESCONDIDO.

ESCONDIDO, Aug. 21.—Winery men hereabouts are wondering if the recently-adopted county ordinance governing the manufacture and sale of wine will prevent them from crushing the product of the smaller vineyards, either on the percentage basis or an agreed price per gallon. The District Attorney of San Diego county has declined to give them an opinion as to whether it would be legal for them to lease the vineyards in question.

ELSINORE.

ELSINORE, Aug. 21.—Mr. and Mrs. Peter Wall left Friday for Bodgea, Cal., where their daughter, Dr. Florence Cheney, resides. Mrs. Wall, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, was taken away on a stretcher. She was accompanied by her husband, her daughter, Dr. Cheney, a son and Mrs. Elizabeth Sitton. Mr. and Mrs. Wall have resided in Elsinore for about twenty-five years, and have recently sold their Warm Spring Valley acreage, together with a valuable hot sulphur well, to a Washington company, which expects to develop it. They also have sold their home place in Elsinore to W. E. Hampton of San Francisco, who owns Hampton's addition to Elsinore.

BEER GLASS HIS WEAPON.

Man Who Shot Holes in Pictures of Kings Strikes Saloonkeeper.

Three weeks ago, Porfirio Dores shot Slavonian kings, or, rather, their pictures. Last night, he struck Mike Dudincich in the face with a beer glass. Mike, at the Police Station, was undecided as to which hurt him the more—the shooting of his pictured kings or the laying open of his countenance with the beer glass.

When, three weeks ago, Dores entered a saloon conducted by a loyal Slavonian and asked for information concerning the celebrities whose portraits were displayed behind the bar, he was informed that they were "all kings of my country." The explanation was unsatisfactory, apparently, for the visitor immediately produced a gun and made holes in the paintings.

Last night, the 'slayer of kings' appeared at the saloon conducted by Dudincich. No sooner had be called for wine than he was recognized as the man who had spoiled the works of art.

"You killa sixa da kings!" roared the proprietor.

Then it was that Dores used the beer glass, inflicting an ugly wound. He tried to escape, but was seized and held until policemen arrived.

JOY RIDERS CHECKMATED.

A Brooklyn man has produced what he calls the only practical solution of the joy-ride problem. His device is simply a strip of very heavy manila paper, which is fastened to the rear tire and rim by means of a corrugated wire which perforates it in four places, a lead seal on the end of the wire being sealed by a small nickel-plated hand press. The paper and wire about the tire and rim of the rear wheels, although strong enough to withstand all the moving and dampness incident to washing and cleaning in a garage, will not stand the friction of a ride of more than two blocks without going to pieces.

DEATH LURKS AS AUTO TURNS.

NARROW MISS FOR TWO MEN IN SAN BERNARDINO.

Machine Carrying Superintendent of County Hospital Is in Collision With Colton Car of the San Bernardino Valley Traction Line—Occupants of Former Vehicle Thrown.

SAN BERNARDINO, Aug. 21.—Judge Henry Goodcell and Dr. D. C. Strong, superintendent of the County Hospital, had a narrow miss from being severely injured or killed in a collision this morning. They were riding in an automobile which struck a Colton car of the San Bernardino Valley Traction Company. The accident occurred at the intersection of Third and I streets.

The automobile was running on I street at a lively clip. The view on Third street was obstructed by an earth embankment, where street excavations are under way. The automobile occupants tried to turn into Third street, discovering the approaching car when it was too late to escape, and the two vehicles came together with a fearful impact.

Both autoists were tossed out and the machine reduced to a mass of broken wood and tangled metal, but no one was seriously injured.

KOREAN COLONY PROSPECT.

A movement is on foot to colonize Riche Cañon, sometimes spelled Reche, with Koreans. Representatives of a Korean syndicate have been looking over the ground during the past several days. It is stated that there are some 10,000 acres that can be obtained. The tract, if taken, will be subdivided into ten and twenty-acre ranches. The colonists believe that the farms can be made very productive and make the owners independent. It is explained that the colonists do not propose to compete with white hein in this valley. The cañon is located among the Riverside hills, in the southeast section of this valley.

SUIT MUST BE FOUGHT.

The suit brought against the city of Colton by the Redlands Home Gas and Lighting Company, for $50,000, must be fought out. This morning the Superior Court overruled the defendant's demurrer to the amended complaint. The suit is based upon the action of the Colton City Trustees in rescinding a contract awarded to the lighting company for furnishing the municipality with electrical energy for light and power purposes, and awarding the contract to the Edison Electric Company.

CAMP TROUBLES QUIETED.

The troubles which have stirred the Hart mining camp, have been adjusted by the forced resignation of Constable M. P. Brown, on the ground that at the time of his appointment he was a resident of Searchlight. The charge of shooting pigeons, preferred against an attaché of the Hart Enterprise, was dismissed, as the accused is a minor, and his offense could only be tried by the juvenile court.

CONTRACTOR ARRESTED.

E. R. Werdin, a Los Angeles contractor, who has several of the large street improvement contracts here, was arrested today on complaint of a Mexican laborer, charged with battery. His examination will be held at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning. It is charged that Werdin refused to pay the laborer, who insisted, and fists were used.

CHARGED WITH THEFT.

L. W. Brown, a negro, was taken into custody this morning, charged with the theft of $50 belonging to Mrs. Pullum, a negress, at whose home he has been boarding. The charge is made that after stealing the money the accused spent all but $29.75 for clothes, and was as gaudy as a peacock when arrested. He will be arraigned Monday afternoon.

FLORAL PARADE.

The Automobile Club of Washington has promised hearty support to the floral parade, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, September 30, and it will coöperate with that organization in making it one of the greatest events in automobile circles ever held in that city.

From a Motorman.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 21.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Replying to the remarks made by "Chase" in these columns a few mornings ago regarding the "clang, bang, ding, dong, crash," etc., made by the trolley gongs, I want to say that if people would only use a little common sense in crossing streets the ringing of gongs would be unnecessary. But instead of doing so they rush pell-mell hither and thither in front of approaching cars, behind receding ones and between them if two cars happen along at the same time. Now, if the motorman should start his car without first sounding a warning and should strike a vehicle of any kind or injure a person, he would be blamed and one of the first things said, would be, "I didn't know the car was coming; the motorman did not ring his bell." So let us not censure the motorman. He is only doing his duty and trying to protect the public. Let us not forget how welcome is the sound of the trolley gong when we are wearied with the day's labor and want to get home.

"How I Stained My Hair Brown"

Society Woman Wants to Tell Readers How She Stained Her Faded Hair Without Using Hair Dye.

"I think the readers of your paper ought to get the benefit of my experience," said a well-known society woman in an interview. "It is in regard to staining hair. I am now going on to forty years of age, and some months ago my hair was nearly all gray, faded, and falling out, and I used to bleach my hair besides. I tried various hair-dyes, but I found, as nearly every other woman has found, that by using these dyes you can't conceal the fact that you have dyed your hair. And besides, my hair began to fall out worse than before, because of the poisons in the hair-dyes. And then I had to use the dye almost every week or ten days so as to turn the color of the hair near the roots.

"Finally I decided to try walnut-tint hair-stain. Well, you see what a beautiful rich brown my hair has now, and you'd never think I stained my hair at all. It has grown out remarkably fluffy since I have used it. I apply it with a comb in a few moments only once a month. It stains nothing but the hair, never harms it in the least, and makes it grow out luxuriantly. It stains the hair evenly from tip to root, so that experts cannot tell that you have stained your hair.

"Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Tint Hair Stain is what I used. She is the only one who manufactures it. If you want to try it first, you write her for a sample package of her Walnut-Tint Hair Stain, and enclose twenty-five cents in stamps or coin to help pay postage and packing, and you will get it by return mail in plain, sealed wrapper. Address her, Mrs. Potter's Hygienic Supply Co., 890 Groton Building, Cincinnati, Ohio. She will also send you free her very interesting book on hair."

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Tint Hair Stain has the advantage over hair dyes of containing no copper, sulphur, lead or other poisons which cause hair-falling, and has no oil, no sediment, and no grease. It is for gray, faded or bleached hair. Any shade can be obtained from a beautiful rich brown to almost black. It does not rub off on the clothing. One bottle should ordinarily last a year.

It is sold at drug-stores generally at one dollar a package. Send for the 25-cent trial package today.

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Tint Hair Stain is recommended and for sale in Los Angeles by The Owl Drug Co., 320 S. Spring St., 625 So. Broadway, and Fifth and Broadway.

BREVITIES.

To "Liner" Advertisers: Dating from June 1st, classified advertising in the Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1¼c Sunday. Close calculations covering a period of several months develop the fact that the average number of words to the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1st. Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling. The present "want" ad rate has been in effect, for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more that 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad service. The Times-Mirror Company.

President Louis Hill of the Great Northern Railway Company was compelled to spend a night this week in a hay stack. He started from Helena, Mont., to Great Falls in his automobile. Near Fort Shaw the machine stuck in a mud hole. He applied to a settler for a bed and supper, but was told that he could find a bed in a nearby hay stack, and that he could help himself to refreshment at the pump. When he did not appear here in a reasonable time, a searching party found the automobile in the mudhole and Mr. Hill and his chauffeur sound asleep in the hay stack.

Tuberculosis

"I am convinced that in Mercury we have a specific for tuberculosis." (U. S. Naval Medical Bulletin, Washington, Government Printing Office, 1908.) This statement, which could hardly be made stronger, is occasioned by the almost incredible results obtained at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Las Animas, Colo., where a careful and scientific investigation of the treatment of Tuberculosis by Imidosuccinate of mercury is being conducted. The improvement in many cases is almost startling: In one, death was expected in a few days, but after less than six weeks' treatment the patient had gained 28 lbs. The report adds: "This transformation from a dying condition to one of such marked improvement in so short a period is most gratifying." The latest bulletin (April, 1909,) states that of the 53 patients under this treatment 89.16 per cent. have improved, several discharged cured. "The results obtained by this method of treating tuberculosis have been exceedingly gratifying, both to the patients and to the staff of this hospital." (1908 report.) As but few of the general public have, as yet, even heard of this treatment, and realizing its great importance, it has been decided to open a department at the Los Angeles Dispensary, 214-215 Columbia Trust Building, 313 West Third street, where a physician will be in attendance from 2 to 4 daily (except Sundays) to explain the method to any one interested (no fee charged,) and treat those suitable cases who may desire it.

ade Easy and Safe

A recent advertisement under this heading appeared in the Philadelphia newspapers for the great Wanamaker store. It excited such favorable comment in musical circles that it was later reproduced by "The Musical Age"—and, assuredly, it does "ring true." We print it here today because this advertisement might well have been written for the Birkel Company — it so perfectly voices the policy of this establishment. Just now it is most timely—read every word—it means much to Piano Buyers.

SAFE PIANOS

are many persons to whom the question of buying a piano is a because of the uncertainty of price, quality and methods surround the piano business. In some instances ex claims of superiority are made for a piano with little merit them, so that a high price might be asked. In others, are asked that the dealer never expects to receive, but they so that he can make reductions of from fifty to a hundred dollars, according to the necessities of the particular buyer he is trying to sell. Thus, in every instance, where a sale by these methods, the dealer tries to induce the cus to feel he has bought that particular style of piano at a less than it has ever been sold for before; but, as a matter of fact, style of piano may be sold the same day to another cus at a still more reduced price because he demands more for than the first buyer.

SEE WHAT'S COMING.

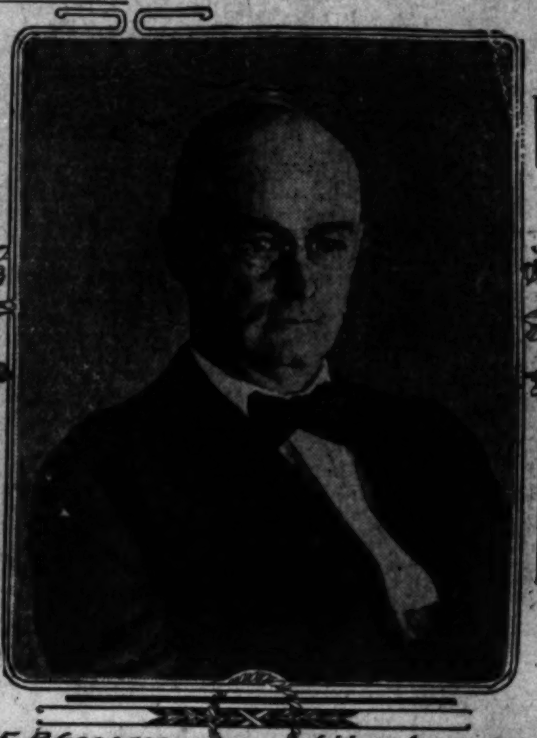
FUTURE COMMERCE OF OUR HARBOR, WHENCE TRADE WILL COME AND HOW.

Live, Fresh and Expert Views on Traffic and Steamship Problems—Railroad Rates to Interior Must Come Down. San Diego and San Francisco Now Doing Los Angeles Business.

IT IS one thing to take a patch of ocean and a stone quarry and make a harbor. It is quite another matter to fill that harbor with ships and commerce.

San Pedro is the canvas for a picture. It is for the business men of Los Angeles to paint in the commerce.

There is a sort of commercial life which is a mere gritty struggle for profits. But there is another sort of business which calls for the highest type of imagination and creative ability. Of such is the problem of creating a commerce for San Pedro.



F. P. Gregson, Jobbers Association

The Los Angeles business men who are building for San Pedro's future are to be seen in prosaic offices poring over dull traffic schedules; but before them is the picture of a great harbor, teeming with ships whose sides are incrusted with the barnacles and the rime of distant seas, strange flags at their peaks, wallowing under the weight of great cargoes. To their ears, the clack of the typewriter and the adding machine is the forecasted echo of the creak and rattle of innumerable hoisting blocks and the noise of the desk telephone becomes the shrill of the bosun's whistle.

Such staid commercial organizations as the Associated Jobbers and the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association have been attracted by the lure of this fascinating dream. Their committees are, even now, hard at work on plans that reach years into the future.

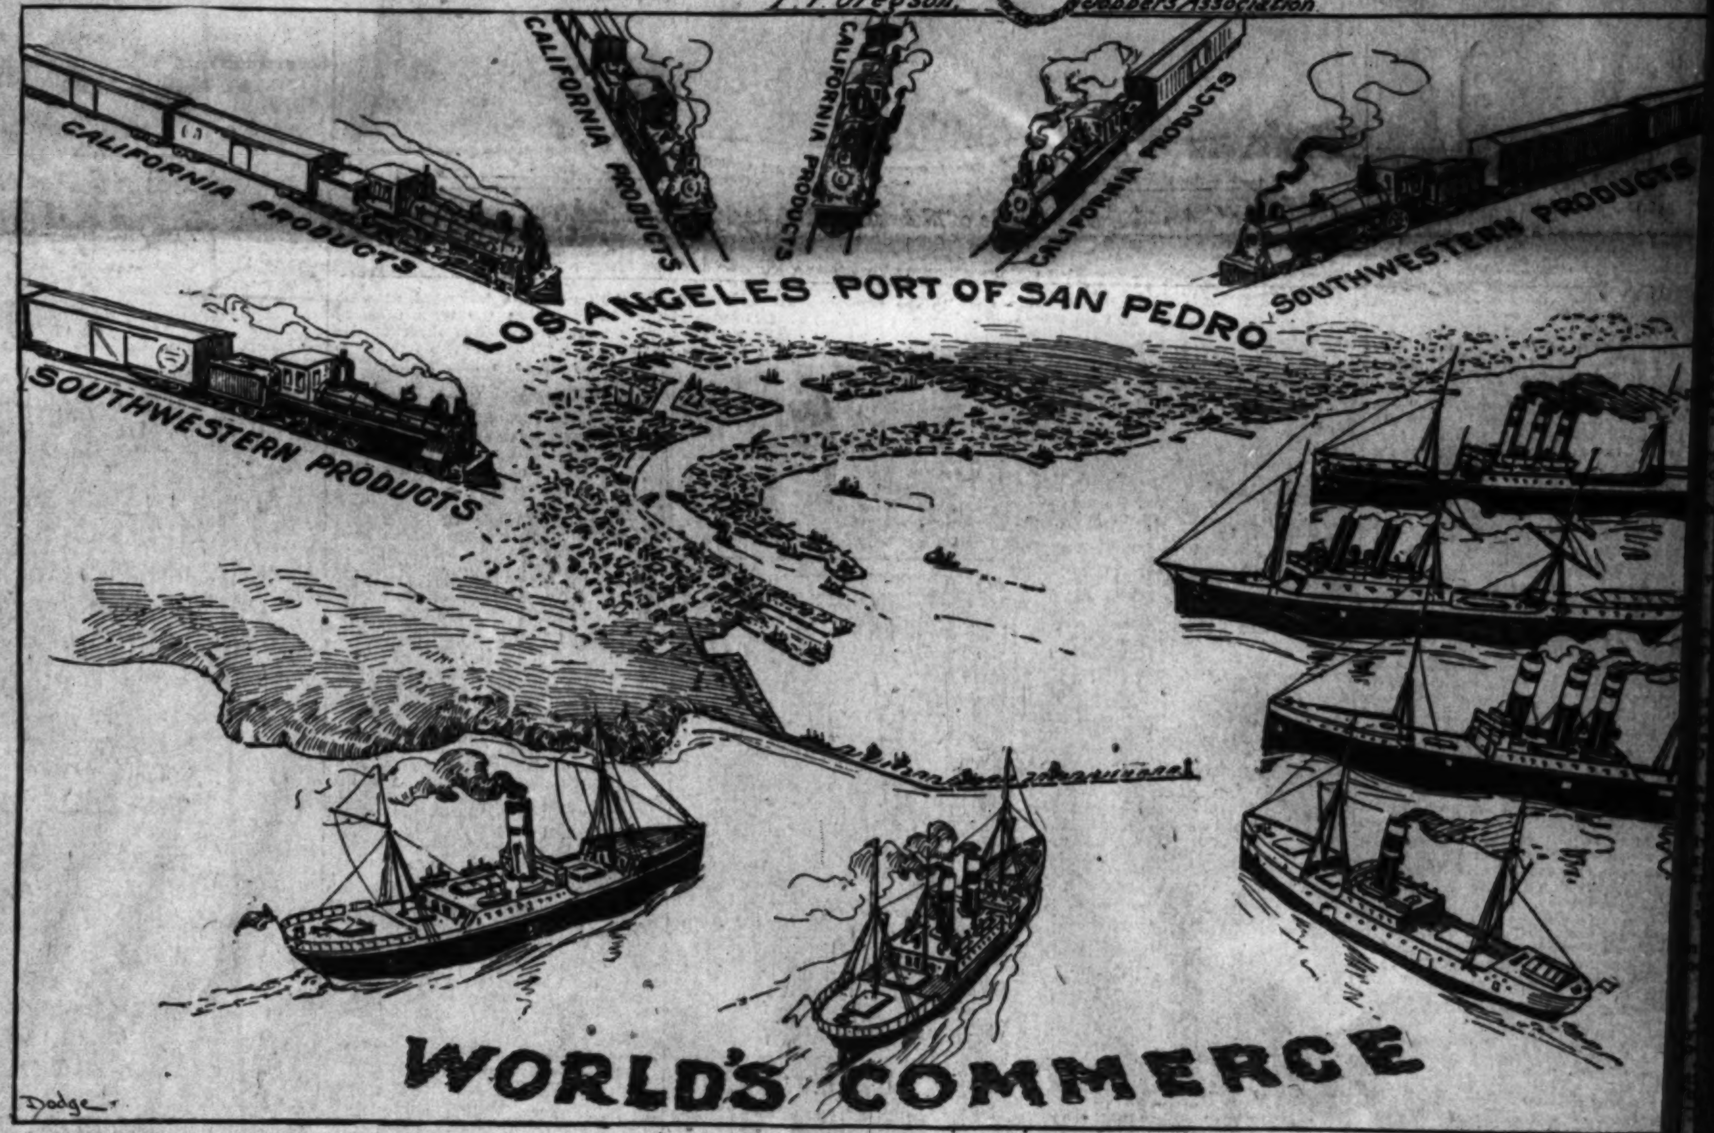
They are also planning, however, for an event of the near future when to San Pedro. Our own goods over our own wharves.

Enormous cargoes, such as the cotton crops of Texas, are shipped hundreds of miles north, out of the direct route to go through the harbors of Seattle and San Francisco. We must do the shipping for our own territory. We hereby "King's X" the Southwest.

Raw materials are now shipped from this section in great bulk to the East to be manufactured. The finished products are handled through other harbors. When we manufacture from our own raw material, San Pedro will become automatically one of the great harbors of the world.

Lastly, the success of the government reclamation work whereby immense territories of desert land are made into productive areas at our very doors, will inevitably clog San Pedro with the ships of commerce. It is for us to help the desert blossom like the cotton plant. The possibilities of this last proposition are such as to fairly scare the investigator.

The first of our San Pedro problems



Coming together!

Los Angeles expects to be visited by the commission sent by the Mikado of Japan to study traffic conditions on this Coast. This visit will be portentious to San Pedro.

In the article which follows, The Times presents the situation as seen by these business men who have worked out the problem.

MAN OF IDEAS.

The main facts have been furnished by F. B. Gregson, traffic manager of the Associated Jobbers and formerly one of the big traffic men of the Santa Fé.

He happens to be one of the men who realize the picturesque and dramatic possibilities that lurk behind the cold schedules.

In the beginning, let it be said that Los Angeles has no intention of trying to sneak into any of the harbors along the Coast to kidnap steamship lines for San Pedro. Nor to stampede transcontinental railroads; nor put salt on the tail of freight-controlling associations.

The work of building up a commerce for San Pedro will be creative; not burglarious. We don't want any one else's commerce. We will create our own freight.

ALONG THESE LINES.

Roughly speaking, the work must proceed along the following lines:

A large amount of freight now comes to Los Angeles from the East over transcontinental railroad lines congested with too much traffic. This tonnage must be divided with ships plying from San Pedro.

Vast quantities of freight shipped to Los Angeles by sea now come through the harbors of San Francisco and San Diego. This freight must be diverted East that there's a fine large ocean all the way from New York to San Pedro.

Boats and things can sail on it and freight can be put in the boats.

Los Angeles receives about 3,250,000 tons of freight a year. Most of it comes from the East by rail. We must divert some of it to the sea.

Probably in excess of 50 per cent. of the freight consigned to Los Angeles originates or can be made to originate within easy access of the Atlantic Coast. Hence sent to us by sea to the glorification of San Pedro.

For the purposes of traffic, railroad men divide the United States into the following self-explanatory divisions: "Atlantic seaboard," "Pittsburgh-Buffalo," "Cincinnati-Detroit," "Mississippi River," "Missouri River," "Colorado."

We can purchase as far west as the "Cincinnati-Detroit" division, and ship by sea from the Atlantic Coast.

In this potential water competition lies the commercial protection of the Pacific Coast. It is this potentiality that bears fruit in the shape of terminal rates from the railroads.

For a variety of reasons, however, it is believed that the railroads could easily be reconciled to splitting freight business with the sea.

Of course in such a split lies the hope of our harbor.

For one thing, the railroads have more business than they can do. Railroad men say they are now facing the same congested freight situation as in the days after the San Francisco earthquake. It will soon become absolutely necessary to have some other means of bringing in our freight.

For most commodities, water transportation would be as satisfactory. By the Tehauntepec Isthmus, the freight comes in ships from New York in twenty days. It takes from fourteen to eighteen days by rail across continent.

AN OBSTACLE.

The main obstable to the development of this water freightway, and incidentally to San Pedro's future, are the insane local railroad freight rates.

The railroads charge unjust and prohabitive prices for carrying freight from San Pedro to interior points in California, Nevada and Arizona, New Mexico and Utah.

It is asserted that you can ship certain classes of freight from New York by sea to the Isthmus of Tehauntepec—across the isthmus by rail and then by sea to San Diego, for the same money it costs to send the same freight from San Diego to Bakersfield.

The purpose, of course, of these discriminations is to shut out ships from handling freight from New York to the Pacific Coast. To kill the "ocean route."

Big shippers in this city believe, however, that the railroads will change these rates. On the long cross-country freight haul, each railroad has to split the profits so many times with other railroads that there is not much left for the last one.

As these Coast States become heavy producers, they will have so much local traffic that the railroads can well afford to lower local rates and welcome the ships to San Pedro. The short haul from San Pedro will pay better than the cross-country.

When this day of common justice comes, San Pedro will become the port for Arizona, New Mexico and a part of Nevada and Utah.

All of this, however, relates to freight that we buy and ship in. We also sell some. Our east-bound tonnage goes by rail, and represents an enormous traffic in products of the soil. Oranges, for instance.

Traffic men do not consider it improbable that a part of our enormous orange trade will, some day, go to the East by sea.

Specially-built refrigerator steamers would be necessary, however, and better facilities for handling freight over the Tehauntepec Railroad. Of cource, when the Panama Canal is done, this probability will become vital.

Our other exports to the East are largely shut out of San Pedro by the reverse of the local freight hold-up referred to.

The railroads make rates from the interior to the East sufficiently low to prohibit the steamship lines from cutting in. The steamers do carry such east-bound freight as lime, asphalt and certain left-overs.

OUR FREIGHT—OTHER FOLKS' WHARVES.

San Pedro has a good deal of traffic that the neighbors have been taking care of for her—if Pedro can be called a "her."

Fully 90 per cent. of the freight now landed in San Diego from New York via Tehauntepec belongs to Los Angeles.

This freight is loaded on ships in New York; loaded on the cars of the Tehauntepec Railroad; taken across the Isthmus; loaded on the ships of the American-Hawaiian line and delivered at San Diego; loaded again on cars and brought to Los Angeles.

The amount of freight we thus receive is increasing with amazing rapidity.

In 1908, there was a ship every three

POWER AND PORT.

DOUBLE VOTE ON BIG DEBT.

Aqueduct Power and Harbor Bonds the Next.

Special Election May Be Necessary Soon.

Nearly Seven Millions the City's New Need.

A double special election to authorize bond issues aggregating $6,500,000 for development and harbor improvement by the city of Los Angeles is imminent. Just how soon it should be called is a question that was debated by the Advisory Committee of the aqueduct yesterday, for the great scheme has reached a stage in its progress where the question of power development must be met as a financial problem. Incidental to it, the harbor bond issue is another important question.

Estimates of the amount required to complete the power development of the aqueduct approximate $4,500,000. The city is under promise of an initial provision of $2,000,000 for the immediate improvement of San Pedro harbor. The legal status of both needs seems to render it impossible to make full provision for the aqueduct power plans, while the harbor needs may be met far in excess of the initial amount.

The Advisory Committee arrived at no conclusion except that its own work has reached the point where the power question must be determined. The $23,000,000 debt authorized in 1907 may be used only for the purposes of bringing the Owens River water supply to the city, and the expenditure of any of this money for power adjuncts might invite litigation and the interference of the courts. For this reason it is deemed advisable that the authorization of the power debt be made, though the issue of the bonds may be deferred until the money is actually needed, in installments as the aqueduct bonds now sold.

The progress of the water plans reached a point where they either be altered to admit the p schemes or must go on regardle and without provision for them.
the power is to be developed the B be undertaken soon aggregates $1

Now the limit to create debt for two purposes, held by both the Attorney and the counsel of the a duct, prevents the full issue of power debt at this time. Under opinions the power debt must be in the municipal limit of $5,0 fixed by the charter. Of this maxi of bonded debt the city has al used $1,400,000, so that the m

BRYAN FIRST, THEN NORTON.

Young Democrat Follows His Leader to Defeat.

Must Pay for Brass Bands Engaged in November.

That stalwart young Jeffersonian Democrat, Albert M. Norton—he pays for the four brass bands with which Bryan's election was prematurely celebrated, last November.

"My youthful friend, Mr. Norton," said Justice Pierce yesterday, when the arguments were done, "my youthful friend, Mr. Norton, conducted the Peerless Bryan's campaign in this section with marked ability, considerable eclat, and four brass bands. I commend the heroic Spartan spirit of the other Democrats, but I guess Norton pays the brass bands."

This furious and mortifying contest has been going on for almost a year.

The young and enthusiastic Mr. Norton was secretary of the Democratic Central Committee, and manager of the local campaign of the Peerless One.

As the Presidential campaign drew to a close last fall, Mr. Norton was filled with hope and arrogant confidence.

"Pshaw," mused Mr. Norton, "why await the formalities of casting the votes?"

So Mr. Norton decided to ratify Bryan's election on the Saturday night before election day. He hired four union bands, and had a great Democratic parade and demonstration—consisting of four union bands.

UNFEELING WALKING DELEGATE

After the hideous election-day tragedy, the walking delegate of the Musicians' Union was unfeeling enough to call upon Mr. Norton with a bill for $208.

"But," faltered the young Democratic leader, reproachfully, "but, my dear fellow, you see—er—you know, Mr. Bryan didnt get elected."

"Nothin' to us who's elected," growled the walking delegate. "We walked forty-two blocks, and we plays 'See th' Conquerin' Hero Comes' for two hours stiddy, and you pay or get sued."

Mr. Norton stiffly replied that he would see the other stalwart Democrats on the Central Committee and have the bill paid.

"I guess his eyesight couldn't a bin good, so we sued," said the walking delegate, grimly.

The case of the union bands against he young and now less enthusiastic Mr. Norton has been dribbling on for everal days before Justice Pierce, but ame to a sad end yesterday.

Mr. Norton frantically tried to put be responsibility on the Executive ommittee, consisting of such illustrius war horses as Joe Simonds, Isaore Dockweiler, former Judge Trask nd Joe Mesmer.

They all rushed furiously for the itness stand and swore they hadn't nything to do with hiring the brass ands, and wouldn't pay a cent.

"Didn't you discuss this Democratic arade at your meeting?" one of them as asked.

"No," said the committeeman, "we dn't mention it."

What did you discuss, then?"

"Well," confessed the Democrat, we talked about who would be apointed to offices when Bryan was ected."

"How did you divide up the jobs?"

"I don't remember, except that Joe esmer was to be postmaster."

OBSESSED WITH GLOOM.

Young Mr. Norton seemed to be obssed with the gloom of premonition hen the last session of the hearing as called, yesterday. The nine disguished Democratic lawyers who d appeared for him when the case ened all had faded away. He was t to fight his battles alone.

Back of him sat two delegates from e Musicians' Union. One was a fat n with an enormous white neck , who looked soulfully at the andelier; the other was a bristling le bald-headed man with a tiny ck neck tie that stuck out at each e like the whiskers of a cat.

ustice Pierce, when all had assemd, called to the clerk: "Bring me papers of somebody or other inst the Democratic party."

He glared at the papers when they me. "Oh, it isn't the Democratic rty; it's against Norton et al. I ss et al. means the fragments of Democratic party," he said.

young attorney named Harker emnly arose behind a bulwark of books and called for justice and . He was for the brass bands.

Mr. Norton tells us to collect the from the Democratic party," he d, in an outraged voice. "Where," said, turning indignantly upon the inking Mr. Norton, "where is this ngible, effervescent, evanescent nocratic party?"

o one seemed to know, so the jussaid solemnly: "Echo answers re."

Where is the Democratic party?" anded the young lawyer, with insing heat. Mr. Norton, deserted alone, shrank deeper into his seat. ige" McNutt, who alone of all the nocratic leaders had peeked into courtroom, got up and silently ked out.

Where is the Democratic party?" in demanded the lawyer for the s bands.

IKE SNOWFLAKES ON RIVER.

Like the snowflakes on the river; a nent seen: then gone forever," mured the justice.

h, well, if you're gonna talk this about the Democrats I want a ge of venue," protested Mr. Norwith a last show of spirit. And dded fiercely: "You just wait l next campaign."

rton argued his own case and a decision handed down by JusPierce's colleague, Justice Ling.

w, that isn't law—except in JusLing's court," ruled the justice nstedly.

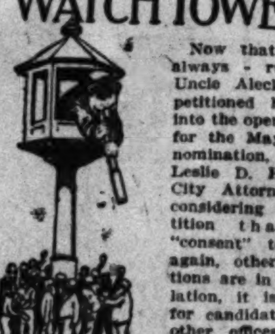
have a distinct recollection of ing upon this parade," said the t, as Norton sat down. "I disly recollect enjoying the music of Norton's four brass bands. As I hed I wondered if that was all was to the Democratic party. election returns showed that it

e court said he would assess the of $208 against Norton. "But," he d, "common decency should imhe Democratic leaders to pay this not for the music of the bands n gratitude to Norton for this nce of the tiny life spark left in Democratic party."

en the case was done, Mr. Norton the courtroom with stiff dignity, the walking delegates lingered.

ou jist wait till that feller Nors a candidate fer somethin'," they savagely.

THE POLITICAL WATCHTOWER



Now that your always-running Uncle Aleck has petitioned himself into the open track for the Mayoralty nomination, and Leslie D. Hewitt, City Attorney, is considering a petition that he "consent" to run again, other petitions are in circulation, it is said, for candidates for other offices. In view of your Uncle Aleck's promise to not be a candidate again, some toe-hold was necessary to surround him with the glamour of an urgent demand, and his idea to have a number of the recall set sign a petition asking him to run met favor with Lissner and Earl and Willard. Not because it helped Uncle Aleck so much, as he would run, and was running without it or in the face of a negative effort, but it pointed out a way to petition a whole recall ticket on the nominating ballot, as I am told by one of the recall set.

This member is convinced that Uncle Aleck is a load the recallers cannot carry, but he signed the petition because it was "politics" to do so. The recall set must hang together, or, like our Revolutionary forefathers, hang separately. No division is possible, he holds, or hope must be abandoned. It is Alexander or "bust," he tells me—perhaps both.

The Hewitt petition follows the same purpose, though there was less duress accompanying its signatures. It responds to a sincere belief that he will help the recall ticket. But Hewitt gave up all idea of a second term when the charter amendment increasing his salary was defeated last February. And I am informed that it will take a good deal of coaxing to induce him to run again. He has said he would announce his decision tomorrow.

But his refusal will in no way affect the petition subterfuge. It is the purpose of the Lissner-Earl set to have petitions prepared for those they favor for other nominations. One is in circulation for Richmond Plant for Tax Collector, it is reported, and another for C. R. Randall, the little tinpot member of the Park Commission, who wants to get into the Council. Preparations are being made by others for petitions for themselves. These documents are handled by members of the Good Government organization, which is the rank and file of the recall machine.

Mayoralty gossip has abated temporarily. The active candidates are Uncle Aleck, who bids fair to use up scores of petitions; George A. Smith, Oscar E. Farish and W. C. Mushet, City Auditor, with the continuous intimation that one Owen McAleer is making ready for the psychological moment to shy his castor. All the candidates realize that there is plenty of time before the last day for filing petitions—October 7—and none seems willing to set the pace in fast work. Campaigners are going along in a comfortable, leisurely sort of way.

Friends of Willis H. Booth still hope he will permit his name to go before the nominating primaries, but admit they find little encouragement.

When is a candidate not a candidate? This question is bothering some of the newer candidates who are stargazing in the firmament of the nonpartisan primary. They fear the purity of election laws will put a limit on the money they may spend, and they are worrying about it. The newest candidates are in most fear because they don't want any questions to pursue them in the campaign, if they happen to win one of the primary lottery prizes.

But the older candidates seem sure that they need not account for their expenses prior to nomination at the primaries—or defeat, either.

Your Uncle Aleck is one of the sure old ones. He says he got the advice of the District Attorney when he was an independent candidate for Supervisor, and was told he did not have to report his campaign expenses.

So cheer up, novices! When the wily old campaigner says he knows how to keep political books, it's an even bet that others may follow his system with some assurance.

In the meantime, lawyers disagree, some holding that the primary is an election, and that a candidate before it is bound to report his expenses, just as he is before the general election; and others hold that no law governs ante-primary candidates. For the benefit of a score of anxious ones I have tried my best to find out when a candidate begins to be a candidate, but I cannot.

The recall set is troubled by that promise of Uncle Aleck's that he would not run again. They are not so troubled by their own remembrance of it as they are by the remembrance of others. And in this connection comes a story of how the recallers are finding that many of their numbers are promised to Mushet because of the Mayor's promise not to run.

One of the members of the set inclined to participate in the petition to urge the Mayor to "consent" to another race because, in the face of that promise, he had pledged his support to Mushet as a non-partisan candidate. Of course, Mushet is repudiated by the non-partisan machine, because he refused to take Lissner's and Willard's orders, but they never dreamed of him making inroads on the set's forces. Mushet designates himself as an independent candidate.

"When the Mayor promised not to run again," said this member of the set, "I took him at his word. In a few days Mushet and I met in a business way, and I said: 'Alexander, I see, is out of the way; if you will make up your mind to run for Mayor a bunch of us will be back of you.' This was seriously taken, and perhaps was the real start of Mushet's candidacy. I spoke to our bunch, and found it friendly to the Auditor. We are with him, even if Alexander has changed his mind and repudiated his promise." THE WATCHMAN.

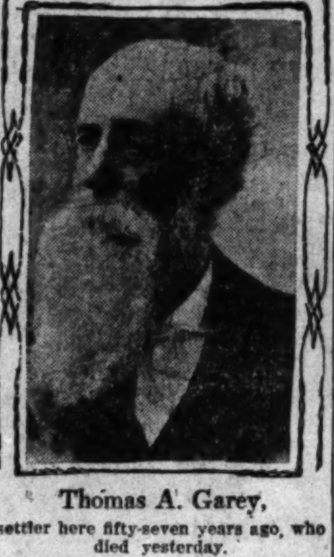
PIONEER MAKES LAST JOURNEY.

PROMINENT AGRICULTURIST DIES AT ADVANCED AGE.

Thomas Andrew Garey, During Fifty-seven Years' Residence in Southern California, Plays Important Part in Development of Citrus Industry—Funeral Tomorow.

The funeral of Thomas Andrew Garey, who died yesterday at his residence at No. 1285 East Thirty-seventh street, will be held tomorrow, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at the Sharp undertaking parlors, No. 1218 South Flower street. He was for fifty-seven years a resident of Southern California.

Mr. Garey was born in Cincinnati, O., July 7, 1830, and reared in Hagerstown, Md. When equipped with a good common school education, he began to study what his future course should be. An ardent lover of nature, he chose agriculture for his life work. After short stays in Iowa, New Mexico and Arizona, he made his way by ox team to the sun-kissed shore of the Pacific, accompanied by his courageous young wife, to whom he had been united in Albuquerque, N. M., October 27, 1850.



Thomas A. Garey,

settler here fifty-seven years ago, who died yesterday.

After living a few years at El Monte, Mr. Garey bought considerable land on San Pedro street, this city, where he engaged, in 1865, in the citrus nursery business. The demand for young orange, lemon and lime trees was enormous, and as he left nothing undone to produce the best, he was soon considered the "Citrus King" of the Southwest.

His efforts were constantly bent upon improvements. It was he who introduced and named the Mediterranean Sweet orange, the Paperine St. Michael, the Eureka lemon and many others.

For years Mr. Garey was acting president of the Los Angeles Pomological Society, overseer of the State Grange, of the council of the district, and Master of Los Angeles Grange. He was a charter member of the Good Templars, and honored member of the Pioneer Society, and always ready to lend a helping hand wherever needed. The towns of Artesia and Pomona record him as one of their founders. Santa Barbara Council honored him by founding the town of Garey, where he also engaged in the nursery business.

While Mr. Garey met with reverses again and again, he always recouped his fortunes, cheered and aided by the noble companion of his early choice. The old residence at Twenty-third and San Pedro streets—a palace in other days—bears testimony to his success.

He leaves a widow, two sons, A. T. and W. E. Garey, and one daughter, Mrs. N. A. Houk.

BUYING TONS OF LEARNING.

School Book Business Grows Very Rapidly.

Four Carloads Not Enough to Supply Demand.

Sales to Total Two Hundred Thousand Dollars.

Four carloads of school books have been received by a Los Angeles company for distribution in Southern California. This consignment represents only a portion of the great number to be used by students of this section during the coming term.

Placed end to end these volumes would make a line from Pasadena to the ocean.

Special flooring had to be built in the store to support the tremendous weight. Entire courses of education are represented by them. Primers and elementary song readers are piled by the thousands alongside of other thousands of volumes used by students in colleges.

The school book business in Southern California has increased at such a rapid rate that the term sales of today more than double those of five years ago. This year's demand is greater by 50,000 volumes than last year's.

Publishers of Boston, New York and Philadelphia furnish most of the books. Each local school furnishes a list of the number which it will probably need and in this way the shipments are made up.

The boy who hates study would have a very bad quarter of an hour should he visit now the school book department of the local firm that handles 90 per cent. of the volumes from the eastern publishing houses that are sold in this part of the State. From floor to ceiling are stacked Latin, Greek, Spanish and German books, mathematical works and volumes on science.

Music readers are always in great demand. There were 25,000 of them received, last week. Pocket classics to the number of 12,000 and 5000 geographies. Other books raised the total received to 122,000 volumes. As many more will be ready for distribution as soon as the winter term begins.

There are more high school pupils in Los Angeles than in any city of its size in the United States. This means heavy sales of advanced textbooks.

The receipts from school books for the last year amounted to $124,000. This year it is estimated that the sales will aggregate more than $200,000.

These figures apply only to new books. Fifty thousand* volumes are sold second hand every term.

The school supplies, such as drawing materials, various kinds of writing paper and pencils, disposed of in Los Angeles every term yield a revenue of $50,000.

Four Carloads of School Books Stacked Up Here.

This is part of the largest consignment ever handled in Los Angeles, which will be used by pupils of city and county schools during the coming term.

TURA COUNTY IS SEEKING FOR BETTER ROADS.

[illegible] to Be Asked to Improve [illegible] Road from Matilija to [illegible] Springs to Afford an [illegible] to the Sespe Creek [illegible].

[illegible] effort is to be made to have the [illegible] from Matilija to Wheeler's [illegible] improved. The grade at present [illegible] particularly steep and while it [illegible] made by even a two-cylinder [illegible] it is rough. Should the Ventura [illegible] officials be induced to improve [illegible] three-mile stretch to the end [illegible] auto road it will be possible for [illegible] who desire to go into [illegible] Creek to drive to within [illegible] miles of the good fishing grounds. [illegible] is a trail over the hills from [illegible] leading to Cold Spring [illegible] this trail is nine miles long and pack animals can be driven to the creek camp. The trip can be made in about two hours and it would be possible to reach the fishing pools where trout can be caught seven hours after leaving Los Angeles.

The run through the Ojai Valley to Nordhoff is particularly interesting and is made over fine roads. The road to Matilija has been sprinkled and at least a dozen automobiles made the run last week.

George Cline in a Packard made the trip to the mountain resort. There is a Pope-Hartford party, a Stoddard-Dayton party, and a Mitchell party at the springs. Ed. Harris, in a Lozier, made the run up the three miles of stiff grade to Wheeler's Springs and part of the Lozier crew are in the Sespe Creek.

From Los Angeles to Calabasas the going is particularly rough. Through the Encino country the road is also bad. The Canejo grade is in fairly good shape and most of it can be taken on the "high."

After dropping down toward Montalvo the road improves again until Ventura is reached. The going just out of Ventura is not good. There is about three miles of rough road to the turning point of the Nordhoff and Santa Barbara turnpike.

Instead of turning into the El Camino Real road and crossing the big bridge automobiles go by way of Nordhoff and the Matilija Creek, where the road is good. It is not even necessary to go through the town of Nordhoff as there is a good road leading to the mountains by way of Nordhoff junction.

The upper Ojai Valley grade is one of the stiffest grades in Ventura county to climb. Cline and his Packard made the hill without difficulty. On the summit near Sulphur Springs the Cline party found the limit of doves.

Frederic Pabst in a two-cylinder Reo made the run over the Ojai grade to Sulphur Spring. The Reo also climbed the hills to Matilija and then went on to Wheeler's Springs.

Most of the valley roads have been chopped to pieces by the heavy teaming which is being done at this time of the year. Wagons loaded with bales of hay pass over the roads constantly.

PENNSYLVANIA PICNIC.

Dr. Smith is the guest in Los Angeles of Dr. A. L. McLeish, a former college classmate, at his residence, Sixth street and Kingsley Drive. Dr. Smith is a biblical scholar of wide reputation in the line of the so-called "Higher Constructive Criticism." He will go north tonight. Dr. William Horace Day has returned to town for a few days, and will preach at the evening service at 7:45. Tomorrow Dr. and Mrs. Day will go north for a two week's trip.

OF PATRIOTIC INTEREST.

Roosevelt Camp, No. 9, United Spanish War Veterans, will give a vaudeville and stereopticon entertainment next Friday evening at old Elks' Hall, No. 231 South Spring street. The lecture and views will be conducted by George Edward Graham, the Associated Press correspondent aboard Admiral Schley's flagship during the battle of Santiago. This promises to be a most interesting affair, particularly to all patriotic and military organizations, and the general public is cordially invited. A small admission fee will be charged, the proceeds to be devoted to the entertainment of the department encampment which will convene at Pasadena on the 30th inst.

WHAT DOES IT PROFIT A MAN?

We had in The Times on Saturday morning two news dispatches which undoubtedly were read with keen interest not only here but all over America. One of these concerned the somewhat sudden death of a multi-millionaire. Frank Barstow was born sixty-two years ago at Waukesha, Wisconsin, then a very small town. He came of not distinguished parentage, and was not born with a gold spoon in his mouth. Before he came to full manhood the refining of crude oil for illuminating purposes had been begun, and he was one of the early promoters of that industry now become so great. Naturally he amassed great wealth, but it came to him in payment for long, strenuous hours, brain-racking effort, nerve-testing application, loss of sleep and probably oftentimes loss of food. He is dead at a period when men who live carefully may still be said to be in the prime of life. The enjoyments of the years of his existence were not many or intense beyond the mere amassing of money, all of which he leaves behind him. The best years of his life were passed without large means but in tremendous application of brain and muscle in business.

Right underneath this news was a more disturbing dispatch concerning the health of a multi-millionaire, a man who has won in a way quite as much distinction in business as even the head of the Standard Oil Company, John D. Rockefeller. Indeed, the achievements in business of Edward H. Harriman are more startling and remarkable than those of Mr. Rockefeller. He has gathered into one combination and holds as it were in the hollow of his hand one of the vastest railroad systems in the world. If it is true that he has gained control of the Vanderbilt lines, he then has a combination that far outmatches any other on the earth or dreamed of in the wildest flights of the imagination before his time.

Mr. Harriman fortunately still lives and may live long years to come. He is a young man, speaking conservatively, but like the dead oil millionaire, this great generalissimo of the railroad world is physically undone and mentally sick from intense application to business. It was by no easy steps, by no self-indulgence, that E. H. Harriman won the victory over rivals that has made him so remarkable a figure in the business and financial affairs of the world. We read upon the authority of his physicians that he is almost in a condition of starvation, surrounded as he is by all the many millions of his riches. He has not for years had sufficient sleep. He has taken no rest. His food probably has been taken spasmodically. He has cared little about its constituent parts or quality. What he has partaken of has not been assimilated because every nerve was on a strain. What sleep he got was disturbed and unsatisfying because his nerves were awake and his thoughts working even in his sleep. Undoubtedly the achievements of this man's life are something so immense that they might well turn an ordinary man's head.

It does not call for a particularly philosophical temperament, observant mind or careful consideration of affairs to compel the question in the innermost consciousness of every one of us, "Does it pay?" Mr. Rockefeller is reputed to be the richest man of this time, the richest human being that ever trod the earth. But whatever his faults and failings, whatever his virtues and gifts, there is one thing to be said of him which marks him as a much wiser man than most of his rivals, competitors, friends or enemies among the excessively rich men of the world. Undoubtedly his mind has been devoted to business closely, persistently and for protracted hours in the days of his early struggles in the oil world. But at all times he has had a due regard for his health. He is charged with being a very grasping, covetous man as to money. He could probably say that he never had a good chance to make a dollar that he did not turn the trick. But he has not pursued wealth with such inordinate haste, with such racking application, as to break down his nerves, destroy his digestion and his sleep and wreck himself physically and mentally at a premature age. He has reached a round figure, having passed threescore years and ten. He is hale and well preserved and has the expectation of living ten years more. He is reported to have stated for himself that he hopes to reach the century mark.

All America is full of prematurely old men who have destroyed health, are bringing their lives to a close before their time in a mad rush to be rich, and then richer, and then to amass still greater and greater fortunes. It would be useless as well as senseless to inveigh against ambition to make wealth. If it is made honestly and without undue haste it is a commendable ambition. But all the wealth of all the three millionaires who have been named in this article, and of all the rest that are unnamed here, will not compensate a man for destroying his health in the midmost years of his life or for ending his career at a time when rational enjoyment of wealth becomes best possible to a rational man.

OUR INTERESTS IN CHINA.

The empire of China, subdivided into nearly a score of provinces, is in area about equal to the United States east of the Rocky Mountains. In our territory there are about 80,000,000 people, and in China there are upward of 400,000,000 human beings. With the construction of railroads through the empire, this vast population will be brought into contact with the outside world. Their wants will increase; trade will grow in due proportion; and it is for this reason that our diplomats are insistent that the door be left wide open for all to compete for this great commerce.

This trade is small at present. Taking our own share of it as it is, we find that ten years ago we were selling to the Chinese merchandise worth $10,000,000, five years later $13,000,000, and then in 1905 our exports rose to $53,000,000, to fall back last year to a little over $22,000,000. The Boxer outbreak and the later attempt to boycott American goods do not seem to have affected our trade very much. Before the outbreak our exports were worth $10,000,000 and after it they amounted to $53,000,000.

Why should we expect any very great amount of trade between the two countries? Japan has one-tenth the population of China, yet we bought from that empire last year goods worth $68,000,000. If we should buy from China in proportion to the population it would amount to a good deal of trade. We may not sell Japan at the present time anything like as much as we buy. We may never sell the Chinese as much as we buy from them. Nor need we expect to see any development among the Chinese people similar to that which has taken place in Japan. Japan is compact, homogeneous, and now under a single form of government with a uniform system of coinage throughout the empire. China is divided into nearly twenty provinces, each very independent of the others, many of them bound to the central government at Peking by anything but close ties. There are said to be 170 different kinds of currency used in the empire, one kind of money of one province or section of a province being useless in provinces contiguous to it. The people are not homogeneous in race, do not speak the same language, and vary as much in their customs as they do either in race or language. It will take many years to unify a people like these and to supply to the whole empire a single money standard, and still longer to bring them all to speak the same language. These conditions in so small a territory, dense as the population is, are inconceivable to us.

What hope is there of a change in China, even looking ahead for a number of years? This: at the head of the government is a man who has traveled extensively in Europe and America. Prince Chun, the regent, knows the differences between his own country and the civilized nations of the west. He is not the only Chinaman who understands these differences more or less clearly. A great many of the statesmen of China have been abroad, a goodly number of them educated in Europe or America. We are told of one city in China in the Kwang Tung province, built and occupied by Chinamen who have been in America. Numerous Chinamen who come to this country are from that province, and they have gone back and built up a new city, which, we are informed, is up-to-date in nearly every respect. It has broad streets instead of the narrow lanes that prevail in Chinese towns, a system of street railroads, plate-glass windows, "sky-scrapers" from the Chinese standpoint, and is blessed with a real estate boom. Many of these Chinamen have been Christianized, and they all go back with more or less American education in their heads. We are furthermore informed that Canton has installed a water-works plant, an electric light plant, telephones and a modern ice plant, and has recently taken to cleaning the streets. With the building of railroads through the empire, we shall have these examples multiplied all over China.

If we did only one dollar's worth of exporting to the Chinese per capita per annum, it would amount to $400,000,000 of business. If we imported from China no more than we exported, the combined business would run close to a billion dollars a year. This explains why our government takes so much friendly interest in the affairs of China, why we are insistent that opportunities be given to our people to do business there equal to those of any other civilized nation. China has a great deal to expect from America. All we want of her or from her is the privilege of mutual commerce. There can be no compulsion. We buy where we get the goods cheapest and sell where we get the best price for our commodities. The Chinese do the same. In the case of European nations, the old habit is strong upon them of seizing upon territory, administering the internal affairs of the people, forcing alien religions and foreign customs upon them, and causing a violent break between them and their own past. We have no such desire. We may offer them the Christian religion; we may offer them our civilization and philosophy; but we will not coerce them in any way, in ethics, commerce, language, laws or customs. The Chinese know this, and upon this basis are built up the friendly relations between us.

POLITICS IN MEXICO.

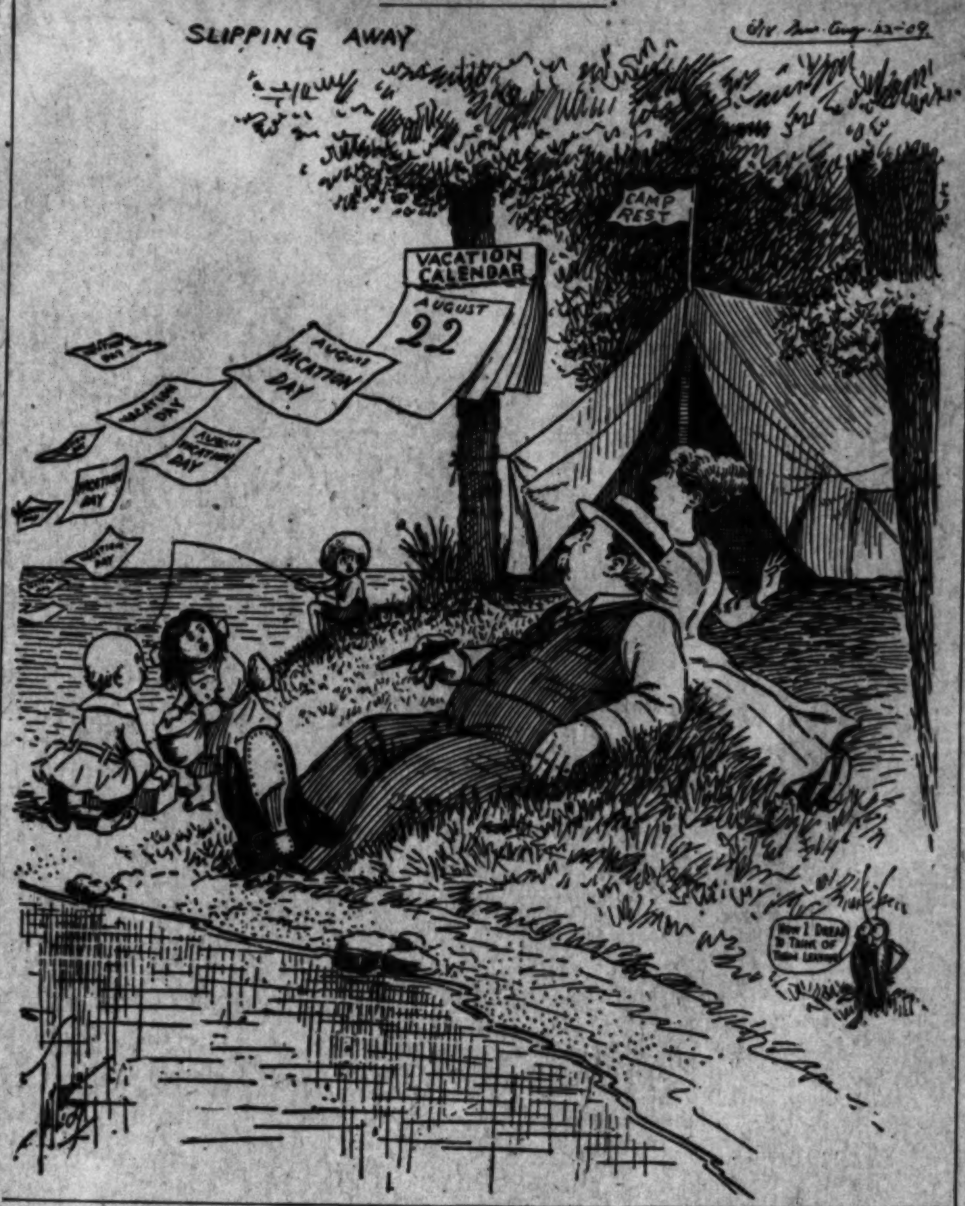
A national election is pending in Mexico, involving the election of a President for the republic for a legal term under the constitution of the country. More excitement has been aroused in this political conflict than has been noted there for many years, but far less than used to be the rule some thirty years ago.

We Americans have nothing to do with this contest for office in the sister republic, but our interests there are so many that it is impossible not to feel deep concern.

We remember the condition that prevailed in Mexico until its greatest statesman in its history rose to the occasion and secured internal peace for the country, and this resulted in the attraction of outside capital to develop its vast resources. Gen. Porfirio Diaz has been indeed a father to his country, a wise and able one. Under his conservative and just rule the progress of Mexico has gone on by bounds. In judging of his methods we must bear in mind the difference between Mexico and the United States, and we must particularly remember the differences between the constitutions of the two countries, and most of all between the laws which make the organic law vital. Judged by this just rule, the government of Gen. Diaz during all the long years of his incumbency has been admirable. Mexico has enjoyed internal peace, amicable relations with the outer world, and under these conditions the development of the great natural resources has gone on most admirably. The foreign commerce of the country has grown greatly, the cause of education has been advanced, the country has been placed upon a sound financial basis, with the gold standard the ultimate measure of values.

In the present election a stormy effort is apparently being made to defeat the President, or his plans. That, perhaps, is not surprising, considering the long time Gen. Diaz has held office. But this is no excuse for attempting to wrest the place from him by the old revolutionary methods which so long held Mexico back. Nor is there any excuse for the bitter, virulent, unfair attacks founded on base untruths, resorted to by some of the enemies of this man who has done so much for Mexico. In order that Americans may have a just sense of the improper methods resorted to in the elections, we reproduce in today's issue of The Times a fair and clearly-conceived statement of some of the facts. The article, which may be read elsewhere in The Times, is from the pen of a writer well versed in Mexican affairs, and printed first in Moody's Magazine.

SLIPPING AWAY.



RECOGNIZING FATHER.

We notice with much pleasure that a movement is on foot in Chicago to change the name of "Mother's Day" to "Parents' Day." The idea is to let father in. It seems to be the consensus of opinion that, while father has his faults, he still has his uses, and should have some recognition.

We think it is no more than right. If you will study the matter in all its details you will see that father is really a very important adjunct in the general scheme of life. You take him from the time he proposed to mother, all down through the history of the family, including the occasions when he was elected as a delegate to the county convention of the party he belongs to, until he finally joined the Down-and-Out Club and took his seat among the Hasbeens, that pa was generally there with the goods, and that if he hadn't been there with the goods there would have been a number of times when there would have been nothing stirring.

Of course, it is Mother who occupies the throne, theoretically speaking, at least. We'll admit that she should have the chief seat in the kingdom of the home, and all that. If she had reneged, we wouldn't be here, the coffee wouldn't be like she makes it and the girls would often have to stay home and wash the dishes instead of spooning on the beach with a lot of Charlie boys. There is no denying that ma is the main squeeze and the big smoke when it comes right down to cases, but you don't want to ever forget that pa was always at least a rattling good first mate.

For these reasons and others that might be named, the movement to recognize father, however slight the recognition may be, is a movement that should meet with enthusiastic encouragement. Give him a seat on the band wagon, let him wave his whiskers in the wind and answer with cheery voice the salvos of the populace as he rides by.

EASY ENOUGH—IF!

Mr. Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Asquith Cabinet in Great Britain, is a resourceful and daring man. He is tainted to the marrow with the semi-socialism which is threatening the supremacy of his country. He thinks wealth akin to crime, and does not hesitate to burden enterprise and success with taxes in order to get funds to relieve the distress of those in need, and does not inquire too closely as to whether the need comes from incompetence, improvidence, extravagance or vicious habits. To have money is to invite a legalized raid from the tax collectors; to have nothing is to excite the lively sympathy of Mr. Lloyd-George.

One of the first acts of this statesman, when he came into office, was to raise money to meet increased expenses largely of his own creation, and mostly to make the rich, enterprising and successful pay the bills of those who were not in these classes. When the budget was presented, Lord Rosebery exclaimed: "This is not a budget; it is a revolution." Lloyd-George faces the issue and does not deny the charge. He seems to think he is revolutionizing Great Britain. Now the problem is before the House of Lords, and as their necks are marked for the fiscal knife, they are disposed to make a fight. According to latest dispatches it seems the upper house of Parliament is in a humor to force an issue with the government with the purpose of forcing the Liberals to "go to the country" for indorsement of Lloyd-George's fiscal policy. George's plan seeks to tie the hands of future Parliaments to the end of time. It provides for taxes which are not to be levied until 1924, and then for every fifteen years to the crack of doom.

The new and additional taxes on estates of decedents are expected to yield $14,000,000 this year and be increased to $37,125,000 in coming years. The new income taxes, which are now producing about $17,500,000 per year, are to increase until the revenue from this source reaches $33,600,000. Of the taxes, $50,000,000 per annum goes to pay old-age pensions. Both the income and death taxes are fixed on a rapidly-rising scale. Smaller incomes are to pay less than before. Already death duties amount to about $90,000,000 a year in Great Britain; hereafter they are expected to yield $125,000,000 in all. On some estates the new tax is 10 per cent. and upward. In ten deaths the government would get the full value of the estate.

Lloyd-George is a Welshman. He was raised by his mother (the father having died when the boy was very young,) the daughter of a Baptist preacher, aided by a brother who was a shoemaker in a small village. The boy had to work hard, but was ambitious to learn, and the uncle helped him. He fed on "Sartor Resartus" and other highly-spiced pabulum, studied French and imbibed ideas from that source. He studied law and went into politics with results to himself, to his party and to his and incisive. The old-age pensions and ures to relieve the needs of the poor are devising. When taking the office of C the Exchequer he had to face the b ting more money to meet the government demands. He did not hesitate. He lo see where money was and then he w to the spot to get it. His plan was and when presented to the House of L out the exclamation of the nobleman q Mr. George's ideas were gathered in t the little shoeshop in Wales where th of the countryside met nightly and d affairs of the nation, of "the world th of that which is to come," in their ow

The plan was simple and effective—if will not resist or if they cannot ma resistance. They seem disposed to issue on the fortunes of the Liberal will be watched with much interest.

The landed interests of the kingdo reaching in their influence. The inco is not large as a rule. A land-holder of 5350 acres, partly in Warwicksh Leicestershire, writes to the London an itemized account of his income fo receipts were £6890, the expenses deficit of £76. He paid in taxes about one-sixth of total receipts. M of the money went out for repairs persons employed in the regular work To load his estate more heavily bankruptcy. The people who work must suffer equally with the owner. his people will go far toward vote. Besides the regular taxes, he tithes, of which £956 go to Trinity C bridge. The estate pays £2000 pound wages for outdoor work. THE LANCER.

THE SAN FRANCISCO PRIMARY.

[The Argonaut, August 21, 1909:] Viewed broadly, the result of the primary is a notable if not an overwhelming victory for those elements of the community which stand opposed to the so-called graft movement. Messrs. Crocker, Leland, and McCarthy, the Mayoralty nominees, representing respectively the Republican, Democratic and Union Labor parties, are all outspoken critics of that system of personal exploitation which calls itself the graft prosecution. . . .

The general result of Tuesday's voting makes it plain enough that San Francisco has come to understand the true character of the so-called anti-graft movement and to discredit it as an enterprise founded in selfish motives and pursued by methods destructive to the integrity of society. San Francisco is tired, too, of a rule which, calling itself by the name of reform, neglects the true functions of government to devote its energies to corporation baiting and mere personal exploitation. If there was any doubt of the attitude of the public mind prior to Tuesday's election, there is none now. In the coming election William Crocker will be elected Mayor and Charles M. Fickert will be elected prosecuting attorney. And this result will mean that the so-called graft prosecution will cease to reflect the personal motives and the individual animosities of a smoll coterie [chief of which is Heney and his employer, Spreckels.—Ed. Times,] but will be conducted precisely like other prosecutions, relieved of private malice, of inquisitorial practices, and of methods in contempt alike of the spirit and the forms of law.

HOROSCOPE.

Sunday, August 22, 1909.

BY COZETTE.
Now under a good star
The writer's fingers are.

Mars is stationary in the zodiac on this, the 234th day of the year. Librae is occulted.

Mercury is fortunate, being in sextile with the Moon, a benefic aspect indicating that it is a favorable day to write important letters, seek employment that requires use of pen or writing instrument, deal with poets, sculptors, lawyers, printers, editors, ministers, orators, ambassadors, commissioners, artificers, teachers and ingenious or clever persons.

The augury is good for selecting schools for children, apprenticing young persons, or selecting careers for them.

Travel is likely to result successfully.

Herbal astrology indicates this day as good for aniseed, asparagus, balm, balsam, borage, chestnut, blood-wort, dandelion, duck, fig, hyssop, jessamine, lime, oak, pinks, roses, succory and samphire under Uranus.

Today is excellently marked by the signs for "fish and waters."

The Moon is in a sign that leads persons to guard their interests closely, especially in matters of money. It is likely that in dealing with the niggardly or avaricious they will be found uncommonly grasping, selfish and scheming.

Persons of optimistic tendencies must guard against hastiness in judgment. They will be inclined to overlook details that seem trivial but are highly important in their effects.

Those born between this date and August 28 are on the cusp of Leo-Virgo, a sign that confers great sympathy with nature and an intense love of outdoors. Usually this instinct is true and they find their best success, physically and mentally, when living under the open sky, amidst trees and fields.

They are inclined to placidity, good-tempered views of life and things, and generally are contented easily. Their strongest points usually are developed in methodical work. They generally enjoy immunity from disease, like the people born under Virgo, and remain young despite their years. Their governing planets are Mercury and the Sun. Their astral color is deep orange and amber and pink jas…

Women and men with this birthdate will probably hear news from afar during the twelvemonth. The unwed will be wooed. Those in employment will meet with opportunity.

Children born today are under signs promising moderate and satisfactory success in life. They must be cautioned against risking their limbs. Girls will probably marry early.

We have another big adv. in the Society Section.

PUBLIC SERVICE—OFFICIAL DOINGS.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Fourth Ward will get a park between Sixteenth and Pico streets, north of Rosedale Cemetery, if a resolution to be presented tomorrow goes through the Council.

Ralph J. Leavitt was discharged from custody by Judge Davis yesterday, because the warrant asking his return to Seattle for trial on the charge of manslaughter, was fatally defective in that it was not signed by the Governor.

E. A. Shouse, who pleaded guilty to passing a fictitious check, was sentenced to San Quentin for one year yesterday.

Judge Davis yesterday fixed the trial of Rev. Charles Wesley McCrossan, mining-stock promoter, for December 3, after a vain attack upon the legality of the complaint.

S. P. C. A. officers filed complaints in Justice Chambers's court yesterday, charging former City Garbage Contractor McClure and the foreman of his stables with starving and overworking twelve horses and mules.

Justice Rose freed a "man chambermaid" of a charge of arson after a preliminary hearing yesterday.

The poverty of two men, charged with cruelty to a horse caused Justice Chambers to be lenient with them in passing sentence yesterday.

NEW PARK FOR FOURTH WARD.

BIG ACREAGE NORTH OF ROSEDALE CEMETERY SOUGHT.

President Pease Will Ask Council to Designate a District to Be Assessed for the Cost of the Land in View—Park Superintendent Back from Seattle.

A park for the Fourth Ward will be started by President Pease of the Council Tuesday when he introduces a resolution to declare a district for the assessment of the cost of buying the vacant land north of Rosedale Cemetery.

This is about thirty acres, and extends from Pico to Sixteenth street, and has been proposed several times for park purposes. But each time the finances of the city would not admit, and between periods of agitation the price steadily increased. Now there is no estimate of its value, but President Pease believes it will never be cheaper, and that the question might as well be settled.

No petition has been filed asking that the land be condemned for park purposes, and in presenting a resolution without a petition the president will be outside the rule of the Council that no condemnation under the district assessment plan be entertained unless a petition representing 33 per cent. of the property affected is presented.

Park Superintendent Morley returned from attendance at the annual convention of the National Association of Park Superintendents yesterday. With him came C. B. Richards, superintendent of the Chicago park system, who will be shown the Los Angeles parks today.

Morley says one of the most important topics before the convention was that of good roads, and Mr. Richards's visit through the West is specially to study road construction. He will spend some time examining the good roads now under construction here.

In beautification Morley finds Seattle working rapidly to the front of western cities. He says fifteen miles of macadam boulevard connecting several parks, is now complete and twelve miles more will be opened in a few weeks. The transition in parks and boulevards is astonishing, he says, to one who saw the development two years ago.

The convention honored Morley by electing him a vice-president and ex-officio member of the Executive Committee. The next meeting will be held at Harrisburg, Pa.

AD CHECK AND BAD ORDERS PROVE HIS BANE.

Collection Agent With Many Golden Ideas Must Languish Behind the Bars at San Quentin for One Whole Year—His Former Record Balks Dame Mercy.

E. A. Shouse, the handy collection gent, was given one year in San uentin yesterday, by Judge Davis. he charge against Shouse was the rgery of a check signed by R. A. cKee, April 17 last, calling for the yment of $149. It was cashed by e Boston Store, at the personal request of the wife of the accused, who as at the time employed by the conrn. It is alleged that Shouse has en guilty of a number of other ady transactions, but the victims e unwilling to appear against him. Shouse pleaded guilty to the charge forgery, and filed an application for obation. An investigation of his cord, disclosed facts that compelled pt. Dodd to report against grant- g any clemency.

Several witnesses appeared against ouse. Will Lewis of Hollywood tesed that he had given Shouse $10 bring suit against several delinent debtors, but that the actions re not brought and the money was t returned.

S. A. Barber, a grocer, had been rked by Shouse for a membership what was known as the Sunset otective Association, and the wites declared that he never received ything for his investment of $5, and erward discovered that Shouse himlf was the association, and that it d no other existence.

E. A. Graham, a manufacturer of chinery novelties, testified that he d hired Shouse to solicit orders for house, and that on trips he made the beach towns and along the line the "Kite" track, that he had been ry successful. In fact, Shouse got re orders than the house could fill. successful was he that Shouse s sent to San Francisco, at his reest, and from that city the orders goods fairly rained upon the esblishment. It was remarked, en ssant, by Graham, that Shouse was eiving a nice commission on the es, but when Graham wrote to the eged customers, thanking them for business, he learned that they had en no such orders. Then he disrged Shouse. Of the $1200 worth orders supposed to have been secured by Shouse, Graham succeeded in making $72 worth stick.

The accused went on the stand on his own behalf. He said that he had organized the Sunset Protective Association in good faith, but that his employé, A. A. Sales, had left him, taking all of the money of the concern. He said that he had been compelled to dispose of the $149 check on the Boston Store on account of actual necessities. He admitted that after disposing of the paper he took his wife to San Francisco, and they lived there for several months under the name of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Steve.

Before passing sentence, Attorney E. J. Fleming made a statement, asking the leniency of the court on the wife's account. Fleming said she is a good woman, and well liked at the store where she was employed.

When the court had pronounced sentence, Shouse appeared to be greatly pleased with the judgment. He evidently expected more. Mrs. Shouse was in court, and embraced and kissed her husband affectionately as he entered the courtroom.

HINTS OF CONTEST.
ANOTHER WILL APPEARS.

A hint at a possible will contest is contained in a petition, filed by Sarah J. Tedford, in the Probate Court yesterday. The petitioner is the widow of A. C. Tedford, who died December 10, 1903, leaving property valued at about $10,000, the holdings consisting of eleven unimproved building lots in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Tedford alleges that a supposed will of her husband was admitted to probate December 8, 1908, and that George W. Tedford, a son, the principal beneficiary under the will, was made administrator. She declares this document was not the real last will and testament of her husband, and that another document, which is the real will has since been discovered.

Under the terms of the last will all of the property goes to Sarah J. Tedford, in addition to the life insurance policy of her late husband, issued by Valley Lodge,, A.O.U.W., of San Francisco. A codicil was afterward made to this will, she says, by which one-half of the holdings are given to the children, share and share alike. The devisees and legatees are given as follows: Sarah J. Tedford, George W. Tedford and Roy L. Tedford of Los Angeles; Blanche M. Taft, Hollywood, and Pettre T. Tedford, Stockton, Cal.

The petitioned asks that the last will be admitted to probate as the real final testament of the decedent.

LEAVITT DISCHARGED.
WARRANT NOT PROPER IN LAW.

Ralph J. Leavitt, the autoist, who won the $10,000 race last Sunday, was discharged from custody yesterday by Judge Davis in a habeas corpus action on a warrant or delition alleging that he is a fugitive from justice. It was demonstrated to the satisfaction of the court that the instrument was faulty and without force in law.

Leavitt was wanted by the Seattle authorities on the complaint that about a year ago, while exceeding the speed limit there, his chauffeur ran over and killed Rafeal Sago, a street worker. The Governor of Washington issued his warrant upon the Governor of California for the return of Leavitt to Seattle for trial, and it was honored by the Secretary of State, a proceeding entirely without authority in extradition matters. When this condition was discovered there was no attempt made to hold Leavitt as the irregularity was conceded.

But another point upon which it was sought to defeat the warrant of rendition, was that it did not state a public offense, but on this proposition Judge Davis would not decide, saying that possibly his views on that point would have no weight or bearing with the courts of Washington. Deputy District Attorney F. H. Holtsheimer, of Seattle, who was in the courtroom, asked Judge Davis if possible, to give his views on that feature of the case, but the court would go no further than indicated. It was desired by the attorneys representing Leavitt to secure an opinion from the court that would do away with any fear that Leavitt might be taken back to Washington, after irregularity as to the signature to the warrant had been cured.

Judge Davis said that the fact that the warrant had not been signed by Gov. Gillett destroyed the value of the instrument for extradition purposes, and Leavitt was ordered discharged, together with his two sureties who furnished $1500 bail when the writ of habeas corpus was first instituted.

Leavitt was so pleased with his release that he insisted upon taking everybody down town in his big touring car as his guest.

FAMILY ROW.
INVOLVES LITTLE CHILD.

The troubles, marital and otherwise, of the Faulkner family, were aired in Judge Wilbur's court, yesterday.

It was an action in habeas corpus instituted by Henry C. Faulkner to secure the custody and control of his daughter, Henrietta M. Faulkner, aged 4 years, who for some time has been with the mother.

The Faulkners were married eight years ago, when he was 45, and she but 18. Two years since the wife left, on account, as she put it, of his failure to support her properly. She went back to the home, her father, Sylvester Maire, who, it was alleged on the witness stand, is afflicted with a tincture of socialism, and put in a great deal of his time teaching young Henrietta to repeat what President Taft is said to have declared when asked what the poor of the country would do with the expected high prices of commodities under the new tariff law: "The Lord only knows."

Judge Wilbur, with a view to learning something of the child, took it upon his knees and asked little Henrietta what the President is supposed to have remarked on a certain occasion. "The Lord only knows," piped the child, in juvenile treble.

The court remarked that one of the saddest features of the case was the evident attempt on the part of the mother to prejudice the child against the father. The court asked Faulkner: "Do you love the baby?" He broke down in a flood of tears. "I certainly do, sir," he said.

The wife is one of the irritable, demonstrative persons often met with in courts of justice, and when Judge Wilbur sought to give his views of the case, it was with difficulty that he could proceed, so insistent was the woman in the promulgation of her special arguments. There was a great disparity in the ages of the Faulkners, and to this fact much of the trouble was accredited.

Finally, after everybody was heard, and Mrs. Faulkner had been told that the court ought to have a chance to decide the case, Judge Wilbur gave the mother the custody of Henrietta, but the father was allowed the privilege of seeing the little one as often as he desires. He is not to remove it from the mother's present home.

M'CROSSAN HELD.
TRIAL FIXED FOR DECEMBER.

Rev. Charles Wesley McCrossan, the meek and lowly evangelist who is alleged to have unloaded several expensive blocks of stock of the Cordillera Mining Company upon his parishioners, will be tried in Judge Davis's court, December 3. Until then he will remain at liberty on bond.

Paul Schenck, attorney for McCrossan, made a long argument, on the proposition that the information ought to be set aside, in that the accused had not been legally committed by a magistrate. In support of his contention he read voluminously from the California laws, and endeavored to prove that the Legislature of the State had mixed things up worse than the babies in Pinafore, in building the statute providing against false pretenses. The specific charge against McCrossan is that he published and circulated false information in regard to the value of the ores in the Cordillera claims, one allegation sent broadcast was that more than $4,000,000 worth of ore was in sight, and that the stock was to be desired by those looking for a good thing.

The motion to set aside the information was denied, another attack was made by the demurrer route, and again the authorities were marshalled, and for a second time the court decided against McCrossan, for the demurrer was overruled.

McCrossan sat just inside the railing, as nervous as a young man with his first cigarette. He twirled his hat, crossed and recrossed his legs, and looked askance at his attorney, who was doing the best he could with a bad case.

"Stand up, Mr. McCrossan," said the court, and the mining-stock promoter almost collapsed as he limped to the place for judgment.

The complaint was read and he was asked how he pleaded. "Not guilty," he managed to say. A number of the investors in McCrossan's financial schemes were interested spectators, and remarked that the young promoter was not near as chipper as when he talked volubly about the good thing that was certain to come to those who put their coin into the Cordillera mine, located somewhere toward the sunset.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.
BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

RECEIVER BUSY. Evan Lewis, Receiver of the Consolidated (Carlson) Bank brought suit yesterday against George H. Woodruff and Nellie B. Woodruff, his wife, to collect $500 alleged to be due on a note given by the Woodruffs, March 27, 1908. This is the first action brought by the receiver to collect notes due the bank. All of the money on hand has been paid out by Lewis on the order of the court, amounting to 20 per cent. of the claims, and it is necessary for him to personally pay the expense of instituting suits against the debtors of the concern.

VALUE OF A HUSBAND. Natividad Romero brought suit yesterday against Ferdinand Snyder and the Metropolitan Contracting Company to recover $25,000 alleged to be due on account of the death of her husband, Diego Romero, that occurred at the cave-in on Third street last week.

DISCHARGED. Willard Beebe, charged with burglary, was discharged in Judge Davis's court yesterday, on motion of the District Attorney. It is now said that there was no chance to prove the crime against the boy, and that the committing magistrate acknowledged that no burglary had taken place, although he sent the accused to jail.

FORMAL GOOD-BY. A petition was filed in the Superior Court yesterday, asking that the Los Angeles-Nevada Mining Stock Exchange be allowed to go out of business, and close its corporate existence. It is alleged that all of the directors of the corporation have signed the petition to dissolve, and that all of the debts have been provided for. The concern has been out of business several weeks.

CASES CONTINUED. The appeals of G. Peterman, E. Berkoff, J. Ribaldi and E. Geriemes from the Police Court to test the constitutionality of the law relating to the sale of fruits and vegetables, set for hearing in Judge Davis's court yesterday, was postponed for a week on motion of the District Attorney.

LEADING.

"PUREST," IS COUNTY TITLE.

Los Angeles Deserves Medal for Food Honesty.

Fight Against Adulteration Pushed Constantly.

Economic Housewives Tempt Dealers to Fraud.

As a result of the campaign for pure food and drugs in this section of the State, Los Angeles has just been unofficially described as the "purest" county in the State, if not in the country, from the standpoint of the chemist.

The crusade, which was begun in January, 1908, is still going on, though not so much publicity is given the movement as at first. State Senator McCartney, author of the Pure Food Law which bears his name, stated yesterday that he sets no time limit to the completion of the task. He believes there will always be work to be done in the line of educating the public, as well as manufacturers and merchants.

The importance of the work is coming to be appreciated to such an extent that it is almost impossible to get an attorney of repute to undertake the defense of an individual or firm detected selling adulterated or misbranded goods.

It is said that the work has been done more thoroughly in this county than elsewhere for the reason that Senator McCartney, who is also a Deputy District Attorney, personally prosecutes all violations of the law. He is devoting all of his spare time to overseeing the work of the agents and inspectors.

The best firms in the city are seconding his efforts, and practically all the large concerns are coöperating in every way to secure a rigid enforcement of the provisions of the bill.

Pure-food legislation is not of recent date. California had pure-food provisions in the code as early as 1872, but machinery was lacking for their enforcement.

HOUSEWIFE BLAMED.

The primary purpose of the law is to protect the consumers from fraud on the part of manufacturer and retailer. But when the housewife insists upon the cheapest brands of canned goods, she is unconsciously opposing the operation of the measure, since adulteration arose from the demand for the cheapest food products. When the retailer found his high-priced goods were not selling, he increased his orders for the cheaper brands, which, obviously, were not as good.

The pure-food law is enforced under the direction of the State Board of Health. There is a laboratory for testing samples, and after the report of the State Chemist is made to the board, the offending party has fifteen days in which to appear before it at Sacramento and give excuses for misbranding or adulteration. The board issues a certificate based on the report of the chemist, and this is prima-facie evidence, if the defendant fights the case in court.

IMPRISONMENT POSSIBLE.

The complaint is issued by the District Attorney. If the violation occurred in the city, the prosecution takes place in the Police Court; if in the county, in the justice court. In nearly every instance, the dealer caught violating the law pleads guilty and pays a nominal fine. If he is deemed a hardened offender, the court has the power to impose a maximum penalty of a fine of $500, six months' imprisonment in the County Jail, or both fine and imprisonment.

The act provides that "the manufacture, production, preparation, compounding, packing, selling, offering for sale or keeping for sale or having in one's possession any adulterated, misbranded or mislabeled article of food or liquor is a misdemeanor."

The term "imitation," as used in the law, means any compound which is a counterfeit of some food or drug. If any article has been artificially colored or flavored, it must be so labeled to come within the legal provisions.

Only harmless colors may be used. All chemical dyes and preservatives are forbidden, but sodium benzoate or benzoic acid, not exceeding one-tenth of 1 per cent., may be used as a preservative.

The McCartney law conforms with the national one upon the same subject. The Federal bill was first enacted, and the California law in 1907.

PREPARED FOODS DEMANDED.

There is an enormous demand for prepared foods today. One can get almost anything ready cooked, or in cans at the nearest grocery. This has led to adulteration in order that the manufacturer may make more profit, or compete with other firms putting up an inferior product.

"LIKE MOTHER'S" CATSUP.

Catsup can be prepared "like mother used to make," so that it will keep indefinitely. But the use of spices proved expensive, so an easier way was found to preserve the condiment—adding benzoate of sodium. If the tomatoes lacked color, some coal tar product was used to brighten the mass. An artificial flavor could also be added. Similar processes were used in the preparation of other foodstuffs. Such wholesale adulterations led to the first pure-food investigation by the Federal authorities.

In this county since January, 1908, more than 2000 samples of foods and drugs have been collected by the inspectors and approximately 300 complaints have been filed in the city and county courts. In almost every instance the defendant entered a plea of guilty.

"I am most grateful to the firms in this city and county which have aided me in this campaign," said McCartney. "I have received many expressions of approval for my work. For nearly two years we have endeavored to conduct a campaign of education in an effort to secure proper labeling, branding and manufacture of foodstuffs.

"We have found the great majority of manufacturers, dealers and wholesalers anxious to comply with the law and ready to lend a hand in assisting.

"To any one familiar with the conditions of the food market before this law went into effect, the present condition shows a great change. Most articles of food now on the market are properly labeled. All deceptive names and descriptions have been removed and many of the harmful preparations have been done away with. The enforcement of the law has undoubtedly resulted in a great benefit to the consuming public."

in Justice Summerfield's court yesterday on the charge of making an assault upon his wife with intent to commit great bodily injury, a felony. In default of $2000 bail he was sent to the County Jail, the preliminary examination being booked for next Thursday.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

MULES STARVED SAY OFFICERS.

SWEAR OUT WARRANT FORMER GARBAGE CONTRACTOR.

His Foreman Also Accused of Maltreating Animals Rented to City. Poverty Saves Two from Heavy Sentence—"Man Chambermaid" Is Cleared of Arson Charge.

Warrants charging S. McClure, former city garbage contractor, and Calvin H. Thomas, his foreman, with cruelty to animals were sworn out in Justice Chambers's court yesterday.

The police say Thomas heard that he was going to be arrested, and sought safety in flight. McClure will probably be haled into court Monday morning.

The complainants are officers of the S.P.C.A. They declare the defendants are guilty of wanton cruelty to horses and mules. They took four of the animals to the hospital and ordered the owners to refrain from working eight others.

According to the story they told the prosecuting attorneys, the animals have not been given the proper care or sufficient food. They say one team of mules purchased for $500 several months ago are now almost valueless.

When McClure lost the city contracts, he rented the horses and mules and wagons to the municipality. The city drivers have complained that they were told to take the crippled animals or none.

Frees "Man Chambermaid."

Octoviani Almanza was given his freedom from a charge of arson by Justice Rose yesterday. Mrs. Virginia Shipley, proprietress of a rooming-house at No. 361 North Main street, accused the defendant of attempting to burn her place of business to get revenge for being discharged from a position as "man chambermaid."

The magistrate held that the evidence failed to connect Almanza sufficiently to warrant holding him for trial in the Superior Court.

Not Guilty, Say Gamblers.

Five men caught when Oscar's place, No. 143 South Broadway, was raided on the 17th inst., pleaded not guilty to charges of gambling before Justice Chambers yesterday. C. O. Cartlich, the accused keeper of the joint, will be tried before a jury October 15. F. C. ("Poker") Davis, R. J. Horner, George Warren and H. Henry, who are charged with being players, will have a jury trial October 12.

Where Poverty Paid.

The fact that S. Badastian and S. Burrow were poor men and had families to support won them leniency in Justice Chambers's court yesterday, when they pleaded guilty to charges of cruelty to an animal. They were fined $5 each.

An officer arrested the men while they were driving an old horse, suffering with such a deep ulcer in its back that it will probably be killed. The prisoners told the justice they felt sorry for the beast, but had found it necessary to use the animal to make a living.

PITIFUL.

SEEKS REFUGE BEHIND BARS.

LAD PLEADS WITH COURT FOR PRISON TERM.

Admits He Is Forger for Food. Begs to Be Sent to Penitentiary, Where He Hopes Ravages of White Plague in His Wasted Form May Be Checked.

An unusual scene was presented in Judge Davis's court yesterday, when Clarence Crane, alias Edinger, a tall, raw-boned youth, who plainly showed his southern origin, asked the court to send him to the penitentiary in order that he might be treated for tuberculosis, from which he is evidently suffering.

The lad aroused the universal sympathy of those in the courtroom. His condition is pitiable, and his voice so weak that he could hardly be heard. The court asked the lad for his story.

Crane said that he was born and raised in Florida, and drifted into Northern California, but there his lung affection became so acute that he was compelled to come to the southern part of the State. He had no money, but sought employment on the aqueduct, where he was able to do a little dishwashing, his physical condition not being such as to enable him to bear any heavier burden. But he got sicker, and lost his place. When he was cut adrift, he says, D. J. Desmond gave him but 40 cents. In need of money for medicine, he forged the name of Desmond to a pay check for $8.20, for which he was arraigned.

"I am guilty, may it please the court," he said, feebly, "and I want to go to prison. I have heard that at the penitentiary there are physicians who assist such as I, and I want to be where I can have the benefit of their skill. I was never in trouble before in my life, believe me, sir, and only the necessities of my case made me forge. I am ready to go, sir—" but his voice broke, and he could say nothing more.

Judge Davis was affected, and quietly told Asst. Dist.-Atty. McComas: "We will look into this matter further; let the case be postponed until Monday. There ought to be some way of keeping this young man out of prison, under the circumstances."

Crane is friendless and alone, or the probation law would be quickly invoked in his behalf. It is looked on by some of the officials as a case that calls for public commiseration and action on the part of some philanthropic person in Los Angeles.

it became Government to write He tickets, thus independent Fickert's crowd and organized The result was Republican independent Committee, of the Heney's Republican Fick and ocratic vote cast was 8181. On the Union Labor ticket, Fickert's name was written in 3186 times, and Heney's 648 times, the total party vote cast being 6441.

It is not difficult to figure out what this means. Coghlan received 3271 Republican votes, which really belonged to Fickert, and will go to him at the November election. Counting these, Fickert received 20,375 votes and Heney 7396.

The total vote cast at the primary was 37,998. So Fickert received more than half, and at the same ratio—calculating that 60,000 votes will be polled at the contest in November—he will on that occasion sponge Heney off the slate.

What the Spreckels-Phelan combine intends to do in face of this prospect cannot now be surmised, let alone ascertained. Their newspaper organs, which employed the last three days of the campaign in throwing mud and circulating the usual lies, are strangely silent. The reform law which they invoked has been the cause of their undoing, and, having invented and loudly praised it, they are now estopped from adopting the resource of all defeated politicians, namely, howling "fraud." It is evident to them, as to almost everybody, that Heneyism, which consists of mud throwing, muck raking, blustering and political blatherskiting, is on the wane in San Francisco. Even the Democratic politicians anticipate a Republican sweep in November.

It is possible, of course, that Spreckels and Phelan may intricate Heney from this danger—they have money aplenty, and Phelan is an able politician; but to most intelligent observers the situation looks hopeless. The town is tired of the "great prosecutor" and his bluster. Having given him a fair trial, and he having failed to convict anybody—and the thieves being at large on immunity contracts—the voters have manifested in this election an unmistakable disposition to get rid of him.

In other respects, the new law proved that it is far from being the reform measure that it is cracked up to be. The total vote polled was 37,998, as against 33,536 at the delegate primary last year. Every boss won. Gavin McNab nominated his entire ticket. So did Pinhead McCarthy. On the Republican side "Tim" Sullivan's machine nominated Crocker, Fickert and eleven Supervisors. The Spreckels-Phelan machine nominated seven Supervisors, and most of the other officers, except those won by the "butters-in," like Eggers and O'Donnell.

So, instead of producing a superior article of government, as was predicted by the reformers, the new primary law has made no change in the situation whatever. In every political convention the "slate" is broken. That is all Eggers, O'Donnell and the others did on Tuesday. Instead of the "surprises" emerging from the pit of a foul-smelling hall, filled with perspiring politicians, they emerged in this case from the ballot boxes. The main difference was in the cost. This primary cost the candidates nearly as much as a general election. They placarded the dead walls and flooded the town with cards in the usual manner, and at the usual figures. The repitition of this process in November may, and probably will, break many of them.

PRICELESS DRUM.

Los Angeles Veteran Refuses to Sell War Relic Captured During the Revolution.

While $10,000 is a large sum to have tied up in a snare drum, Robert Bain of this city has refused that amount for an ancient, battle-scarred instrument that he is using whenever occasion requires. Bain is a member of the Los Angeles Veterans' Drum Corps of twenty members. They are all men who saw service in the dark days of the '60's, and many of their drums and fifes were carried by them throughout the South in memorable campaigns.

Bain's prized drum.

Bain beat this drum during the Civil War, his father before him used it in the New York State militia, his grandfather carried it through the Mexican War, and his great-grandfather took possession of it during the Revolutionary War. It was captured from Burgoyne on October 17, 1777, at the battle of Behmis Heights, sixteen miles out of Saratoga. Bain says he will not part with the old friend at any price, but will hand it down to the next generation.

CRAWLING DEATH CERTIFICATES.

TWENTY-SEVEN BABY WIGGLERS JOIN COLLECTION.

Deputy Clerk in United States District Court Proud Owner of Two New Breeds of Snakes—Mamma Copperheads and Natrix Fasciata Doing Well, Thank You.

Twenty-seven baby snakes is the latest increase in the reptilian family of Virgil W. Owen, deputy clerk in the United States District Court. The little wiggly things are of two species, and the mothers and youngsters are doing well at No. 150 North Flower street.

A pretty, bright-green copperhead, an agkistrodon contortrix, whose bite is a practical certificate of death, is the proud mother of four greenish things which she apparently thinks are the finest copperhead babies in the world. Rather than that any mere human should injure them she is inclined to swallow them alive, just to end their troubles. But pending this untoward fate the "kiddies" are lively and joyous wrigglers, and bask in the sun as though their pleasure was the only reason for its shining.

The other twenty-three babies are the special property of a Texas water snake, known to science as a natrix fasciata. It is a pretty difficult mathematical problem to count the "skidoo" babies while they are crawling in and out among the coils of their mother, but it is easy to accomplish by picking them up one at a time.

The way these new-born snakelets coil up and stick out their tiny tongues in warning, shows how precocious they are, and how justly their yard-long mamma has a right to be proud of them.

The other snakes in the collection, including three varieties of rattlers, a few water moccasins, and coral snakes, are quite envious, and would be glad of the opportunity to top off a healthy young rat with a pistasche copperhead or a layer-cake-looking natrix.

FUNERAL OF MRS. BROWNE.

The funeral of Mrs. Frank E. Browne, No. 3219 Figueroa street, was conducted yesterday at the Bresee chapel. She had been a resident of Los Angeles since 1875, when her husband embarked in business here. Mrs. Browne was known for the universal kindly spirit she evidenced to all she met, and which endeared her to very many of the city's best people, who will keenly regret her loss.

EARLY MORNING WEDDING.

Miss Hazel Cruess and Earl Bowne were married yesterday morning at the residence of the bride's uncle, Rev. Robert Renison, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, who performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. The newly-wed couple, after a short wedding trip, will reside at No. 1320 Arapahoe street.

"THE TIMES" STANDARD GUIDE.

The Times' Standard Guide to Southern California, to be issued in October, will be the only complete and authoritative guide book to Southern California that has ever been published. It will cover every possible form of information necessary or of interest to the tourist or to the resident. The following are a few briefly-outlined departments of the many which will appear in the guide:

Every railroad route, trolley route, automobile road or carriage drive of interest in Southern California is outlined in brief, with a description of each. The correct pronunciation of Spanish names is given. A complete directory of all the hotels of prominence and the chief restaurants of Southern California; a list, with description, of the amusement places, of industrial and art exhibitions, sports, parks, libraries, office buildings, banks, hospitals, churches and services, public and Federal buildings, electric and railway stations, stables, taxicab and cab stands, sanitariums, springs, resorts, camps, historic landmarks, etc.; a description and history of every mission and of every city and town with a population over 500 in Southern California. The Guide will contain numerous maps and plans.

The information will not be in a simple index directory form, but in each instance an adequate description will be given concerning the subject, the object of the Guide being to answer practically all questions which the tourist or the resident may ask concerning Southern California.

Shortly after the return of the Atlantic fleet, two naval officers were talking about their wives. Naturally they used natutical terms.

"Ain't No Father."

An Episcopal minister, who had but recently moved to a small town in the Pennsylvania coal regions, passed two youngsters on the street.

"Good morning, father," said one of them, misled by the clerical garb.

"Don't you know nutt'n?" said the other, contemptuously, when the minister was past. "That guy ain't no father. Why, he's married an' got two kids!"—[Cleveland Leader.

MINES AND MINING—Activities in the Ore Districts of the Great Southw

GOLDFIELD.

CONSOLIDATED DEVELOPMENT.

Description of Huge Mine Underground.

Merger Greatly Simplifies Bookkeeping.

For Nearly a Mile Openings Are Continuous.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Aug. 20.—The Consolidated's mining operations have assumed proportions the magnitude of which can hardly be appreciated with the aid of information ordinarily available. For a distance of over 5400 feet, or nearly a mile, the mine workings at various levels are opened almost continuously, from the northern portion of the Red Top claim, on the north to the territory joining the old Reilly lease, on the Florence and upon the Combination No. 2 and Side Line Fraction, adjoining the Combination Fraction on the west. One result of the recent absorption by the Consolidated of the stock of its subsidiary companies has been the practical elimination of all boundary lines in the classification of production. Whereas the old system required that every ton of ore be accounted for as coming from a certain claim or property, the entire output is now classed as from one of three mines, the Mohawk, Red Top or Combination, according to the shaft through which the ore is hoisted.

At present, the company is relying upon a regular production of about 22,000 tons monthly, divided among the three mines as follows: Mohawk, 10,000 tons; Red Top, 6000 tons, and Combination, 6000 tons. A large portion of the Red Top tonnage comes from the Lucky Boy claim, and an equally large proportion of the output classed as from the Mohawk is being taken from the gigantic stopes near the border of the Jumbo and Mohawk, but principally from the Jumbo. This system of operating has resulted in the elimination of a vast amount of clerical work, which was formerly necessary in the classification of the output to show its exact source in order that each of the component properties should receive credit for its individual yield.

NEW EXPLORATION.

The Consolidated has recently begun development at several points which is of peculiar interest from the fact that it has for its object the exploration of veins that have produced fortunes in high-grade ore in the past. Rich ore is being stoped in ground adjoining the old Reilly lease, at the southern extremity of the company's workings, where the ore has been opened at the fourth and fifth levels. Stoping is still confined to the fourth level at this point, but development is going forward at the fifth, and, for a large part of the distance, intervening between this point, on Combination No. 2, and the main Combination shaft, good ore has been exposed. The fifth level on this part of the property is 380 feet deep, or some distance below the greatest depth at which the bonanza ore was mined on the Reilly lease, which produced over $900,000 within 100 days.

COMBINATION FRACTION.

A crosscut is being driven from the Combination Fraction ground across Combination No. 1 claim, south of the mill and main shaft, toward the January. This work was started by the Combination Fraction company, and the drive was sent to the side line without locating the downward projection of the Hampton vein, which was the object of the work. From this point by arrangement with the Fraction company, the Consolidated is continuing the crosscut at a depth of 600 feet in order to avoid the expense of sinking another deep shaft, and, upon reaching the January, or cutting the Hampton vein it will be an easy and inexpensive operation to drive a raise to the old workings for air connection.

JUMBO-CORNISHMAN.

Another important feature to the plans being carried out by Superintendent H. P. Henderson is the driving of a tunnel from a point near the line separating the Jumbo and Cornishman claims of the Florence with the object of exploring the vein system on the Jumbo, which yielded large quantities of exceedingly rich ore in the early leasing days. The tunnel is being driven toward the workings of the old Zinn lease, one of the banner producers of five years ago, and while the depth will not be great, exploration of this section will be greatly facilitated by this method of development which can hardly fail to result in the opening of valuable reserves at a point that has been explored only at comparatively shallow depths.

CLERMONT SHAFT.

The ore body which was recently opened on the 730-foot level of the Clermont shaft is holding up in a most satisfactory manner, and is being developed with a view to making a heavy production in the future. At present only such ore is being removed as it is necessary to take out in the course of development, and the values are maintained well above the top milling grade. This ore was opened in driving southwest from the Clermont shaft, and at a point showing a uniform dip in the Mohawk-Jumbo ore shoot, of which this is the downward extension. The volume of ore exposed at this point indicates the existence of a large area of stoping backs, and that this ore body will prove one of the company's most valuable assets.

At the 860-foot level work is not as far advanced as above, and, while this lateral has already exposed some good values, Superintendent Henderson does not expect to reach the pay ore for some distance farther, unless the vein shall be found to assume an angle nearer the horizontal at this depth. Work at the 1000-foot level has been delayed by reason of the heavy flow of water, and the character of the preparatory work, involving the installation of a powerful station pump, the opening of a spacious station, skip pockets and ore bins of large capacity. A crosscut will be started at once from this level toward the Mohawk vein, which, as indicated from its dip in the workings at 600 feet, should be encountered at a distance of less than 400 feet from the shaft.

At the 600-foot station of the Clermont shaft, from which a crosscut 1200 feet in length connects with the bottom level of the Mohawk, a lateral is being driven toward the Lucky Boy ore body, from which heavy production is being made at the 260-foot level. This vein, the Red Top vein, after coursing through the Red Top nearly north and south, turns sharply to the southwest on the Lucky Boy, but maintains a uniform dip, and should be cut by the new drift from the Clermont within less than 2000 feet from the present face of the drift.

THE RED TOP.

A new crosscut from the Red Top shaft has cut the vein at the 330-foot level, and drifts have been started north and south. On the 260-foot level, from which the big production is being made on this vein, for a distance of 100 feet north and south from a point opposite the shaft, the values are lower than either north or south of that interval. To the north the company is opening a good tonnage at this level and south of the shaft, the stopes are continuous for 300 feet, extending into the Lucky Boy claim and following the vein on its sharp turn to the west, all of this ore being above the established milling grade and requiring mixing with ore of a lower grade for treatment.

THE MOHAWK.

In the Mohawk, while the production is widely distributed throughout the mine, the principal tonnage is from the stopes extending from the southeast corner fo the claim into the Jumbo and opened for the entire distance between the 450 and 600-foot levels. It is at this point that a winze is being sunk from the 600-foot level in a splendid body of high-grade milling ore, the deepest work on the Mohawk or the Jumbo. The Mohawk vein is at some points nearly 400 feet between walls. The main Mohawk shaft is largely in vein matter from above the 300-foot level to near the 600, where it has passed into the footwall. East of the shaft the 600-foot level has exposed a gigantic tonnage of excellent ore, above the mill grade, and at the 403-foot level the stopes have opened large quantities of high grade of the character which constituted the famous Hays-Monnette shipment, one carload of which netted over $580,000. Levels have been extended under the lease workings, and a good recovery of ore has been made from the caved workings by this means, of an average value, including the caved material, of over $25 per ton.

HAMPTON STOPE.

The Hampton stope has been further extended in dimension, and is opened for a length of about 200 feet, and, at one point, is nearly 100 feet wide. For a width of forty feet the entire body has averaged $195 per ton, and the additional material on the walls has been of a sufficient grade to mix with the top rate stuffing, reducing it to the desired grade for treatment. The middle seam, from four ot six feet wide, and averaging better than $1000 per ton, is left standing or stored in the workings until it is required to mix with the low grade ore. Stoping is in progress at the fourth and fifth levels, and the ore has been exposed for a long distance in the sixth level, a depth of 380 feet. Two drifts are being driven from the Hampton stope at the fourth and one at the fifth level to the north and northwest to explore a large area of virgin ground, over 700 feet in extent, embracing the northern portion of the Combination claim and extending to the territory of the former Ish-Sheets and Kalfus leases.

TONOPAH.

BELMONT BELOW ONE THOUSAND.

ORE FOUND AT GREATER THAN ELEVEN HUNDRED.

Stringers With Good Values Four to Twenty Inches—Mizpah Shaft Is Down to Fifteen Hundred Feet. Laterals Will Be Driven at That Point to Test Ground.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TONOPAH (Nev.) Aug. 20.—The best news from the Tonopah-Belmont is the finding of ore in the winze sunk from the 1056 level and which is down below the 1100 level. The winze is being sent down at an angle of thirty degrees from horizontal. During the week this winze has passed through stringers varying from four to twenty inches, all of which carried excellent values. This leads to the belief that the huge fault in the lower workings has been penetrated and the management inclines to the belief that these stringers are in the hanging wall of the Belmont vein and run parallel to that body. As soon as the winze reaches the 100-foot point a crosscut will be sent to pick up the new veins and prospect them.

Beginning this week the big Tonopah mine has been conducting operations on a larger scale than for some months past. This is due to the arrival of the new compressor which came in from Cincinnati last week and was installed with three shifts working at feverish speed. While considerable time was lost during the lull, owing to inadequate air facilities, it is the intention of the management to make up for lost time. The Mizpah shaft has reached the 1500 point and a sump has been sunk twenty-four feet lower. A station will be established at the 1500 level and then laterals will be driven to prospect the territory lying between that point and the 600 level. The mill report for the week shows that an average of ninety-eight stamps out of the 100 in the battery kept dropping in 2500 tons, which gave an extraction of values running up to 91 per cent. The bullion and concentrate shipments for the week approximated $60,000.

On the Montana-Tonopah the first of three parallel veins was found in the footwall of the Triangle vein above the 390 level and the development has added another source of supply of no small dimensions. The production was kept down through making some needed repairs to the big compressor, which left the work to the small steam compressor and hoist. The various ore bodies continue to hold their strength and values and the development is continually adding to the visible supply notwithstanding the extraction that is necessary to keep the forty-stamp mill going. Of late considerable attention has been paid to crosscutting in search of ledges paralleling the veins already opened and proven and the efforts in this direction have met with very satisfactory results.

BROKEN HILLS.

Lease at Luckyboy Continues Its Phenomenal Run of Good Luck.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LUCKYBOY (Nev.) Aug. 20.—Another strike of unusual importance has been made on the lease of the Broken Hills, which has had phenomenal luck since the day it started sinking. The discovery was made last Tuesday when ore was found on the hanging wall of the west drift from the 160-foot level, which gave values of $500 per ton. The ore is a white quartz in which the black metal and a small quantity of galena is carried. The extent of the find is not known as

When fully explored, it is expected to develop into one of the richest finds of the State. Another specimen of ore found on the Broken Hills ground runs 2000 ounces of silver to the ton. This company has taken out $58,000 since it began shipping six weeks ago.

When the Hubbard lease was surrendered on the first of the month the owners resumed work on the 450 level and is again taking out some of the best ore that the mine has produced. Where the leasers followed the meandering of the vein the company is driving drifts developing the fact that on both sides of the vein, ore of good value abounds. It will take sixty days to get the mine in perfect shape for shipping. The deepest part is down 530 feet but the work will be prosecuted from the 450 level for some time. Only the ore encountered in the drifts will be hoisted. Systematic mining should make the property as heavy a shipper as during the best days of the lease. One of the remarkable features of the owners is the opening of a ledge that cropped directly out on the surface. The leasers had passed over the two huge rocks close to their gallows frame which yesterday disclosed a ledge of pay rock that will give shipping values from the first stroke of the pick.

VICTOR'S RETURNS.

One Hundred and Sixteen Tons Net Seven Hundred Ounces.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RAWHIDE (Nev.) Aug. 20.—A nice little brick was the result of a run made by the Murray mill from 116 tons from the Victor lease. The run netted 702 ounces, which is said to be worth $6.80 per ounce owing to the presence of large quantities of silver in the solution. This shows that the ore went a little better than $30 per ton. This is a good showing for the Victor, which has bought the Murray mill and as they have large quantities of this class of ore the owners should be able to make a fine showing from this time on.

On the great Grutt Balloon Hill lease development is progressing as fast as possible, circumstances considered. The leasers are finishing a shipment that will go $280 per ton for a thirty ton lot. Another shipment of like value and quantity will go to the Hazen sampler this week. The company is mining a lot of mill rock that is averaging about $25 per ton, which they will begin to move to the local mills about September 1.

J. W. Lamsing of the Coalition-Crown Mining Company of Minneapolis, is in the market for a compressor and power plant that will enable him to operate drills. His property is on the edge of the Grutt Balloon Hill and it looks highly improbable that some of the rich ore shoots that are reported on either side of him should not come through his property.

MONTGOMERY-SHOESHONE.

May Report Shows Larger Debts Than Was Generally Aiticipated.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RHYOLITE (Nev.) Aug. 20.—The Montgomery-Shoshone has filed its report for the month of May with its stockholders, who are always kept in the dark for at least three months after the returns are sent to the parent office in the East. The statement shows that the receipts for May from shipments of concentrates and from the operations of subsidiary companies were $41,561.66, the expenses amounting to $26,017.35 for the same period, leaving the net results of the month $15,544.31. The statement shows that the bills payable from the company, including all loans with interest to date, amount to $233,497.31.

The amount of this indebtedness, considering the net earnings for May as a criterion, seems larger than local circles had anticipated and it is doubted if it will be wiped off the slate so that the company can begin dividend payments as predicted by the first of the year or soon thereafter. The report does not specify if the month of May was a normal month for production so it is not easy to get a very definite idea in regard to present conditions.

Platinum Not Present.

LOS ANGELES, July 19.—[To the editor of The Times:] I enclose three samples, which, as a reader of your paper, I ask you to analyze. Two of them are red ore, carrying gold and silver, one hard and the other soft, running side by side, which looks to be an ochre of good value, but which may be hematite. Will you kindly put me right on this matter and tell me in your "In the Earth" column, has it any trace of platinum? These two samples are numbered 7 and 8.

I submit, also, a small sample No. 6, coming from the same district, near Black Mountain, State of Sonora, Mexico. It is the hanging wall to a large conglomerate ledge carrying gold and silver. I call it porphyry. Please tell me what it is, if not that.

Thanking you in advance and hopingin your next issue to hear from former samples sent, I wish to state that your answer to this and my other request will be a great favor to me.

Respectfully, D. G. C.

ANSWER: We do not recall the former communication you refer to. If such a letter and samples were received by The Times, an answer was undoubtedly heretofore given in this department.

Replying, specifically, to the above letter: "No. C class of rock." It is feldspathic (porphyritic) rock. "No. 8" is red ochre with lead present, and would answer for low grade red paint material. "No. 7" resembles No. 8, but will not make pigment.

Increased Dividends.

A special dispatch to The Times from Goldfield states the Goldfield Consolidated plans an extra dividend as a Christmas gift to shareholders. It is also planned to increase largely the capacity of the big plant. These matters will be considered at the board's quarterly meeting, to be held at Goldfield the last week in November.

The usual dividend of 30 cents per share, amounting to $1,065,000, will be declared at the Chicago directors' meeting, August 26.

According to General Manager McKenzie it is probable the extra distribution will be made and some important additions made to the mill.

Shipments of high-grade from the Hampton stope will be resumed at once to get a large amount of it out of the way of development.

AMERICANS TO BE EMPLOYED.

Copper Queen to Get Rid of Alien Agitators.

Slavonians and Italians in Labor Troubles.

Company Wants Steady Men to Do Its Work.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Aug. 20.—From Bisbee has come a report that the Copper Queen and other large mining companies of that camp are progressing toward the Americanization of all labor employed in the mines. Bisbee never has been a Mexican camp, the only Mexicans utilized being a few on surface work, but large numbers of foreigners have been worked, especially Italian and Slavonian miners, who are understood to have been at the bottom of all the sporadic labor troubles of the camp, and who are not popular because of their habit of sending back to their homes in Europe a very large part of their wages. This class of foreigners is being replaced by Americans, English and Irish, men who are expected to become citizens, and who will have an interest in the welfare of the community. A very large proportion of the men employed in the Copper Queen have been with the company for many years, something very different from the majority of the camps of the Southwest. In one camp, three months' employment is considered about the usual thing.

Great bodies of sulphide ore are being developed on the 1400-foot level of the Lowell shaft of the Copper Queen Company, and a long drift is being run on that level to the Sacramento shaft, where most of the hoisting will be done. At the present time 1060 cars of ore a day are being hoisted at the Lowell. The Sacramento shaft is now below the 1500-foot level, and will be continued down to 1700 feet.

Development work in the Shattuck mine at Bisbee has shown ore averaging 17 per cent., depended upon to net the company at least $20 a ton at the present price of copper. The Denn mine is still in good ore, on the 1250-foot level, and there is now no doubt that it is one of the big mines of the Bisbee neighborhood.

The wet season has given a great deal of trouble to the Copper Queen, much of the water passing down Tombstone Cañon through the city of Bisbee, finding its way through cracks into the upper workings of the mine. At one time last Friday the company's pumps were reported to be raising water at the unprecedented rate of 2,000,000 gallons an hour, with everything in the way of pumps available in action. Most of this water is hoisted in the Czar shaft.

Steel "timbering" has proven unsuccessful when tested in the lower workings of the Copper Queen, and the company will return to Oregon pine.

M. F. Larkin, a prominent official of the International Corresponudence School of Scranton, Pa., has purchased at Sheriff's sale the property formerly held by the Cochise Consolidated Copper Company, for $24,846. This company has been backed in the past by Scranton capital, which is understood to have become very much dissatisfied with the management, which has spent large sums of money without material return, though there is a belief that the property is an excellent one.

GLOBE DISTRICT.

In Globe have been filed the articles of incorporation of the New Keystone Copper Company, with a capitalization of $3,000,000. Backing the company is the General Development Company, otherwise known as the Lewissohn Syndicate. The property upon which the incorporation is based is the old Keystone mine, which has been under bond and development for several months past.

The last statement of the Old Dominion Company, at Globe, shows that its copper is costing about 10¾ cents a pound, made from ore averaging from 8 to 10 per cent. at the smelter and 3 per cent. at the concentrator. Only 25 per cent. of the ore is concentrated. A new pumping plant is to be installed and is expected to reduce the cost by 1-3 of a cent a pound and to hoist about 4,000,000 gallons a day. It is believed that the cost will eventually be brought down to 8 cents a pound.

The Barney group of twenty-eight claims in Miami district has been sold to a Boston company by J. D. Coplen, J. B. Coplen and E. T. Wilder. The claims lie between the Miami and Keystone properties. It is told that the new purchasers are preparing to expend $250,000 in development alone.

Twelve claims, comprising the Stevens group, southwest of the Orphan mine near Globe, have been sold for a price reported to have been $125,000, to B. F. Harmsen, representing eastern capital. It has been planned to sink a 600-foot shaft as the basis of exploration work.

Six churn drill holes have been sunk on the Inspiration claims near Globe, striking good concentrating ore at the depth of ninety feet and running through good ore down to 350 feet. The ore body already developed in the Inspiration is 500 feet wide and 2000 feet long and probably not less than 300 feet in depth.

J. P. Ballard lately picked up on the bank of Pinal Creek, near Globe, a boulder containing at least 200 ounces of silver and valued at about $100. Years ago such boulders as these were found on the ground of the Silver Nugget claims, where at least $100,000 in silver was loaded direct into wagons and carted away. Sad to relate, however, the Silver Nugget never made a great mine and had a very immaterial sort of vein.

The full purchase price of $100,000 has been paid by the Superior and Boston Company for the Collins-Doyle mines, near Paradise, in the Chiricahua Mountains. In one of the claims a shaft 150 feet deep is in 12 per cent. copper ore for the entire depth.

Ore is being shipped from the famous El Temblor mine in the Tigre district in Sonora, worth up to $400 a ton.

The new custom smelter at Johnson camp is to be ready for operation within three months. The initial unit has a capacity for 125 tons a day. Coke and supplies for this smelter already are arriving in the camp.

A short distance east of Mesa is a ledge of spar, said to be very valuable for the percentage contained of barium sulphate. Barytes is a substance of high value, largely used as a body for white paint and in the making of the better grades of pottery.

AT WICKENBURG.

At a late meeting of the officers of the Central Arizona Power Company at once and to install at the earliest possible day more effective and more economical engines of the compound, condensing type. This determination meant also suspension of work at the Octave mine, the power company, an adjunct of the mining corporation, furnishing all power for the camp and for mine and mill operation. The 200-ton mill at the mine is to be overhauled and all surface machinery put into good shape by the time the power plant alterations have been made. The company has spent about $250,000 in improvements and development work in about a year, and is still spending about $10,000 a month in preliminary work. Large bodies of sulphuretic ore have been outlined, running from $5 to $20 a ton in gold.

A 25-horse-power gasoline hoist has been ordered for the main shaft of the St. Francis Mines Company, near Constellation. The shaft is now 100 feet deep, with a vein outlined that averages $20 to the ton in gold.

A strike of 30-per-cent. copper ore is reported to have been made last week in the Little Butte mine near Bouse.

The North Star gold claims in Yuma county are reported to have made a rich record last month in the production of $200,000 in gold with an expense account of only $15,000. The management has secured an ample supply of water from near-by wells.

YAVAPAI COUNTY.

Joe Mayer, one of the pioneers of the Big Bug section, has just been given an important decision in the Phoenix land office, which had ruled against a protest made regarding Mayer's application to patent seven placer claims near the town, which bears his name, it being alleged that the ground had no value for placer purposes and that the patent was wanted simply for townsite uses. Evidence was presented by Mayer that he had profitably worked the ground in question thirty years ago. He has secured patent to four other claims and is reported to have sold the whole eleven claims to a dredging company.

A first payment of $1000 has been made by a Seattle company on the purchase price of the Gold Basis mines in Broom Creek district near Prescott. The sale was made by the administrator of the estate of the late Mortimer H. Dodge, of Ohio. Included in the transaction are a five-stamp mill and five patented claims.

The famous Crowned King mines were offered at receiver's sale at Prescott last week, but with no bidders at the upset price of $75,000. The property has been in litigation for ten years, the whole trouble being between the owners. It contains an immense ledge of pyritic ore that runs as high at $80,000 a ton, but which is understood to average better than $12. A Colorado company has had experts examining the mine, but the inspection has been limited through the fact that the lower workings are full of water.

MOTHER LODE MINES OPENED.

SOUTHERN CAPITAL DEVELOPS NORTH OF STATE.

El Dorado, Placer, Calaveras, Sutter, Sierra and Shasta Counties Get Benefit of Money from This Region and from Arizona—Shasta Farmers Object to Smelters.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PLACERVILLE, Aug. 20.—El Dorado county is actively participating in the wave of prosperity that is sweeping over the mining districts of California, and a large number of mines that have lain idle for want of capital for many years are once more entering the list of active producers. Southern California and Arizona people are heavily interested in the companies revivifying local districts and control of many of the principal properties has passed into the hands of men from the south.

The Mt. Pleasant is one of the famous old properties that was recently taken over by San Francisco and Los Angeles capitalists and is being energetically developed. The shaft has been unwatered to the 500 level and as soon as the 600 point has been reached crosscutting will commence. Active work is centered at the 300 level, where a number of small veins carrying excellent values are receiving attention. At the Morey, where the vein parallels the Mt. Pleasant ledge, ore running $100 per ton is being extracted in large quantities.

In the Diamond Springs section, the Larkin has been taken over by southern and eastern capitalists and will be immediately reopened under the supervision of Charles H. Dunton. The Alderson, a near-by group, has also been secured and both will be worked through a main adit from the Larkin. Phillip Hickey of Phoenix, Ariz., is arranging to start active work on a number of promising claims. The Boden ranch has been acquired by J. H. Johnson and the placer gravels will be worked hydraulically. The Debris Commissioners have been appealed to for a permit. The owners of the Gold Crown, near Virner, have opened a ten-foot ledge of milling ore running $6 to $12 per ton at a depth of thirty feet and are actively developing it. An eight-inch shoot of rich ore has also been encountered. It has been decided to erect a mill at once, and to drive the main tunnel ahead and push developments vigorously. The Loveless Mining Company has purchased 140 acres of mineral land from Perry Sherman and will prosecute operation on a more extensive scale. Los Angeles people are interested, in addition to several eastern stockholders. Good ore is being developed and the management is pleased with conditions.

CALAVERAS COUNTY.

The greatest mining deal in the history of Calaveras county has been practically concluded whereby eastern capitalists have secured control of the famous Utica, Lightner and Etna-King mines, in addition to the holdings of the Union Water Company and Angels Light and Power Company.

Many Southern Californians are concerned and it is expected that the deal is the forerunner of the most active era Calaveras has ever recorded. The Utica is one of the greatest properties on the mother lode and has been a steady and profitable producer practically since the first discovery of gold on the property. It has been developed to enormous depth and has demonstrated the persistent nature of the big veins in the district. It is equipped with a 100-stamp mill, complete hoisting and pumping plant, etc.

The Etna-King is a well developed and active producer, while the Lightner is one of the big mines of the county. While no figures have been given out, it is understood that the price involved in the transfer runs into the millions. It is reported that the new syndicate has its eye on other important properties and is about to open negotiations along this line.

SUTTER COUNTY.

It is reported at Yuba City that Los Angeles and eastern capital has be-coal, oil and gas fields in the Sutter Butte Mountains, Sutter county. Extensive prospecting, and some development, has demonstrated the presence of good bodies of coal and large deposits of natural gas. That oil will be found at depth is the opinion of many experts who have visited the region. Lack of transportation facilities has hitherto mitigated against the advancement of the district, but with the early completion of the extension of the Northern Electric road through the district from Yuba City to Colusa, this handicap will be removed.

PLACER COUNTY.

Placer county is manifesting unusual activity in its mining sections. The El Dorado-Placer Dredging Company, composed of Los Angeles people, is arranging to reconstruct the Cash Rock dredge at Horseshoe Bar, where large deposits of good grade gravel are available. Tests of the deposit are said to be eminently satisfactory and work on the new boat will commence at once. The dredge will be of the combination bucket-suction type, and is expected to prove completely successful. The dredge will be operated with electricity from the Martin-De Sabla plant at Horseshoe Bar. The Golden West has driven its tunnel 2400 feet into the hill and is now under a big body of gravel. It is believed that the rich main channel has been cut and raising will be commenced.

The Pacific Mining Company, another Los Angeles corporation, has opened an immense body of profitable gravel and is pushing extensive developments. President M. C. Threlkell reports that the old river channel has been cut and that conditions are excellent. The McGeachin company, which recently secured the Morning Star gravel mine, has started work with a small crew.

It is reported that the Home Ticket and other mines near Michigan Bluffs, owned by W. S. Fletcher of Pasadena, will shortly reopen with a full force of miners. These are the properties that were forced to close because of a strike of the miners, following the employment of two Chinese underground. It is understood that the management has decided to withdraw the Asiatics, thus removing all cause of complaint against the company.

SHASTA FARMERS MAD.

The fume nuisance in Shasta county is assuming serious proportions, as farming interests all over the affected districts are organizing into protective associations to fight the smelters. The Mammoth and Balaklala companies are principally affected, but the trouble will affect other plants as they commence activity. It has been decided to ask the County Supervisors to enact an ordinance similar to the one adopted by Contra Costa county

"Young feller," said Chantry, "Don't you go to getting me riled up."

There was a flash of steel as the trusty gun whipped out of the holster.

Chantry, at this point, reached up and tenderly removed the bad young thing from the saddle.

When Chantry had dragged him to the ground, he didn't know what to do next with him; he looked so young and fair. He didn't like to beat him to death. He held him for a while until he thought it over; then an idea occurred to Chantry.

He took the revolver away from the bad man and drew him over where a stout cracker box stood. Seating himself on the box, Chantry took the young man's fair young form across his knees (rear side up) and paddled him with the broad side of his stalwart palm where he thought it would do the most good.

When it was over and thoroughly done, Chantry gave him back his weapon and waved him a kind farewell as the desperado marched on down to the trolley with a new and peculiar stiffness.

[illegible] has recently [illegible] report that [illegible] young society woman of New York, Newport and other parts, is headed this way.

On the occasion of her last visit, Miss Sears horrified the island by playing polo in men's clothes and going in swimming airily attired in a man's bathing suit.

One of the features of the tent city, this year, is a series of "neighborhood parties," organized by the management. It is like a municipal party. I suppose when socialism comes this will be all we have to do, and Gaylord Wilshire will be the public entertainer.

The management really does employ a public entertainer and he is a young man, wise in his time as you can witness by the programme of some of his recent parties.

One day, each week, the ladies of the tent town are the guests, and one day a week the children.

Observe the philosophy of the professional host. When the women gather with their sewing, he welcomes them with a free palmist to tell their fortunes. And you can be sure his parties are successes. There may have been a woman somewhere too old or too blasé to have her fortune told; but history records not the case.

The parties for children sometimes are straw rides down the peninsula. The one last week was a parody on the newspaper circulation scheme, "The search for the mysterious Mr. Raffles." Mr. Raffles first greeted the children assembled in the pavilion; then stepped into a tent; put on a disguise, and the chase began with shrieks of excitement and discarded false whiskers all over the place.

A special cemented bathing pool is also provided for the children.

Except in the old days of Catalina, when so many Los Angeles society people used go to Avalon in tents, I have not seen such pretty canvas homes.

This season, some originated the odd but attractive custom of decorating the outside of the tent walls as well as the inside. So you walk along streets that are flanked by pictures of Gibson girls, hanging steins and flaming color prints.

In the early part of the season, the colony used to turn with excitement to welcome brides; but the tent city has become such a place for honeymoons that the colony has become quite blasé in this regard.

The tent city is one of the few places on the coast where the boating is good. The canoeing here, as at Balboa, makes a picturesque feature of summer life.

Gold Silver Copper Tests.

MAMMOTH (Ariz.) July 16.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am a prospector. Would you kindly give me some simple chemical tests for gold, silver and copper; or some book that I can get them from?

I often run up against rock that carries gold which will not pan and sometimes a long distance from assayers.

Yours very respectfully, J. M. M.

ANSWER: The fire assay is, of course, the best method for testing ores of gold, silver and platinum.

Many ores of copper are easily tested qualitatively by powdering a little of the ore, placing it in a clean test tube, or other glass container; then pour a little nitric acid over the ore. When the solution clears up pour it off into a saucer, take a clean 20-penny wire nail and dip one end of it in the solution. If copper is present it will immediately "cement" on to the polished nail.

For silver proceed as suggested for copper, but—instead of using a polished wire nail—dilute the acid solution with half rain water and drop a few drops of hydrochloric acid into the dilute solution, or, in the absence of hydrochloric acid drop a few drops of strong salt (common table salt) solution into the test tube containing the supposed silver present. If a cloudy white precipitate settles out it is silver, provided the precipitate blackens after exposure to sunlight for a few seconds.

Mercury, and lead, is also precipitated from a nitric acid dilute solution with the same salt solution or hydrochloric acid as reagents—but neither lead or mercury present will darken in the sunlight; then, to distinguish between lead and mercury dip a copper wire or strip into the solution; if mercury is present it will instantly cement to the copper giving it a silver plaited appearance, as it were.

Darton's gold test: Take one-fourth of an ounce of powdered ore and place half of it in a big test tube, then pour over the ore in test tube—until you have, in volume, about three times as much solution as you have ore. The solution referred to is made by dissolving 40 grains of iodine and 60 grains of iodide of potassium in 3 fluid ounces of water.

Shake the mixture for, say, one hour, at intervals of ten minutes, then after all particles are precipitated dip a piece of white filter paper into the solution for a moment then let the paper dry over a camp stove; heat the paper to red heat over flame of alcohol lamp (holding it in platinum forceps or piece of iron wire.) Gather the paper ash formed carefully into a clean saucer. If this ash is purple colored when cold—gold is undoubtedly present.

"Prospectors' Field Book and Guide—Osborn," is a good one for the boys in the hills.

Tripoli.

LOS ANGELES, July 16.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In deer-hunting I found, in California, a ten-foot ledge of this stone. Makes a high grade polish. For the benefit of your subscribers kindly enlighten us through the columns of The Times.

"SUBSCRIBER."

Botryoidal Limonite.

LOS ANGELES, July 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] While reading the Sunday Times I saw a place entitled "In the Earth," where you explained what samples of ore are. In this package you will find some samples. I would like to know what they contain. I think they contain some gold and tin. This is found in Mexico. Will look for an answer in The Times. Oblige, A. H. T.

ANSWER: We, occasionally, have "explained what samples of ore are."

Specimen No. 1 is botryoidal limonite (yellow iron oxide.) No. 2 is a conglomerate of pebbles, iron oxides and manganese dioxide. No. 3 is dioryte. Tin not present in any sample. For gold values please consult your assayer.

Barium Sulphate.

OSCEOLA (Nev.) July 17.—[To the editor of The Times:] This sample comes from an extension to my claim on which I have wolframite, twelve miles north of Osceola. Its weight puzzles me and it is so heavy that it may be carbonate of lead. The lead of it is about twenty inches wide.

Please favor me with name and description of the ore in the "In the Earth" colums and greatly oblige.

Yours gratefully, D. C. F.

ANSWER: Glad to hear from you. The sample is named at sub-heading; it is known, also, as baryte and heavy spar. Material represented by the specimen is pure enough for a high grade baryte paint, superior to so-called "white lead," where a paint is required to stand acid fumes, or other corrossive exhalations from nature's magazines.

Micaceous Iron Ore.

ELKHORN (Or.) July 19.—[To the editor of The Times:] Would like to know what the enclosed sample is through the columns, "In the Earth." Thought it silver, but assays do not show it. This is from the North Santiam mining district, Marion county, Oregon.

Very respectfully, C. J. P.

Itacolumite.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 19.—[To the editor of The Times:] Kindly name the enclosed sample of peculiar rock, found near Lake Tahoe.

Yours truly, T. E. F.

ANSWER: The sample is named at subheading. It is also known as flexible sandstone (a fissile variety.) "The flexibility of the mineral is owing apparently to the dissemination of small scales of mica through the mass."

No Platinum Present.

LEE (Cal.) July 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Find inclosed ten samples. If consistent will you let me know through your "In the Earth" what they are, and if they contain any precious metal. Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4 are taken at a depth of about four feet in the Funeral Mountain Range and about four miles west of post 98, about 10 deg. south (California and Nevada State line.)

No. 1 pans a silver white metal, which I have taken as platinum. Is it? Does it contain gold or iridium? Nos. 2 and 3, or the walls of No. 1, do they contain any values, and is this serpentine? Further, is No. 1 chrysolite? No. 4 is out of No. 1 sample. Will you name it?

No. 1 B is just two miles west from Nos. 1 to 4—is this rhyolite? Does it carry gold values enough to further prospect on? It is a massive, and sample was taken at first shot. Samples 1-A to 5-A were taken from the same mountain range, and about six miles west from No. 1 B, on the east side of a very deep cañon, leading direct to Breyfogle Cañon, and is, about, six and a half miles east of Kane-Wonder mines.

No. 1-A, I call it corundum. Is it? and what would the name of this blue stone be? No. 2-A is the quartz that the blue stone is on. (Unable to find it in the quartz, on the surface only in bunches.) No. 3-A comes under 2-A, and No. 4-A under 3-A—what is it? Do you think it contains any mineral? If so, will you please name it? No. 5-A is, and comes, under 4-A. It is very massive, and can be seen for one and a half miles or more, about twenty feet wide. Looks like cinnabar; and yet, it may be bismuth. Will you kindly state what it contains, if anything?

I thank you in advance for any information you can or will give pertaining to these samples, and assure you there is a lot of prospectors awaiting your reply. Part of this district has, up to date, not been prospected, and I am sure some very rich mines will be opened in this vicinity, and with the assistance of the Los Angeles Times' "In the Earth" department, it will put some of us prospectors "on velvet."

Respectfully, L. S.

ANSWER: When you boys get to firing questions, it makes the editor of this department hike mentally, with as much energy as if he were climbing a 300-foot ladder. You send quite a bunch of samples—but it's all right.

Probably the best way to get at the specimens is to refer to them as numbered on attached slips.

No. 1 is smalt blue dumortierite, with coating of mica schist. The white metallic lustered inclusions are mixtures of iron and antimony sulphides, and no sample reacts for platinum or iridium.

No. 2-A is quartz with mica schist coating. No. 3-A is not serpentine, it is a talcose-micaceous form of asbestos, and of probable value for various packing, axle grease, etc. No. 4-A is a foliated mica schist of no commercial value. No. 5-A is a micaceous and silicious iron peroxide (hematite) with not a trace of cinnabar present. Samples "1 to 4." No. 1 is quartz with hematite inclusions—not corundum. There is no sample of corundum among the lot by you submitted. No. 2 is on the order of a mottled trachyte. No. 3 is like 2, but not so far decomposed as No. 2. No. 4 is a mixture of azurite and malachite, quartzitic, and from a stringer. "No. 1 B" is rhyolitic, but not true rhyolite. All of your samples look "pretty lean for gold." Assay for gold and platinum.

The Times always has the interest of the great Southwest at heart, including the worthy "prospectors" of all sections of our peerless country.

Fine Baryte Sample.

COLTON, July 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will be glad to have you inform me the kind of rocks the inclosed specimens (local) are.

Yours truly, A. F. T.

ANSWER: The white sample is heavy spar (barium sulphate,) and represents a variety of commercial value for prospective salts of barium and "white paint body," for paint purposes. The blackish green specimen is an impure iron silicate (hornblendic.)

FAIR PLAY FOR PRESIDENT DIAZ.

[W. O. Temple, in Moody's Magazine for August, 1909.]

A highly sensational book has just been published under the title of "Diaz, Czar of Mexico." The author calls himself Carlo de Fornaro. In the title of the book, it is very frankly and properly styled "an arraignment," since the book is an indictment of President Diaz of the most sweeping character.

I hold no brief from Gen. Diaz, nor have I ever asked or received a favor at his hands, except the unsolicited courtesy of a brief audience on one occasion. But I believe the ninth commandment has a broader meaning than the mere injunction not to bear false witness. By implication it forbids a man to remain silent when he knows that his neighbor is unjustly accused. Aside from my researches as an impartial student of history, I feel that my knowledge of Mexican conditions, acquired by extensive travel and personal observations in that country, has qualified me to speak not only with confidence, but with some degree of authority upon the subjects I shall discuss.

Considering the character of the offense, the greatest charge which Mr. Fornaro prefers against President Diaz is the assassination of his rivals, the wholesale slaughter of political prisoners at Vera Cruz on the 25th of June, 1879, and the alleged shooting by soldiers of innocent men, women and children during the strike at the Orizaba Mills.

But these three counts in the indictment rest entirely upon mere accusation, unsupported by a single scrap of evidence. Even if Generals Corona, Cadena and Martinez could have been, by any stretch of imagination, considered as rivals of Gen. Diaz, the facts presented by Fornaro show no more reason for charging Porfirio Diaz with their death than there is for suspecting Roosevelt of inciting the assassination of McKinley, or for holding Thomas Jefferson responsible for the death of his great rival, Alexander Hamilton, because he was killed during Jefferson's Presidential term by his fellow Democrat, Aaron Burr, who was also Vice-President at the time.

As to the summary execution by Gen. Teran of Vicente Capmany and his co-conspirators at Vera Cruz, it should be remembered that this was n the year 1879, when this was the isual method in Mexico of disposing f the leaders of an unsuccessful revolt against the existing government. Men who plotted against the government were traitors by the law of the and, and the penalty was death. Even in our country, only fifteen years prior to the Vera Cruz incident, there vas a powerful sentiment in the North which demanded that Jefferson Davis should be summarily executed s a traitor, and Grant was bitterly ensured for his leniency to Gen. Lee. Therefore, the execution of the gallant evolutionists at Vera Cruz must be udged by the standards of that time, nd not, as Fornaro would have it, y the infinitely more humane standrds of this more enlightened day.

Fornaro admits that the most cometent witness in regard to the Vera rus tragedy is Rafael Zayas Enriuez, who was District Judge of Vera rus at the time, and who subseuently removed to New York City, so as," according to Fornaro, "to be ble to write with freedom of the ctual conditions in Mexico." In his ook, entitled "Porfirio Diaz," Enquez defends the President and pracally exonerates him from blame.

Even more far-fetched and absurd is e attempt to charge President Diaz ith responsibility for the killing of e Orizaba strikers by the Mexican oops. It would be no whit more abrd to hold President Roosevelt reonsible for the deportation of the ripple Creek strikers by our State ilitia in 1904, because it occurred ring his term of office, or Grover eveland for the shooting of the railad strikers by the United States ilroad troops sent to Chicago in 94, to protect the transportation of e mails over the railroads involved the strike.

A second count in the "arraignent" is that the personal liberties of e Mexican people, for which they d been fighting for sixty-five years, ve been destroyed by Gen. Diaz in irty years, for his own aggrandizeent. It is too bad that Mr. Fornaro iled to enumerate and define just at sort of personal liberty he agined has been lost. For unless contemporaneous history is a lie, e personal liberties of the Mexican ople prior to the time of Diaz were ly such liberties as were enjoyed in e darkest days of feudalism upon e continent—the liberty of the rong to oppress the weak, the linse of the vicious to rob and pillage d murder with impunity the pastne of plotting against the governnt, the liberty of the wealthy few spend their lives in enervating eness and pleasure, the freedom of peon to wear out his life in a peless and unrequited slavery.

t is true that Juarez had given xico a written constitution in 1857, d afterwards gave his life to the ort to set the law above force. But m 1857 to 1867, the constitutional vernment of which Juarez was the minal head had only a theoretical istence, and a migratory capital, lowing the person of the fugitive esident as he dodged hither and ther to escape the pursuing soldiers Maximilian. For that was the eriod of the Empire," which only ded with the execution of Maxilian on June 19th, 1867. From that e until the death of Juarez in 1872 brief period of only five years—xico had her first real experiment una constitutional government. But at-souled patriot as Juarez was, it st be conceded that he was defint in practical administration of affairs of government. Although rdo, who succeeded Juarez to the sidency, was both a patriot and a olar, the cause of constitutional ernment and liberty lost ground der his administration. It was reved for Porfirio Diaz to breathe life into the inanimate constitun and make it a vital force, and to ld an enduring fabric of constitunal government upon the foundan laid by his great teacher and efactor.

he fundamentals of personal liberty demand that every person shall be free to think and speak and direct his own activities and movements without restraint, that he shall have the right to enjoy the legitimate fruits of his own labor, skill and enterprise, that he shall have the right to contract and own property, that he shall not be deprived of either life, liberty or property without due process of law, and that the law shall extend its protection equally to all who are within its reach. All these rights are enjoyed by the Mexican people today in a measure never dreamed of by the general masses of that nation before the time of Porfirio Diaz.

But of what practical value are all these theoretical rights to a man who has not within his reach the opportunity for remunerative employment, and a chance to provide himself through honest toil with the material comforts of life? This material basis of life, and the enjoyment of the rights of personal liberty, have also been supplied by the Diaz administration.

A complete answer to the charge of neglecting irrigation and the agricultural interests of Mexico, is found in the fact that only last year the Mexican government donated thirteen million pesos to build the Nazas River dam for irrigating the fertile valleys around Torreon, and an act of congress has been passed authorizing the government to guarantee one hundred million dollars' worth of bonds for irrigation purposes. It is hardly fair to criticise the Diaz administration for being slow to extend its aid to irrigation enterprises when they have been so quick to follow the example of the United States, whose reclamation policy began only with the Roosevelt administration.

In answer to the charge of indifference to the cause of education, I appeal from Fornaro to the fact that Diaz has given Mexico a public school system that is unsurpassed by that of any other nation. Ten years ago a law was enacted making attendance of children upon the public schools compulsory, and subjecting parents to fine and imprisonment for non-compliance with the law. Out of a population of fourteen million people, there are nearly one million pupils) one-fourteenth of the entire population) enrolled as attendants upon the public schools. Military discipline is used in connection with all the male schools. In the female schools the girls may learn all kinds of needlework, from the plainest sewing to the most delicate embroidery and lacemaking. Music, art, and the higher branches of knowledge are also taught without charge and as thoroughly as in our colleges. Night schools are conducted in connection with the penal institutions and military barracks. The government is now building at a cost of nearly two million pesos a national normal school for the training of teachers, which will surpass any other institution of the kind in the world.

As to the charge of being a pastmaster in the art of politics, I am afraid a plea of guilty must be entered. We learn for the first time that it is not only a fault but a crime for a man to possess those qualities of leadership and diplomacy which make for success in politics. Very shortly before his death Grover Cleveland declared Theodore Roosevelt to be the best equipped and most successful politician this country has produced for a generation, and Cleveland died in the belief that he had paid a high compliment to Mr. Roosevelt.

No one claims that the work done by Gen. Diaz in the regeneration of Mexico is complete, nor that there are not many things which need to be remedied and improved. The millennium is no nearer in Mexico than in the United States—perhaps not quite so near. Poverty, ignorance, and want still exist in Mexico. Crimes are still committed there. Official power is occasionally abused. Miscarriages of justice sometimes occur in the courts. But what country is free from these evils?

But after all the best defense to slander is character. In this respect Gen. Diaz is most fortunate. The exalted traits of personal character which even Fornaro can not deny him, rise up to confound his enemies and refute their calumnies. Fornaro admits that Porfirio Diaz was "a good son, an industrious scholar, and an honest boy—that as a young man he fought for the ideals of Hidalgo and Morelos, for personal liberty and justice." This hostile, reluctant witness also admits that the private life of Porfirio Diaz has been without stain or blemish—ideal in its simplicity and virtue.

And as the private character of Porfirio Diaz has been above reproach, so have all his public acts and services been consistent only with the most exalted unselfish devotion to his country and to his people. Over against the charges of avarice and graft, I set the fact that as a young man Porfirio Diaz twice refused to accept pay for his military services, because the government was too poor. Against the charge of treachery to his nation, I oppose the fact that he turned a deaf ear to the emissaries of Maximilian, who wanted to place him in command of the Mexican army when the Emperor abdicated, which would have practically made Diaz president, dictator, or emperor, as he chose. Against the charge of assassinating his rivals in his lust for office and power, I offer the fact that he once declined to run for the presidency against his friend and teacher, Benito Juarez, that he declined promotion over the heads of men older in the service for fear of arousing jealousies that might be harmful to the nation, and that in 1880 he voluntarily and gracefully retired from the presidency in the interest of Manuel Gonzales. Against the charge of cruelty to his own people and subjects, I ask you to consider the humane treatment which he uniformly accorded to his prisoners of war. Against the charge of tyranny, hypocrisy, and indifference to the welfare of his subjects I plead the splendid system of public schools, which he has provided for their education, the asylums he has built for the infirm and blind, and the many paternal acts of his governments, such as the destruction of the "corner" on grain a few years ago.

As a statesman, President Diaz has successfully planned for the national greatness of Mexico, but in all his planning the hut of the peon and the happiness and comfort of his people have been the first objects of his solicitude.

NOT ALARMING.

"REVOLUTION" IS STREET FIGHT.

NO CRISIS IN MEXICO, SAYS VISITOR FROM SOUTH.

Brother of Former Ambassador to United States from Republic Laughs at Sensational Reports and States It Is Case of Loud Noise and No Damage.

The alleged revolutionary conditions in Mexico over the nomination of Gen. Bernardo Reyes for Vice-President of the republic does not amount to more than a street fight, according to Juan A. Creel, brother of former Ambassador Enrique Creel, now Governor of the State of Chihuahua.

Mr. Creel and his family are at the Van Nuys, where they will remain several days before returning to their home in Chihuahua.

"The political conditions in Mexico are peculiar," said the visitor. "Americans, unless they have lived in the country, do not quite understand the impulsive nature of the Mexican. Nine-tenths of these alleged revolutionary outbreaks do not amount to more than a street fight, or a struggle in a café, where the greatest damage is to the glassware.

"Malcontents are willing enough to break a few goblets and mirrors and make plenty of noise, but there has been no real revolutionary movement for a long time.

"We take great interest in politics in Mexico, and, like the Americans during election times, we have some street fights between the various factions.

"The two big parties in Mexico are the Scientists and the Democrats. The latter is the younger party. It has a great number of competent men in its ranks, which also include laborers, farmers and small merchants by the thousand.

"The Scientist party is composed of men of the best families of the nation.

"The wealthiest merchants, capitalists and professors belong to it.

"The situation at present is this: President Diaz is the unanimous choice to succeed himself as President. The Vice-Presidency, however, is an office established only four years ago. At that time the President's term was for four years, and when the other office was created it was made to extend over a like period. Two years ago, the Constitution was amended, making the term of President and Vice-President six years.

"The Vice-President, Hon. Ramon Corral, has been the only holder of that position. He has been selected by the Scientists to succeed himself, but the Democrats selected Gen. Reyes, who is one of the most efficient officers in Mexico. He was a patriot at the time of the overthrow of the French interference, and has been in the army ever since. He would not consider for a moment any movement on the part of his followers that smacked of revolution. So that this talk of an outbreak cannot come from a substantial sourc.

"I noticed in the morning dispatch a report that Gen. Reyes, who is Governor of the State of Nuevo Leon, had been surrounded by government troops in the mountains near Galeana, Nuevo Leon, and that he was being kept under surveillance by the Federal authorities. I think this situation can be easily explained. The troops are divided into zones. These zones from time to time are moved, and so it is that at this time there is a shifting of Mexican troops, but I do not believe that it has anything whatever to do with the holding of Gen. Reyes under surveillance. The only thing that the enemies of Gen. Reyes can hold against him is that he is too impulsive. He is, in his way, the Roosevelt of Mexico—strong and vigorous, with a way of hitting straight out from the shoulder at any evil that blocks his path. He is a soldier, while Mr. Corral is a capitalist. It is because of Mr. Corral's conservatism that he was selected by the Scientists.

"Mexico is going forward on the jump in the educational line, and it is no wonder that more and more of the people should take an interest in politics. The public schools are on a par with those in America. But as for a revolution, I do not believe that Mexico is in any danger of facing that kind of a crisis."

TEMPLE BAPTIST PROGRAMME.

Central Church Pastor Will Preach. Evening Subject, "Getting Married."

Although the hearts of the members of Temple Baptist Church are heavy with sorrow by reason of the lack of strength and health which compels Rev. Robert J. Burdette, D.D., to sever active relations with the congregation, there is nevertheless a spirit of loyalty to the church and a determination to maintain the splendid organization which the fame and ability of Dr. Burdette have built up during the six years of his pastorate. This determination to continue the work so ably started is the highest compliment that could be paid to the retiring pastor, who will retain the honorary position of pastor emeritus.

All departments of the church are working in splendid fashion. The Sunday-school meets at 9:30 o'clock in the morning in Berean Hall and the attendance is remarkable.

This morning, Rev. Dr. Arthur S. Phelps of the Central Baptist Church, will supply the Temple pulpit, preaching at 11:00 o'clock on, "Putting Up a Brave Fight." The music will be appropriate and the quartette will sing, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

In the afternoon, at 3 o'clock, J. J. Falls, the Temple Church organist, will give a recital.

In the evening, at 7:45 o'clock, Dr. Phelps will preach on, "Getting Married." The quartette will sing, "Oh, Promise Me," and Mendelssohn's Wedding March will be played by Mr. Falls on the organ.

It is expected Dr. J. W. Brougher of Portland will be the supply for next Sunday.

The assistant pastor, Rev. Mr. Brown, will lead the prayer meeting, Wednesday evening, the subject being, "The Folly of Doubt." The Committee on Resolutions in regard to Dr. Burdette's resignation will report at that meeting.

CAR JAR FOR DRIVERS.

S. Shimoda and T. Masuda, wagon drivers for the Temple Hand Laundry, had visions of death yesterday, when struck by a Temple-street car at Hope street. They escaped with bruises and cuts, which were dressed in the Receiving Hospital. The two Japanese drove directly in front of the car. As the trolley was on the down grade the motorman could not bring it to a stop until the wagon had been overturned. The vehicle was slightly damaged.

HARBOR COMMERCE.

weeks, with an average of 1500 tons of freight, and there was a total of 26,000 tons for the year.

This year, there has been a ship every eleven days, with an average of 3000 tons. It is predicted that 100,000 tons of freight will come over San Diego wharves for Los Angeles this year.

During the next few years the tonnage consigned to Los Angeles over this route will increase tremendously. It is even now held back by the capacity of the American-Hawaiian steamship line, which is building several new ships to meet the traffic.

Pertinent inquiry: Why doesn't all this 90,000 tons of freight consigned to Los Angeles come over Los Angeles wharves?

Answer: On account of the progressive aggressiveness or the aggressive progressiveness of the Santa Fé Railroad.

The Santa Fé, at present, is the only railroad into San Diego. The Santa Fé has no present foothold whatever at San Pedro.

Therefore, the Santa Fé uses its influence to turn this freight into San Diego, making a rate whereby freight can be transferred to Los Angeles as cheaply from San Diego as from San Pedro.

Traffic men believe, however, that we can easily transfer this tonnage to San Pedro and have the American-Hawaiian steamers deliver our freight on our own wharves. And this without much opposition.

It will not materially hurt San Diego, for her "back country" is developing so rapidly she will have freight enough of her own.

Very fierce opposition is not looked for from the Santa Fé, because it is unbelievable that the Santa Fé will not get some sort of a foothold at San Pedro.

Furthermore, another railroad is now building into San Diego to dispute the monopoly with the Santa Fé.

In addition to the sagacity of the Santa Fé, however, the superior wharf facilities of San Diego also tend to the conditions whereby our own freight goes through some one else's harbor. Goods can be hoisted directly from the holds of the steamers onto the cars.

The consignments handled for us through San Diego include everything from musical instruments to bar iron.

San Francisco also handles great quantities of freight that should rightly come over the wharves of San Pedro.

RELIEVING SAN FRANCISCO.

We intend to relieve San Francisco of the further bother of making money by handling our domestic freight to the detriment of our own harbor. And that's not all. We are going to take away some more.

With the exception of Russia, all of these countries mentioned are adjacent to the port of San Pedro.

During eleven months of the fiscal year of 1909, the imports of the customs district of San Francisco amounted to $44,168,043.

The imports of the customs district of Los Angeles for the same period were only $1,182,538.

The exports of San Francisco, $29,-697,742.

Of Los Angeles, $173,737.

This great amount of export and import trade through San Francisco included cargoes carried by direct steamer lines to and from Siberia, Russia, China, Japan, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand, Mexico and South America.

At least a share of this trade belongs rightly and geographically to San Pedro and we can get it by proper effort.

We can get our "entities" as the southern darkies say by proper effort. Experience has shown that "proper effort" is where Los Angeles shines. Our business men have seldom gone after anything that they didn't come home with the scalp.

A very furious effort should not be necessary. A large oriental trade is certain to come to our harbor eventually, simply for the reason that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points.

One of the greatest exports to the Orient is cotton. It is only common sense to see that the vast crops from the cotton fields of Texas will not for long be dragged the length of the continent by rail; then put aboard the Jap steamers at Seattle and San Francisco, when San Pedro has wharves 500 to 1000 miles nearer.

Traffic conditions in the West are still in the raw. Without any special effort on our part it is sure that the big cotton crop of Texas will be carried to the Orient through the harbor of the shortest route.

It is not to be believed that Texas cotton will continue to ramble all over the United States before embarking for Japan as a matter of personal accommodation to Jim Hill and the Seattle wharf interests.

A certain prosperity is thus destined for San Pedro if we only stand by and wait. A further degree of prosperity can be induced by getting out and hustling as in the case of claiming our share of San Francisco's harbor business.

In the long run, however, commerce is not to be brought to San Pedro by the dime museum method of putting a "barker" out on the sidewalk in front and coaxing shippers in.

In the long run the harbor that gets and holds the business will be the harbor that stands as a gateway to a freight-producing territory.

The section that ships its own freight will have the harbor that wins supremacy. It is for us to raise our own freight.

San Francisco is not a harbor with a creative future.

The harbor of San Francisco is merely a clearinghouse, a depot where steamer lines and railroad lines meet and swap cargoes.

Clearinghouses and depots can be moved without much difficulty.

San Pedro has a strangle hold on the future. This hold lies not so much in the future of the harbor, as a depot, as in the future of our back country as a producer.

THE BOSS STATISTICIAN.

O. P. Austin, chief statistician of the Department of Commerce and Labor and the greatest American authority on oriental trade, was sent on a trip around the world a year or so ago as a commercial representative of this country.

His investigations showed that of $2,000,000,000 worth of goods purchased annually by oriental countries, only $1,000,000,000 worth of business is done with its nearest neighbor, the United States.

Every year the Orient buys $400,000,000 of cotton goods. Only 1½ per cent. of this comes from the United States, although the United States is the world's greatest cotton producer.

This means that we ship away nearly all of our cotton and allow foreign countries to make the profit on manufactured cotton goods that rightfully belongs to us.

HOW THE DESERT HELPS.

This is where government reclamation comes into the story.

Down in Imperial Valley one T. Roosevelt turned a river loose into a desert and created a region whose marvelous fertility exceeds that of the Egyptian delta.

They are beginning to raise cotton there. Its quality rivals the finest bolls in the world. Traffic men predict that before long upwards of 200,000 acres of cotton will be growing in this valley.

Even if sold in the raw bale, this is bound to bring Japan's cotton-seeking ships to San Pedro, and the rest of the cotton cargoes for the Orient will surely follow.

But as surely as light follows the sun, if Imperial Valley proves to be a big cotton producer, Los Angeles is destined to be a big manufacturer of cotton goods.

It follows, in that event, that the ships of the world's great cotton cloth buyers will come to the doors of the factories and to the harbor of San Pedro.

By the same token, there is no reason why we should send hides East to be manufactured into shoes and then sent back as shoes, or copper ore to New Jersey and then back through our ports to the Orient.

In fact, there are very few commodities that are shipped through Los Angeles, or are destined to be, which cannot be manufactured just as well here.

Most manufactured articles can be made better and cheaper here than in the East.

This sounds like a large dream, but is all cold fact. This is what is meant by stating that the future of San Pedro as a harbor must be created.

Shrewd traffic experts see already that unless Los Angeles become a creative territory the building of the Panama Canal will hurt and not help us. If we continue to ship wool and cotton and ores to the East to be manufactured, the Atlantic Coast will send ships loaded with the manufactured product direct to the Orient, leaving us about six thousand miles out in the cold and leaving our harbor a place that's nice for rowing races.

The Santa Fé has already demonstrated the fact that it's no use bringing steamer lines here until there is tonnage to fill them by their ill-fated Australian line from San Diego.

GOOD START.

San Pedro has already made a good start. The Cosmos, Jebson and Dollar line steamers—Alaskan, Mexican and trans-Pacific—already touch at the port.

Robert Dollar, head of the great Dollar line, is a staunch friend of Los Angeles. He declares San Pedro will be one of the finest harbors in the world and expresses eagerness to put on steamers as fast as we can give them tonnage. At his own expense he recently brought in a cargo of pig iron just to give his steamers something to do. But he docked at Redondo, it may be mentioned, on account of the heavy pilotage charges at San Pedro.

Another line of steamers is expected to begin operations within a month between San Pedro and Mazatlan, bringing tropical fruits to Los Angeles for distribution.

There is, of course, at San Pedro a large tonnage of lumber from the North, and this has lately been added to.

A NEED.

What is needed is some body of experienced traffic and commercial experts to be on the constant outlook to bring commerce to San Pedro.

The time for the first lick is at hand with the expected arrival of the commissioners from the Mikado of Japan.

PREPARING FOR FRAY.

Third Ward Republicans Meet and Form Club for the Battle of Ballots This Fall.

A big delegation of the fighting Republicans of the Third Ward met at Levy's yesterday noon, and began to prepare for the coming fall campaign.

There were more than 160 in attendance, and what is to be known as the Third Ward Republican Club was organized and placed upon its feet. It was the opinion of all present that with proper organization a sweeping victory, not for "our set," but for the Republican party as a whole, will be the story of the next battle of the ballots.

After luncheon a business meeting was held, and the organization of the club perfected. Walter C. Fisher occupied the chair, and Frank H. Mouser officiated as secretary. A constitution was adopted, and the following officers elected:

President—Walter C. Fisher.

Secretary and Treasurer—Frank H. Mouser.

Executive Committee—Harry Allen, Fred Williams, Dr. Lee W. Burt, Elmer T. Riley, Theodore Lafayette, W. R. Kelly and J. F. Zarger. Senator H. M. Hurd was chosen chairman of the Executive Committee.

Members of the new City Central Committee were named as follows: Precinct 27, J. B. Murphy; 28, E. A. Peck; 29, J. W. Summerfield; 30, Ed Sens; 31, Frank H. Mouser; 32, C. E. Chappelear; 33, Ed Abbott; 34, Bernard Fry; 35, Andrew J. Copp, Jr.; 36, J. J. Stein; 37, Frank A. Garbutt; 38, W. C. Brodie; 39, A. B. Grupe.

Reception Committee—J. W. Summerfield, chairman; R. A. Todd and Andrew Cope, Jr.

Finance Committee—Ben Cohn, chairman, with power to name his associates.

There was considerable discussion of the Mayoralty proposition, and a majority of those present expressed the conviction that George Smith would be the man to lead the party to victory this fall. On the subject of Councilmen there was a variety of opinions, but the names of Col. Frary, Frank H. Mouser, deputy in the County Assessor's office; Frank A. Garbutt and A. B. Grupe were mentioned favorably by many.

The gathering showed splendid esprit de corps among the Third Ward Republicans, who are among the earliest in the field, preparing for the municipal campaign.

Grass and Fruit Trees.

Extended experiments recently conducted in Germany have shown clearly that fruit trees suffer materially, and are often killed outright, when grass is allowed to grow under the tree and close up to the trunk. Various probable reasons for this effect, such as the removal of plant food and of water by the grass, also the supposed liberation of carbonic acid, which might prove injurious to the roots of the trees, have been demonstrated to be outside the primary cause of injury. After seven years' work it was concluded by an experimenter that the injurious effect could be due only to some poisonous substance formed in the soil by the roots of the grass. It is a well-known fact that in many instances considerable difficulty is experienced in obtaining growth of grass under trees.

Costliest Necklace in World.

The most costly necklace in the world belongs to the Countess Henckel, a lady well known in London and Paris society, the value of which is said to be $250,000. It is really composed of three necklaces, each of historic interest. One was the property of the ex-Queen of Naples, sister of the late Austrian Empress; the second, once the property of a Spanish grandee, while the third was formerly owned by the Empress Eugenie. Not long ago, a necklace composed of 412 pearls, in eight rows, the property of the late Duchess of Montrose, was sold for $60,000. The Empress Frederick of Germany is said to have possessed a necklace of thirty-five pearls, worth at least $200,000, while Lady Ilchester's necklace of black pearls is valued at about $125,000.—[Kansas City Journal.

AQUEDUCT BONDS.

parently ample for all purposes but for the classification of the power indebtedness under the municipal limit.

The Aqueduct Advisory Committee has discussed the question for several weeks in an effort to avoid any infringement of the promise of the municipality as to its harbor improvements, which was a matter of good faith in the consolidation election.

As the attorneys now view it, the Board of Public Works must accept the $3,600,000 available inside the municipal limit, and proceed with the power development plans and trust to later provision for the $900,000 additional in the estimates. This will not jeopardize the harbor finances, as this debt is statutorily special.

It is the belief of the Advisory Committee that the power debt will take care of itself and be no charge on the taxpayers, even if current is sold at much less rates than are now charged in the city; that it may even accumulate a large surplus.

The Advisory Committee is composed of Gen. Chaffee and Messrs Hubbard and Humphreys of the Board of Public Works, Aqueduct Counsel Mathews, Chief Engineer Mulholland, Assistant Lippincott and City Engineer Hamlin.

It is likely the entire subject of the double bond issue will be presented to the city officials next month, because if the power finances are not arranged the aqueduct work cannot halt until they are. It is purposed to have the vote on both the power and harbor bonds at the same election.

The Advisory Committee also discussed with E. F. Scattergood, chief electrical engineer of the aqueduct, the employment of an expert power engineer to advise the officials as to plans for making the great power facilities most useful and profitable. The Council has provided $10,000 for the use of the Board of Public Works in organizing and equipping its force in charge of power development and the use of this money and the work the corps will perform in preparing for the important adjunct of the water project, was also discussed. Surveys are now being made and plans prepared for the work by this force. It is expected that the services of an expert on electrical power will cost at least $5000.

AT SAN GABRIEL MISSION.

The young people of the old San Gabriel Mission parish, assisted by Alhambra friends, have prepared a comedy which will be played on the grounds of the mission itself, on Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock. The play, in three acts, was written by Miss Grace A. Dennen of the Girls' Collegiate School. The scene is laid in Spain and the action takes place at the entrance of an old Spanish inn. Much thought has been given to costumes, the Spanish dancing and songs. The play will be given under the auspices of the Ladies' Altar Society and the funds will be for the benefit of the society. Special arrangements have been made with the Pacific Electric for service, and cars will leave the Pacific Electric building at 7:15 p.m.

Talks on Teeth

BY REX DENTAL CO.
(Inc.)

Some Questions Answered

We are daily in receipt of inquiries from people regarding the Alveolar Method, which shows that we haven't reached all the people yet, in spite of a continuous campaign of advertising extending over a period of six years.

Here are some of the commonest questions:

Q. Do you plant teeth in the gums?

A. No. There is no implantation, no cutting or boring into the gums, no surgery at all, and no pain about the work.

Q. If all the teeth are gone, can you supply those that are gone?

A. No. We require two or more teeth in either jaw to work from.

Where all the teeth are gone, we supply the finest fitting removable plate known to Dental Science, because of the great skill of our operators.

Q. My teeth are loose, can you use them in your method of restoring the missing teeth?

A. We should have to make a careful examination of your mouth before we could answer.

The nature of the Alveolar Method is to tighten loose teeth and make them tight and firm in the gums, through the support of other teeth on either side.

We wish to assure our friends that the success of the Alveolar Method is based on its adherence to natural laws.

We try to imitate nature in so far as we are able. When the new teeth are in place we say, use them, but don't abuse them. Keep them clean. Don't try to crack nuts or bite nails with them. In short, treat them like good teeth deserve to be treated, and they should last as long as you last.

Our book explains the Alveolar Method in detail.

You should read this book, which we send you free.

CROSS THE BORDER.

ICAN ZINC IS SHUT OUT.

Tariff Is Practically Prohibitive.

[illegible] to Lose Jobs on National Railways.

[illegible] Leave Rather Than [illegible] for Discharge.

[illegible] TO THE TIMES.] [illegible]CO CITY, Aug. 14.—The newly [illegible]erican duty of $20 gold per [illegible] zinc will result in immediate [illegible] losses to United States [illegible] reaching the Mexican border, [illegible] exportation of Mexico zinc [illegible] and in probably ultimate [illegible] of zinc smelters in the re[illegible] Chihuahua.

[illegible] of Mexico are unanimous [illegible] that the days of zinc [illegible] to the United States are [illegible] average freight charge from [illegible] to the border is about [illegible]. The average rate from the [illegible] the reduction plants of Kan[illegible] Missouri is something like [illegible] the total transportation [illegible] approximately $4.50, American [illegible].

[illegible] average value of zinc ore [illegible] in Mexican diggings is $50 [illegible]. After the cost of mining is [illegible] the $20.00 freight and tariff [illegible] adjusted, there is hardly [illegible] sufficient balance to take care [illegible] charges and a fair per[illegible] of profit. The ore can be [illegible] gulf ports and shipped as [illegible] the Atlantic to better [illegible] duty considered.

[illegible] the zinc formerly exported [illegible] States came from the [illegible] Mexico commonwealths of [illegible], Nuevo Leon, Durango and [illegible]. It ran to 10,000 and 12,000 [illegible] month. Actual figures show [illegible] month of July the lead and [illegible] passing through the gate[illegible] El Paso alone amounted to [illegible] pounds, or nearly 7000 [illegible].

[illegible] which will most severe[illegible] loss of the business of 400 [illegible] of zinc a month are the [illegible] the Katy, the Rock Island, [illegible] Texas Mexican and "Sap." [illegible] matter well known among [illegible] mine operators and smel[illegible] that in the last election in [illegible] States the zinc producers [illegible] protection in the event [illegible] carrying Missouri for Taft. [illegible] time the smelter people [illegible] the high tariff, because they [illegible] zinc in their business. [illegible] of the zinc schedule was sim[illegible] fulfillment of a po[illegible] to result in material [illegible] to American producers, pos[illegible] hardship to miners of [illegible] but more probably their ulti[illegible], if the con[illegible] of zinc reduction plants in [illegible] is thereby enforced.

[illegible]XICO FOR MEXICANS.

[illegible] of solicitude approaching [illegible] among some of the [illegible] employés of the government [illegible] of Mexico has followed the [illegible] in the official organ of [illegible] correspondence between José [illegible], Minister of Finance [illegible] owner in the merged roads, [illegible] officials of the National Rail[illegible] Mexico.

[illegible] language Minister Liman[illegible] explanations of the de[illegible] foreigners from posi[illegible] the amalgamated lines and [illegible] with all possible dispatch [illegible] given their places. There [illegible] further demurrer that too [illegible] is used in the conduct [illegible] affairs and the order that [illegible] more universally adopted [illegible].

[illegible] to Limantour's strictures [illegible] suggestions, E. N. [illegible] of the National Rail[illegible], and Pablo Macedo, [illegible] of the local board of direc[illegible] that there is being made [illegible] to supplant Americans [illegible] foreigners with natives [illegible] possible. They also de[illegible] speedily as can be made [illegible] they are abolishing the [illegible] English language and [illegible] in its stead.

[illegible] feature of President [illegible] is a paragraph in which [illegible] Limantour that in each [illegible] dispatcher's office on [illegible] there have recently [illegible] so-called copy opera[illegible] so employed to be ed[illegible] by the Ameri[illegible] of the offices. It was [illegible] of this system that [illegible] a hundred American [illegible] their keys last month [illegible] in a body to the [illegible].

[illegible] the plainly-stated posi[illegible] government officials at the [illegible] in the merger serv[illegible] Americans predominat[illegible] secret meetings to dis[illegible], and there is appre[illegible] quarters that many [illegible] quit their positions [illegible] for the dismissals [illegible] Limantour's pronuncia[illegible] national lines have just [illegible] threatened complications [illegible] who objected to the [illegible] by Mexican audi[illegible] that came the dis[illegible] in July, and now [illegible] of the coalition are in [illegible] with A. Clark, [illegible]. The object of this [illegible] is to agree upon a two [illegible], and while delibera[illegible] wholly harmonious to [illegible] friction may [illegible] views of the [illegible].

[illegible] SAVES MONEY.

[illegible] compiled data, coming au[illegible] from the general offices [illegible] Railway of Mexico in [illegible] the fact that gross [illegible] all the roads included in [illegible] exclusive of the [illegible] taken over, [illegible] the fiscal year ended [illegible] for the year ended [illegible] several months [illegible] these roads were [illegible] under a single [illegible].

[illegible] the net earnings [illegible] have ex[illegible] previous fiscal [illegible] lines were op[illegible].

[illegible] earnings is at[illegible] effects of the [illegible] and survived [illegible] putting a dam[illegible] in America [illegible] particularly baneful [illegible] com[illegible] sister republics. [illegible] recorded in [illegible] condition, can be [illegible] by the efficient ad[illegible] merger manage[illegible] to pub[illegible] the [illegible] and put [illegible] of econ[illegible] new [illegible] of Mex[illegible] fiscal value of American money. For the succeeding twelve months, ended June 30, 1909, during a portion of which period the lines were under the present single management, gross earnings were $48,805,522.26, showing a decrease of $3,286,404.01.

But gross expenses for the fiscal year closed on June 30, 1908, were $35,255,648.53 and for the fiscal year ended June 30 last they were $29,166,892.37, showing a decrease of $6,188,755.50 for the latter period.

Thus the net earnings for the former year were $16,736,277.44 and for the latter year, partially under merger management, $19,628,628.93, revealing for the fiscal year of 1908-9 an increase of $2,902,351.49 in profits, notwithstanding the business depression impossible to either foresee or forestall.

BUSINESS PICKING UP.

Untabulated data prove that there has been a general and substantial picking-up of business in all departments since last June and taking into consideration the steady and accelerating upward tendency of the present, optimistic and unmistakable omens of the immediate future and the proved ability of the merger chiefs to cut operating expenses down to the lowest quotation compatible with the highest degree of efficiency, it appears a conservative venture to agree with the road's prediction that the coming tourist and general traffic season of 1909-10, ending with the fiscal year to close on June 30, next, will be by all odds the most profitable in the history of all lines combined as the National Railways of Mexico.

Total mileage of the government system is 7531.6, of which 1749.2 miles are narrow gauge and 5782.4 miles are standard gauge. In the former National lines, trackage of the system known before the merger as the National Lines of Mexico, there are 5415.4 miles of road, 528 miles of it narrow and 4887.4 miles standard gauge. Mileage of the Mexican International, standard gauge, was 895 and of the Interoceanic Railway of Mexico, narrow gauge, 1221.2. These items make up the total of 7531.6 miles of road, exclusive of the Mexican Southern, owned and operated by the National Railways of Mexico. Previously to the merger the number of miles operated by the old Mexican Central was 3529.

To the United States the National Railways of Mexico offers daily through train service by three separate overland routes, the so-called Laredo route, path of the "Mexico-St. Louis Limited," the Eagle Pass route and the El Paso route.

The government-owned combined system has three gateways by land and four by water, the former being the Laredo, Eagle Pass and El Paso and the latter the Tampico, Veracruz, Manzanillo, all in Mexico, and the Corpus Christi, Texas, reached via the Texas Mexican line, controlled by the National Railways of Mexico.

PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

The merger people are inaugurating a publicity campaign which will eclipse all past endeavors in that line. Just now there is in course of preparation an elaborate industrial book, profusely illustrated, covering the area traversed by the entire system from a strictly commercial standpoint, intended to convince the uninitiated of the advantages of investment in Mexico. This work will shortly be going to press and will be widely distributed by various agencies in the United States and Europe. There has also been adopted an entirely new line of advertising matter covering the vast domain traversed by the merger lines, offering handsome illustrations of all points of exceptional interest.

General offices of the National Railways of Mexico are located on five floors of the big Limantour Block, one of the finest structures in this capital, corner of Cinco de Mayo and Vergara. The headquarters of the industrial agent and a portion of the passenger department are at Colonia station, Mexico City terminal of the former National Lines of Mexico. The purchasing department is housed at Buena Vista station, terminal of the former Mexican Central, and the operating and engineering departments are quartered among the three stations of Colonia, Buena Vista and San Lazaro.

From the personnel of the heads of the National Railways of Mexico, it would appear at a glance that Mexicans have not as yet, in the estimation of the chiefs, acquired experience sufficient to entitle them to the choice places, Minister Limantour's imperative injunctions to the contrary notwithstanding. Chief officials are as follows, their headquarters being at Mexico City except where otherwise indicated:

E. N. Brown, president.

JOHN METEER.

MILES OF CATERPILLARS.

Trains in Maine Held Up by the Squirming Things Every Year.

[illegible] Railway's Atlantic division, from Montreal to St. John, N. B., part of which crosses Maine on the tracks of the Maine Central, has been called on to continue an arrangement for ridding the line of a pest which is seldom or never encountered by this road anywhere else than on a particular section of the local division. Every year about this time the line is blockaded by an army of caterpillars, whose numbers run into the millions and who make it very difficult for trains to get over the rails between Routh and Tracey stations.

On two recent nights the line of caterpillars was seven miles in length between these two stations. Two engines had to be put ahead of the Montreal train, and even with the additional power the distance was covered very slowly.

A more effective method than sprinkling with Bordeaux mixture has been devised by the railroad, and one which is much cheaper for the company.

Steam is the power used, and it is applied from an apparatus attached to locomotive No. 1200, the largest on the division. Two pipes connected with the engine's exhaust run close to the rails ahead of the foremost wheels, and the steam issuing from them is a dose which the caterpillars cannot stand. A clean rail is gained by this method, and little trouble is now experienced.

This same pest has eben bothering the railway men for thirty years past. It always occurs in the same locality, and hitherto the only course has been to drive the trains over the slimy rails at a great loss of time or with an absolute hold-up.

GUN RELOADS ITSELF.

An Inventor Produces an Automatic Repeater That Is Both Smokeless and Kickless.

[Technical World:] Ever since men began to kill each other, which was very soon after selfish interests began to clash, a good share of their leisure time has been devoted to the elevating pursuit of inventing instruments for that killing. From the time when the early prowler in the primeval forest discovered that by tying to the end of a stick the stone destined to crack the skull of his enemy he could make the crack more surely deadly, his inventive genius, sign as it is of his high rank among the creatures, has been busy over this problem. How to strike with fatal effect upon his foe and with safety to himself has been his study, and he has given birth to many an idea tending more and more from age to age to enable him to do this work by mechanical contrivance.

It is curious that crudities still appear in the weapons which the geniuses of centuries have labored to perfect, and that our eye should be opened at this late day to almost ludicrous imperfections in our most cherished killing machine, the rifle. Yet it is only a few years since the smoke of black powder was done away with and comparatively a matter of days since young Mr. Maxim produce his sound choking, flame-suppressing device. And now comes news from Sweden that an inventor there has found means at last to stop the kick which has made sore shoulders from the time the first blunderbuss was discharged, and has constructed a weapon that will drop men so fast that a single marksman may dispose of a regiment in an hour.

Eleven hundred and twenty-five shots to the hour from a gun that is carried in the hand and fired from the shoulder is a high record. If that gun is smokeless and kickless, it is convenient to handle and but little trouble to operate. Swedish Mr. Sjorgren has made a distinct subtraction from the demerits of the rifle from the standpoint of the user, for his new gun has made this record and has the new feature. And the weapon has already taken rank with the most approved and will doubtless become a part of the armament of many of the world's armies.

HOPE FOR WEAK MEN

Professor of University of Michigan Proves That Electricity Will Cause an Increase of 20 Per Cent in Strength and 20 to 30 pounds in Weight

Slowly the truth is breaking out. From the laboratory of scientific men the facts are coming to the world that men can be made over; that weak, puny men can be made as strong as Hercules; that old, decrepit men can be made young in vigor and ambition.

Professor Herdman, M.D., LL.D., University of Michigan, announces that in a series of experiments with Electro-Magnetic Currents he has brought out the fact that the physical body can be increased 20 per cent. in size and strength.

He cites one case where a young man gained 30 pounds in weight and inches in height, and another gained 23 pounds in weight and one inch in height.

In every instance where the treatment was applied the patient gained health and strength.

The professor found that in no case was there abnormal growth, but as a result of the treatment subjects which had not reached full development were made to reach the highest stage of physical development.

Thus small and underdeveloped men and women may be transformed into tall and robust ones. No man or woman is too old to receive benefits from the treatment. More can be done if the patient is under thirty, but even until seventy the physical body can be made to grow in strength.

We have a patient who is now seventy-two. Two years ago he said that after using our Belt for three months he felt as young and vigorous as he had at thirty-five, and recently, two years after he got our belt, he said that he was still strong and hearty, and he believed that if it had not been for the Belt he would be in the grave.

What a pleasure it is to feel the fire of youth in your veins; to be always joyous and ambitious, instead of slow and poky, as the man is who has lost his vital energy!

H. T. Parker, president Newberry-Parker Grocery Co., Riverside, relates the strongest testimony as to the real and wonderful cure of his stomach ailment of years' standing. He had tried varied treatments unsuccessfully, and when he applied to us for our counsel we advised a Belt of marked strength. He accepted our advice, and after 4 months' use according to instructions his stomach trouble was cured and he gained 40 pounds in weight and a return of vitality and nerve energy. He is ever willing and anxious to tell those in need of help of his success with our modern Electric Belt.

We have always noted that strength and vigor brought more happiness to the man who had regained it after it was lost than to the one who had always possessed it. That shows that you never appreciate good health until you have lost it. Some men have said they would not sell our Belt for all the gold in California. A man who says that must like it.

You who have lost vitality, whose health is wearing down, who feel weak, dyspeptic, cold and flabby, who have swallowed nasty drugs until you are sick of them and their failure to help you. You ought to try this method, which science says is correct and which my cures prove right.

In Rheumatism, Poor Circulation, Sciatica, Lumbago and Kidney Trouble there is life in this grand power. Our Belt pours vigor into the blood, stimulates the action of the eliminative organs and cleanses the system. No pain can exist in the body upon which it is worn.

Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt is the Best in the World. It comprises strength, convenience, application and consistency. Every Belt is sold under a guarantee. It is not a "dry cell"—which sometimes gives a current for a short time, and has then to be recharged at the expense of the patient—but a galvanic battery requiring an acid to generate its power, the same as a Motor Car requires gasoline.

The success of Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt in curing countless numbers of Weak Men and Women has caused many "mushroom" firms to spring up, offering anything and everything at a small price and endeavoring to boost them through the use of all the superlatives the dictionary allows. Some even quote a high priced Belt for a few dollars in their effort to get you to come to them, and their object is not to sell you a Belt, but to foist treatment upon you.

There is only one way for the suffering Man to regain his strength and virility, and that is Electricity; and the only sure, safe and natural way is through the experienced and careful application of this great force through Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt and Special Vitalizing suspensory and attachment.

We don't think there's a town in the country that does not hold somebody that we've cured. Tell us where you are and we think we can give you the name of a neighbor who is shouting for us. Our business has been growing for nearly 28 years, and is getting bigger every year, because we are always studying to give our patients more for their money, and people are coming to us now.

You know about our Electric Belt; you have heard people praise it; you know you need it, so why don't you try it instead of making a drug shop of your stomach? It's easier to cure you now than it will be when your stomach is worn out with drugs; so come to us now.

We want you to call if you can and see how our applience is made and let us tell you whether we can cure you or not. We don't charge for that.

Send for our beautiful book, full of things that make men desire to be strong, sealed, free, if you send this coupon.

An East River pier-end, New York City, the wild sea beach of Yucatan, and the ruins of an Aztec temple are the three settings designed for "Lo," the music-farce being written for Harry Askin by Franklin P. Adams, O. Henry and A. Baldwin Sloane. It is the expectation that the composition will reach the stage about September 15.

Henry B. Harris is to produce a play called "An American Girl From France," by Harriet Ford. Grace Elliston will be starred. The scenes are laid in New York and deal with an American girl who, although reared and educated in France, returns to America and becomes prominent in New York society. Financial problems of Wall street are also touched upon.

In recounting the story of his recent provincial tour with Mme. Melba, Landon Ronald, the well-known conductor and composer, tells an amusing story against himself. Melba had sung one of Mr. Ronald's songs and was encored, and sang the Mad Scene from "Lucia" and then another encore followed, and Mr. Ronald again took his seat at the piano without any music. He then heard an indignant voice from among the enthusiasts, sitting quite near him on the platform: "Oh, goodness; he is going to play some more of his own stuff."

Curious are the simple makeshifts of Chinese stagecraft, according to Will Irwin in the June Everybody's. Hom Ling, leading tragedian, playing the part of the Younger Son, renders a solo which means that the widow and orphans are going to the temple to celebrate funeral rites. The property man sets on the stage a little box for an altar and throws over the widow's head a white veil, symbol of mourning. Then Hom Ling, as the Younger Son, waves his hands and kicks his foot like a man punting a football. This signifies that the rest of the family is out of his sphere of action. The scene has officially changed from a house to a temple. So, while the rest of the family kneels before the altar, Hom Ling strolls over and chats with one of the musicians who happens to be resting.

Eugene Presbrey promises to be as much in evidence next season as a dramatizer of popular novels as was Edward E. Rose in the days when "To Have and To Hold," "Alice of Old Vincennes," and "Eben Holden" appeared and vanished in quick succession. Already it is announced that he will make plays out of "The Coast of Chance" and "The Barrier," novels by Esther and Lucia Chamberlain and Rex Beach, in addition to writing "The Circus Man" for the stellar use of Maclyn Arbuckle. The Arbuckle play will be based on stories by Holman Day and will be seen for the first time at McVicker's theater on August

REDEEMED.

JEKYLLHYDEING OF B. BEASLEY.

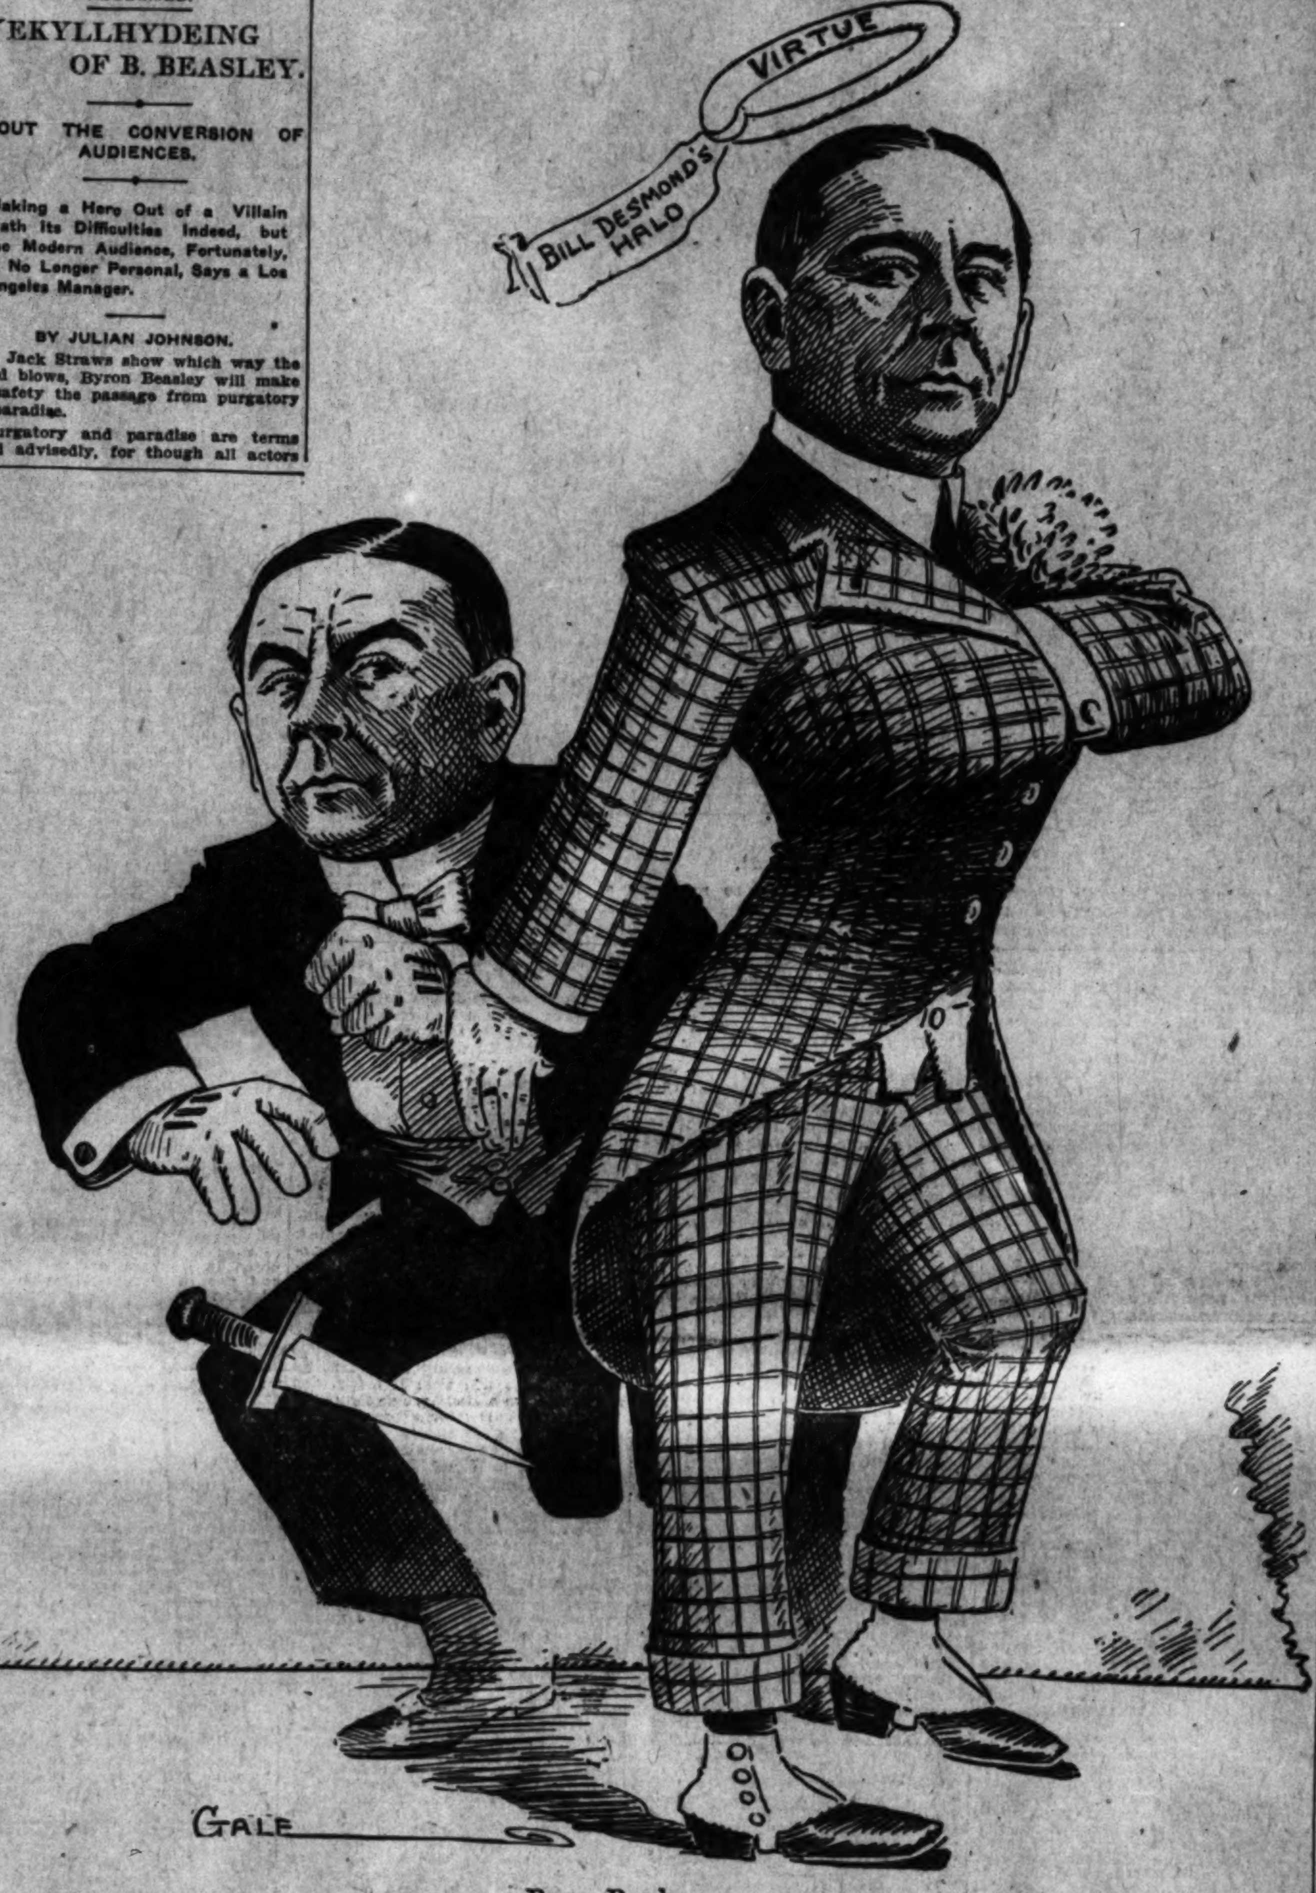
ABOUT THE CONVERSION OF AUDIENCES.

Making a Hero Out of a Villain Hath Its Difficulties Indeed, but the Modern Audience, Fortunately, Is No Longer Personal, Says a Los Angeles Manager.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

If Jack Straws show which way the wind blows, Byron Beasley will make in safety the passage from purgatory to paradise.

Purgatory and paradise are terms used advisedly, for though all actors



Byron Beasley,
now struggling through the Jekyll-and-Hyde condition of emergence from "second" man into "leading" man—from villainy to heroism.

love "heavies" more than they do "leads"—because as a rule there's apt to be character in a heavy—the rear-upper portion of the house makes transgression go but a moment in advance of immediate condemnation, while virtue is not only its own reward, but the saccharine inducer of much sentimental idolatry.

Can an actor once firmly imbedded in the upper-rear mind as a bad man be effectually glorified and transfigured into goodness and exaltation?

Managers didn't used to think so.

"But," said Manager Morosco, when considering a successor for the now canonized Bill, "audiences, as well as plays and actors have changed. The audience that egged the villain and perpetually worshiped the hero now exists only in the tanks and among the population of an alfredhenrylewis town. I believe they admire actors for their worth alone, good or bad—and that's just why I think they really want Beasley for a leading man."

So he made him a leading man.

And when he came back, last Sunday, the gallery that had full many a time and oft given him the goose-whistle and the turned-down thumb, arose and shouted itself hoarse in a really royal welcome.

Beasley held up his now virtuous though late incarnadined right hand. "I know you're going to miss dear old Bill," he said, "and I'm not going to try to make you forget him. I shall be satisfied if I can crawl into a place alongside of him."

Desmond himself anticipated a little in his farewell speech, delivered from the Burbank stage the night before his departure. He bespoke for his successor the same kindliness and loyalty bestowed upon him during his astonishingly long tenure in leading capacity.

Though Arthur Byron Beasley has been literally a devil of a fellow on the Burbank stage, he was long a leading man before coming to Los Angeles.

But it's not a question of past effort, but of present success in stepping into the shoes of one who had the greatest natural "leading talents" of any actor who ever appeared in Los Angeles.

To those who know Beasley's fine accomplishments in the acting line the immediate future seems pretty certain.

The writer has maintained, and will continue to maintain, that Beasley's best place eventually will be in pure character roles of high class, for as his talent matures it is very apparent that [illegible] for the present in "straight" studies.

Beasley became known to Los Angeles audiences as principal support of Robert Edeson, when that actor presented his unwontedly strong company in "Strongheart."

The new Burbank leading man is distinctly a "new school" actor—an exponent of natural methods in acting.

He is an adherent of none of the old stage traditions. He says that as far as the stage of today is concerned there are no such things—that the natural laws governing good and bad acting remain immutable, but that tradition is a dying relic of mummer-superstition.

"I am of a piece with those who decry a certain portion of our citizenship for continually lamenting about 'the good old times,'" says Beasley. "Just as old men tell us that 'things ain't what they used to be,' so you will find a certain portion of the acting fraternity continually decrying the best performances of our modern stage.

"I am firmly convinced that were some of the notable Shakespearean luminaries of the past to return, the price of eggs would suddenly rise.

"I make this statement calmly, too, notwithstanding my knowledge that it will be regarded as upstartish, self-opinionated, 'fresh,' and perhaps even sacrilegious.

"I make it not to cast my poor personal aspersion on the memory of such really great men as Edwin Booth and those of his ilk, but upon the host of others, perhaps even more talked of at their hour, whose principal strength now seems to have been physical, and whose effects were more violent than subtle.

"Some of these men made a great reputation, but they put into the minds of thousands of people entirely wrong ideas of acting, casting their characters in a mold as impossible as that of a child's book of fairy tales.

"I think that Shakespeare intended that his characters should breathe through their nostrils, talk through their mouths, and walk like human beings—in other words, that they should appear natural. Yet, who does not remember the Shakespearean actor of only a few years ago—who proverbially gulped his breath like a blowing whale, intoned the most of his sentences in a high nasal manner and invariably walked in vast seven-league strides?"

Concerning the drama in its present aspect, Beasley is a firm believer in "red blood" plays, the more American the better. He came to the Burbank from Robert Edeson's company, as has been said, and his first role as a was the Earl of Woodstock in Boucicault's fine old comedy of "The Jilt," T. Daniel Frawley playing Sir Myles O'Hara.

In the seclusion of his dressing-room the other afternoon, though the day was excessively warm, the actor shivered with nervous apprehension as he recounted his close escape from a political "career" and his juvenile assumption of the sock and buskin instead.

Mr. Beasley, it seems, comes of a numerous family. There were seven Beasley boys, of whom A. Byron—he was "Lon" in those days, as he is now to his friends—was No. 6. Beasley pere was prominent in Indiana politics, and the boys, as they grew up, followed in father's footprints, all except Lon, who didn't care whether Indiana went for Blaine or for Cleveland; who confessed a deplorable lack of interest in "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion," and who, though he came of Jacksonian Democratic stock, remained silent under the taunt of a school friend, who, referring to the Democratic candidate, declared he never would vote for a man who could put his shirt on over his head without unbuttoning his collar band.

Despite his indifference to matters politic, however, the family influence landed Lon in a snug little berth as Deputy County Recorder. He was only 16 at the time, and in Indiana, where the office never yet has had a chance to seek the man, it was proof of power that a minor and consequently a non-voter could be carried on the public pay roll with impunity.

The rest of the Beasleys are still in Indiana, still in politics, and still Democrats. But they are not in office now. Times have changed. In earlier days, though, the clan more than once turned seeming Democratic defeat into Democratic victory. It must have been an impressive sight to see them march up to the polls, three abreast, and vote the Bourbon ticket straight—lock, stock and barrel. And after the returns had come in they sometimes organized a torch-light procession all by themselves, in which a very indignant and raucous-voiced rooster was flaunted in the face of the vanquished opposition.

However, these pleasant little divertisements had no charm for A. Byron. He had a friend, and that friend was the local correspondent for no less a publication than the New York Clipper. The job didn't pay anything, but it gave its holder free entry into the "operyhouse" and it made him acquainted with traveling managers and actors. It was, in short, a good deal like carrying water to the ele- [illegible] low do the carrying, and consequently soon began to make acquaintances for himself among the stage folk.

Finally, one day, a 10, 20, 30 repertoire company blew into town. Lon was then in the County Recorder's office, but he threw up his job to go trouping, making his first appearance on any stage in the metropolis of St. Louis, Mich.,—it's really on the map, though you may have some difficulty in finding it. The public prints of the time seem to have paid little attention to this momentous event, and it is not on record that Mr. Beasley created any particular furore. His role was a modest one, however. The play was "Fanchon the Cricket," and the ex-Deputy County Recorder appeared only in the Maypole dance, wearing a ballet shirt he had borrowed from one of the men in the company and a pair of baseball trousers, made for him by his mother. Whatever his reception, it was sufficiently warm to encourage him, and he remained with that "rep show" through the season. Whenever he became blue he thought of the great Paul Dresser, who had gone into the world and onto the stage from another and near-by Indiana hamlet, beginning with a Hamlin's Wizard Oil wagon show, and who even then had achieved no small modicum of fame.

In this repertoire company, of which A. Byron Beasley had become an inconspicuous but tremendously ambitious member, were other players who since have made themselves known. Among them was Edwin Holt, he who created the part of the colonel in Augustus Thomas's "Arizona," who has done much good work on New York's Broadway, and who was here last season at the Orpheum, where he played a sketch with the road show, called "The Mayor and the Manicure." Another in the same organization was Norman Conniers, subsequently for several years a valued and valuable member of Mrs. Fiske's companies; while the comedian was Horace Newman, who afterward created the character comedy roles in James Herne's plays, among them "Shore Acres." Holt, Newman and Beasley became fast friends, and when the season ended their chief regret was, not that they were thrown out of a job, but that their friendship, so far as personal association went, was necessarily at an end.

Byron Beasley's first engagement was leading man with Corse Peyton. He remained with Mr. Peyton for some time. One night, in a little Iowa town, they played "Lynwood," Beasley, as usual, being cast for the lead. It happened that Col. Ed A. Braden, [illegible] Henry W. Savage, saw that performance. Mr. Braden was then managing a road company which was playing "The Lost Paradise," and he offered the lead in that play to Beasley. Mr. Beasley took it. Soon after the company went into Chicago for a run, and the "rep" actor made good. That was his first engagement of any importance, and since that time he has played leads continuously until coming to Los Angeles, first with one star and then with another, with stock engagements in Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Boston, Minneapolis and St. Paul by way of full measure.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

Edgar Selwyn's play "Pierre of the Plains," founded on one of Gilbert Parker's widely-known stories of the Northwest, will have its first western production tomorrow night at the Belasco Theater, with Richard Bennett in the role of Pierre, the half-breed gambler—the part played in New York last fall by Mr. Selwyn.

"Pierre of the Plains" is essentially melodramatic, in that it has to do with the rugged mounted police of British Columbia and the people who inhabit that portion of the western country. The play is located thirty miles across the Montana line, and the story has to do with the efforts of Pierre to assist a young man, the son of a trader, to make his escape over to the States after the young fellow has shot an Indian who carelessly spoke derogatively of the boy's sister, a charming girl, who figures very prominently in the development of the play. Pierre is a very delightful personage, who thinks nothing more seriously of life than is to be found in a game of cards, with himself as the inevitable winner. He develops a strong liking for the daughter of a British Columbia store-keeper and fur trader, and it comes his way to give the girl's brother a chance for his life—all of which is not taken very seriously by the father and sister of the boy until Pierre proves his sincerity. Even then he does not win the hand of the girl, for be it remembered Pierre is a half-breed—a fellow with a commingling of French and Indian blood, a daring young man, who has never come to know what any sort of fea is.

The role of Pierre should afford Richard Bennett many fine opportunitie for the display of his recognised artistry. Helen Holmes will be cast fo the girl, and Charles Giblyn will hav the part of the young brother, whose hasty shooting of a redskin precipitates all the trouble, and gives Pierr a chance to display his real friendshi and courage. Richard Vivian will b found in the part of Redding, the sergeant of the mounted police, wh eventually wins the heart and hand o the girl.

With Blanche Hall in the Marie Dor role and A. Byron Beasley as S Marcus, the Burbank stock compan will this afternoon give the first stoc presentation anywhere of William J Locke's four act comedy, "The Moral of Marcus." Others of the Burban players who will be prominently ca include Harry Mestayer, Henry Stockbridge, Willis Marks, Frederick Gi bert, Lovell Alice Taylor, Loui Royce, Margo Duffet and Lillian Hayward.

The play is founded upon M Locke's novel, "The Morals of Marcu Ordeyne," and is in four acts, i scenes being laid first at a cottage the baronet in Surbiton, and later his town house in London. Sir Marcu in his country home, diligently at wor upon his "History of Renaissan Morals," finds his studious quiet i vaded by the arrival of Carlotta, waif from Syria, who has escap from a Turkish harem and made h way to England, the home of h mother. Ordinarily uninterested in t folk about him, Carlotta, for some i scrutable reason, attracts first the a tention, then the interest and final the love of the old recluse and boo worm.

Sam Watson's farmyard circus hea the list of Orpheum newcomers th week. It is billed as "a skit for chi dren from 6 to 60"—as circuses usual are. With the familiar barnyard m terial Watson is said to have evolv a whole menagerie and three-ri show.

Griff, comedy juggler from Londo is said to present some distincti humor and some decidedly new fea of manipulation.

Walter Schrode and Lizzie Mulv are to present "A Theatrical Agency giving glimpses of a side life in t managerial line little known by t audience—especially regarding the e gagement and try-out of a vaudevi performer. Miss Mulvey has a va ety of costumes, and both are said be unusually good dancers and sin ers.

Hibbert and Willing, with "C Man!" provide an act of black-fa minstrelsy.

Holding over are Lily Lena, the Gi son Girl electrified review, the Don and Julius Tannen.

"The Climax" will commence its s ond week at the Mason Operahouse morrow night.

The piece itself is a refreshing a charming comedy, a welcome dep ture from the ordinary stage sto "The Climax" is an unusual play, markable in its simplicity, sincer and completeness. The small cast, cluding Ruby Bridges, Walter Wils Albert Latscha and Edwin August, well adapted and effective.

Commencing this afternoon Grand stock company will present the first time in the West, R. A. T maine's melodrama, "The King Tramps," which has proved one of most successful of Al Wood's rec eastern productions.

"The King of Tramps" has mu more plot than the usual run of me dramas and is a play of human int est. It combines a goodly amount pathos with a strong vein of come and a charming and interesting l story carefully interwoven through the piece. It deals with the adventu of Robert Harvey, once a success business man, who on his wife's de loses all ambition in life, and leav his only daughter, Alice, and his f tune in the care of an uncle, starts to lead the happy, care-free, adv turous life and comes to be known "Philosopher Bob," king of tramps.

The role of "Philosopher Bob" give George Webb excellent opportu ties for good acting and much com work, while Grace Rauworth will seen in the leading feminine role of daughter, Alice Harvey. Harry E is cast in the part of Matthew B ton, the unscrupulous son, and Rob Leonard will play the other he role of his accomplice, Clifford Br don. The chief character role of play, that of Jonas Benton, will taken by Jack McDonald, and G trude Claire, who will play two d tinct parts of Mrs. Benton and M Perkins. Frank Frayne, the comed of the Grand company, will have part much to his liking in "Fight Jimmy," the newsboy.

Commencing tomorrow afternoon Los Angeles Theater will presen typical summer vaudeville bill.

The chief novelty of the bill will the Prentice Troupe of comedy ac bats, who have just returned from their feats in this line. The organization consists of five young people, all clever acrobats, while their comedy is said to be much better than that attempted by many of the so-called comedy acrobats. Billy Windom, the minstrel man who was announced to appear at the Los Angeles Theater last week, but who was selected as one of the acts to open the new Sullivan and Considine Theater in Sacramento, will appear this week in his skit, "The Colored Nurse Girl." Billy Windom is one of the boys of the famous minstrel days.

Another interesting offering will be the appearance of Carl Berch and Franklyn Hall, both recently members of the Grand Operahouse Stock Company, who will present their new sketch, "The Turning Point." It is a comedy dramatic playlet written by themselves, and was so successful at its try-out that the act was signed for the entire Sullivan & Considine circuit. The domestic comedy, "Mrs. Potter's First," will be the offering of Barnes, Reming & Co. Rose Stevens will sing some operatic selections and also several popular songs, while the Silveno Troupe should prove entertaining with the amusing series of shadowgraphs. Added to these features will be the new motion pictures.

Phyllis Lee and company will be the features of the next week's vaudeville bill at the Unique Theater. Miss Lee will be assisted by six clever singing and dancing youths. Her act is called "Commencement Days," and has just concluded a successful engagement at the American Theater in New York City. Syts and Syts will present what is said to be a genuine new act in barrel jumping and hoop rolling.

Edwin T. Emery and Miss Alice Douvee will make their initial bow to a Unique audience, succeeding James T. Kelley and Lillian Massey. Mr. Emery, seen recently with the Princess Opera Company, has been engaged for a limited period as producer, and will present a series of one-act plays, sketches and musical comedies.

The first will be "The Millionaire," in which Mr. Emery himself plays a fool with money.

The old Unique favorites, Denton Vane, Al Franks, Herbert Cramer, Evelyn Constance and Hazel Salmon, will remain. New motion pictures and an illustrated song complete the bill.

"Paid in Full," will be the next play at the Mason Operahouse. Wagenhals and Kemper are still the managerial sponsors for Eugene Walter's initial success, and a good company is promised.

There have been no new announcements from the Shubert camp this week, and, as according to the last promises, L. E. Behymer will open the Auditorium for the trust-buckers Monday, September 6, with a production of the Rex Beach-Paul Armstrong "Going Some."

No offers of any kind have been accepted for the opera, and no options have been granted."

An unique manuscript is on exhibit in the "Musikmuseum" in Vienna. It is so placed that both sides of the sheet can be seen. On the front side there is the beginning of Beethoven's song, "Ich liebe dich, so wie du mich," in his own handwriting. On the same side there is written in German: "Autograph of the immortal Beethoven. Received on August 14, 1817," in the handwriting of Frans Schubert. On the other side Shubert wrote the beginning of a piano piece. Nor is that all. On this same page is another autograph: "Johannes Brahms im April, 1872." Brahms presented the manuscript to the museum. Some twenty years later, so Baldiun Groller relates in the Internationale Sammler-Zeitung, Brahms was sitting one evening at his usual place in the inn, "Zum roten Igel," when a stranger approached him and showed him a musical manuscript. "I don't know if it is of any value," he said, "but if so I should be glad to sell it." Brahms glanced at it and his faced beamed with joy. The paper contained on one side the continuation of that same Beethoven song, and on the other the continuation of the Schubert piano piece! He bought the sheet and presented it to the museum in 1893.

Although Covent Garden is now dark and the Castellano Company has taken its departure from the Drury Lane scene of Maria Gay's popular success, London will not long remain operaless. The annual late summer invasion of opera in English is being planned in the Moody-Manners camp, and at an early date Charles Manners, prepared for one more deficit in his devotion to the cause he espoused when he married Fanny Moody, will assemble the combined forces of his several companies at the Lyric Theater. The special interest of this season of two or three weeks will center in the first production of Wagner's "Rienzi" in English and the première of the one-act opera, "Maitre Seiler," by the Scotch composer, Alick Maclean, who founded his work on one of the Erckmann-Chatrian romances. Clementine de Vere-Sapio will continue to share the prima donna burdens with Mme. Moody. A little later opera in the vernacular will also have as an advocate the Carl Rosa Company, which will take possession of Covent Garden for an autumn season. "Louise" is then to be given in English for the first time.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Henry Ohlmeyer, native son, who has given in his Coronado Tent City Band, a line of brilliant musical performances during the past few years, will enter upon an even larger field early next season.

Next year he will play a May engagement in Chicago with a band of fifty men, following with a short season for a band of thirty-five in Denver. Then the band will come to California for its regular summer business.

All of Mr. Ohlmeyer's principal musicians this season will remain with him next year.

Prof. Daniel Protheroe, one of the leading Welsh musicians of America, and a resident of Milwaukee, is at the Occidental Hotel. Prof. Protheroe is noted as a composer, and will adjudicate on music at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition. The Ohio male chorus, to be heard here later in the season, will utilize a composition of his. Prof. Protheroe will sing at the Welsh Presbyterian Church this morning.

The symphony season of six concerts will open November 12, with Jeanne Jomelli as soloist.

Eleanor Wadsworth, Mrs. LeGrand Reed, Miss Isabel Bouton and Blanche Ruby have announced Southwest concert tours.

George Kruger, well-known European pianist, will probably spend the winter here.

Arnold Krauss will be heard in recital several times, and Ignaz Haraldi is arranging an extended tour.

Mme. Sembrich and Fritz Kreisler will visit Los Angeles about holidaytime.

Moore's band, at Eastlake today, will give a programme, including Strauss's "Artist's Life" waltz, the overture to "Fra Duavolo," Godfrey's "Reminiscences of Verdi," and Brook's "Dance of the Dwarfs and Giants."

At a recital to be given at the De Chauvenet Conservatory next Saturday afternoon, Prof. De Chauvenet will execute his own "Rhapsodie Symphonique," and Mme. De Chauvenet will sing an air from Massenet's "Herodiade."

GERMAN AUDIENCES.

Felix Weingartner Roasts Those of Symphonic Persuasion to a Crisp Turn.

Felix Weingartner, the eminent conductor, recently gave the Koenigsberger Allgemain Zeitung a savage stricture on the barbarous attitude of German audiences, not toward the opera, but toward the symphony concerts. The New York Evening Post says:

Weingartner begins his article with a dialogue between two music lovers: "Are you going to the symphony concert today?" "What's going to happen there?" "Miss N. will sing." "Is she young and pretty?" "They say she is. Her photographs are lovely. She has already sung at several courts, and the Berlin criticisms are said to be very favorable; so she must know something." "What is she going to sing?" "I don't know yet." "Well, the main thing is that she's pretty. I shall go." "In the evening." Weingarter continues: "The hall is crowded. The curiosity aroused by clever advertising has proved effective. Everybody speaks of the new singer, and conjectures are rife. 'I wager she will wear a white gown!' 'No, in the photograph I saw in the music store she wore a dark gown.' 'Did you notice the magnificent string of pearls. I wonder if she will wear it today. She seems to have a slender, fine figure.'

When the conductor appears at his desk and raps for silence the conversation ceases, the writer continues. An overture is played and the public listens, but not with undivided attention, for everybody is thinking of the great event of the evening. At last she comes—in a dark gown, 'Didn't I tell you!' and with her necklace. She is applauded, glasses are leveled at her. She sings the bell aria from 'Lakme' or Proch's variations, and at the close is recalled many times. After another orchestral piece she sings again, a group of modern songs—and then—then some persons leave the hall. "How ill-mannered to go away before the symphony." "Ah, but it's so long." "Hush, you must not say that!" Hisses are heard, for the music has already begun. "The conductor and his players perform it with devotion." Weingartner concludes. After the first movement some more hearers escape, and after the other movements an increasing number, till finally, before the last part, there is a regular stampede, and nobody protests. 'It takes so long to get one's hat and overcoat;' 'our carriage has been waiting fifteen minutes, and the horses are getting cold;' 'we are invited to a ball'—these are among the excuses given for such conduct.'

Americans who are going to Germany, or who have had to listen to the supercilious comments of Germans on this side of the ocean, will do well to cut out these confessions of Weingartner, and read them at opportune moments. Remember, he gives this sketch as a glimpse of what is likely to occur "at an average subscription concert." To cite his own words: "Was ich hier zu, skizziren versucht habe, ist das Durchschnittsbild eines Abonnementskonzertes."

PAGANINI MYTHS.

"Jim" Huneker Explodes Some Cherished Hallucinations About the Great Italian Genius.

Paganini is always alluded to as the "greatest" violinist (which he was not) and as the craziest man who ever held a fiddle (which he was not,) says James Huneker in Everybody's. Technically considered, he was the most astounding executant in the history of his art. No one has rivalled him in dexterity, in extravagance, in passionate outbursts. His peculiar personality, coupled with his enormous command of the finger-board and bow, completed his conquest of the public. From the first he set Italy on fire, and to account for his genius he became the center of a network of fairy tales. It may be admitted that he did not seek to deny the ridiculous reports spread about him. He was said not only to be an ally of Signor Satan, but a murderer who had served his term in the galleys, where leisure gave him an opportunity to perfect his matchless mechanical skill. Furthermore, he has gone to the galleys because of a love murder. Ah, they had "passionate press agents" in those days.

Beaten in early youth by a cruel father, his liberty, when it did come, only drove him to excesses. He gambled away his money as soon as he earned it, nor was his private life a matter for publication. He hurt his health and was forced to retire from the public for long intervals. This practice gave rise to the legendary Paganini. We know that he never murdered any one except himself, that the only devil who haunted him was the devil called gaming; but he did dissipate, and several love affairs played important roles in his curious career. He wrote a piece for two strings, the G and E strings, a duo, and naturally it was set down to a love affair at Lucca. A fantasy for the G string followed at the suggestion of Napoleon's sister. It was called "A Military Sonata, Napoleon," though the sonata form never bothered the Beauty Triumphant.

A thing of beauty is a joy for ever:
Its loveliness increases; it will never Pass into nothingness; but still will keep
A bower quiet for us, and a sleep
Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quiet breathing.
Therefore, on every morrow, we are wreathing
A flowery band to bind us to the earth,
Spite of despondence, of the inhuman dearth
Of noble natures, of the gloomy days,
Of all the unhealthy and o'er-darken'd ways
Made for our searching: yea, in spite of all,
Some shape of beauty moves away the pall
From our dark spirits.

Recent Portraits by Mr. Rich.

John Hubbard Rich, whose exhibition of portraits, genres and landscapes, held in Pasadena last April, excited so much favorable notice from lovers of good art, has just moved into a new and commodious studio at No. 55 North Euclid avenue, Pasadena. The studio is in a remodeled barn in a charming garden, and besides being large and attractive, has a particularly good north light, as well as an excellent room for showing pictures.

Mr. Rich was holder of the Paige traveling scholarship of the Boston Art Museum from 1905 to 1907, and his predilection and fine training seem to have led him unerringly into the field of portrait painting. He is already the master of an admirable technique, suave, light, subtle and suggestive, and his feeling for color as well as his insight into character make his canvases both interesting as pictures and strong as portraits. He is particularly happy in catching the elusive color and charm of women, their feminine elegance of pose and contour and costume. Therefore, it is not surprising that women, seeing his portraits and appreciating his understanding of them, seek him out when they desire to have their charms perpetuated in paint.

He has painted six portraits since the April exhibition. One of the most delightful is that of Dorothy Bailey, a charming girl of 16, painted three-quarters length. The sitter wears a black velvet costume, tight fitting, with short sleeves edged with white lace. She wears a big black picture hat. She is seated in an old Windsor chair, the hands lying in her lap holding a yellow rose.

The portrait of Margaret Hale, Prof. George F. Hale's 13-year-old daughter, is that of a fine, healthy child, with strong, intelligent features. She wears a white shirt waist over which falls a blue necklace. Master William Hale is a golden-haired little boy in a white sailor blouse trimmed with blue. The childish profile is full of charm. The portrait of Mrs. J. H. Dwight of San Rafael is a symphony in browns and blacks. The lady wears a gown of black lace over white, and holds a black hat. The picture is unusually good in its rendering of textures.

Other recent portraits are those of the artist's father, very rich in the coloring of the face and head, and posed in an easy and natural way; and one of George Wharton James, showing the author's strong, leonine head with its tossing white mane of hair, his curling brown beard, and his ruddy brown coloring. The face in this last portrait is finely and simply modeled; the sitter holds a book in one hand, toward which his gaze is bent.

Another interesting recent canvas from Mr. Rich's brush, still to be seen in the studio, is a study of peaches against a background of green velvet. Its color scheme is exquisite, its arrangement unusual—and in fact, trite as the theme may seem, it is a still life of much pervasive charm.

While in Europe the young painter made some excellent copies in the various galleries, many of them being from canvases by the Dutch painter, Van Der Meer, whose work pleased Mr. Rich mightily. Two of these are shown in the Pasadena studio—a large canvas with four figures, "A Girl and Her Lover," sumptuous in color and impeccable in composition and "Head of a Girl," full of sentiment and appreciation of character, and delightfully painted.

The Collector's Hobby.

"There are scores of collectors who have no artistic tastes or inclinations whatever, and you may know them by their habit of competing among themselves merely for the things which happen to be in fashion, and of their total disregard of all art that has not become popular. They care nothing, and, what is more, in many cases know nothing about the merit of what they buy; all they ask is that the stuff they pay for should be fashionable.

"The collector whom I call typical—the man who, as I say, buys art work though he cares nothing about art—is possessed by a hobby. The idea that dominates him is that he must acquire rarities, things with a history, or curiosities that are accidentally interesting. If he satisfies this hobby by collecting pictures, he wants canvases that have gone through strange adventures, or that have gained a fictitious importance by having been at some time in the possession of a famous personage. If he buys china, it must be of a particular period or stamped with a special mark; and if he collects prints, they must be unusual states of imperfect impressions which can be proved to be unique.

"The pictures may poorly represent the painters responsible for them, the china may be inartistic or in the worst possible taste, the imperfect print may be not nearly so good as the more numerous later impressions—he has satisfied his hobby and he has triumphed in a struggle with some other collector as deluded as himself, so he feels he has not lived in vain. But I do not think he has proved himself to be the possessor of a properly balanced mind or of anything but a foolish spirit of acquisitiveness."

"I see what you mean," commented the Plain Man. "The collector's hobby is a mild form of insanity to which he cannot help giving way. The fact that he collects works of art is either accidental or a mere concession to fashion."

"Just so," replied the Critic. "The collecting of the ends of cigars smoked by famous men would give him quite as much pleasure."—[The Lay Figure, in International Studio.

Museums of Bad Taste.

Speaking of the many bad pictures painted every year, which are "doomed to wander in outer darkness, with no faint hope of future bliss in any museum," a writer in Scribner's says "it is no wonder that a conscientious German professor found his heart yearning over these lost sheep of art, and that he was moved to establish a museum of bad taste.

"It is in the Stuttgart Museum of Industrial Art that this collection of misbegotten examples is now exhibiting," he writes. "It is to bear the same relation to the rest of the museum that the Chamber of Horrors does to the more decorous wax works fit for ladies and children. It is to enable the proud German to claim preeminence in a new department and to echo Beau Brummel's 'These are our failures.' It is to be a hall of shame, open only to the masterpieces of the inartistic. It is to be a medley of horrible examples which may so impress doubtful artists that they will rush away at once and take the pledge of artistic sobriety. And we may hope that New York will not long allow itself to be outdone by Stuttgart and that we may have our own museum of bad taste, which may move the men who make bottles that look like log cabins, and who are constantly designing other things each of which looks like something else, to take the pledge of sincerity and to get on the water-wagon.

"But it is possible that Yankee ingenuity may be able to perfect and to extend this German example. How is a museum of bad taste to be housed? Plainly enough consistency requires that it should be installed in a building which is an example of architectural bad taste. And every New Yorker can point to a score of edifices which seem to have been designed especially to proffer hospitality to this side show of inanimate freaks. In any one of these buildings the collection of artistic failures would feel itself at home, and every visitor would be soothed and comforted by the subtle harmony between the edifice and its contents. There is one private dwelling near Central Park so violent in its architectural flamboyance that the lecturers on the seeing-New York automobiles beg their passengers not to be alarmed as the cars no longer shy when they pass it."

Maker's Over-Stocks of High-Grade Undermuslins At Little Above Half Actual Value

Greatest lot of exceedingly high-grade undermuslins we have EVER been able to gather for one of these sales. We took the entire surplus stock of New York's foremost maker of high-class underwear at a discount which will permit selling at very close to half actual worth.

It is not a sample line—there are several pieces of a kind; in some instances many dozens.

Nothing trashy in the entire collection—the fabrics are exceptionally fine; the laces and embroideries uncommonly dainty; the cut and the needlework faultless.

Best Lingerie Waists Yet at $1.75

Over 500 of our most beautiful lingerie waists must go Monday. That's the plan—so here's a sale that will make Monday one of the greatest waist selling epochs in our history. Stop, think and realize that there'll be great tables full of snowy, fluffy mull and batiste waists with plenty of dainty lace insertions or embroidery fronts, backs and sleeves. Lots of those pretty little cluster tucks, and a wide range of both high and Dutch neck models. You and all other women of discernment will quickly recognize those little peculiarities of our high standard. No wonder. The regular retail prices of these waists range up to $4. It is almost unbelievable, but true, that Monday they will go at $1.75.

"Maderite" Combinations, Petticoats

There's a whole lot in a name—sometimes. There is in this case. "Maderite" means that they're made RIGHT. Right in every possible way. Right in material, right in design, right in cut, and right in trimming. You have a Right too, when it comes to undermuslins. You have a right to know that they're not made in unsanitary sweat shops. You have a right to know that disease does not lurk in the garments you buy. You have a right to know that they're made by fairly treated, decently paid employees in airy, sanitary factories. All these precautions have been taken in the making of "Maderite" undermuslins. You can depend on them.

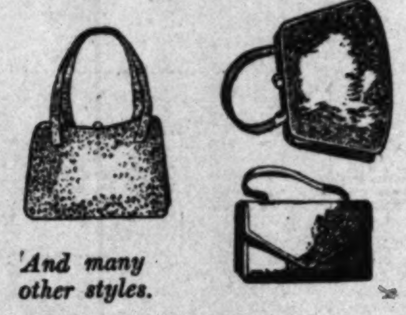
It's Wonderful! Such Leather Bags at $1.35



And many other styles.

Wonderful? Yes, really it is. It's wonderful how our buyer succeeded in getting them at the price, or even how the manufacturers could possibly turn them out for so little money.

They are here in carriage, Empire and Fifth Avenue styles in patent leather effects, walrus and seal grain, with monogram plates. Such bags as we have often paid as much for as the price at which we are able to sell these. Some are leather, and others moire lined. They are fitted with purses, have gun metal and gilt trimmings, and in fact every good point that we're usually able to mention in describing $2.00 or $2.50 bags. They're all this season's swellest shapes, too. Those here shown are but a few examples. You'll have to come and see them to appreciate these values.

happen, even at Hamburger's more than twice a year, that there's a price cut on shirts. Here's a smart and swagger lot in plaited and plain bosoms, with attached cuffs. They're here in practically all the colors and the various choice materials this well-known brand is made up. 14 to 17-inch neck sizes. No need of back. They're Manhattan shirts. That means they're the best you've ever had

Ribbon Beauties That Take First Prize at 35c

That great big display window on Broadway tells the story a whole lot better than we could possibly tell it here. See that window—notice the widths, the colors, the tints, the designs, the styles, the variety, the class, the richness of these ribbons—then look at the price tag—and then gasp. We know you'll gasp with surprise. You've just simply never seen a lot of ribbons like them at the price. The headline says, they take first prize. You'll agree, they ARE prize winner

Rich Embroideries 35c

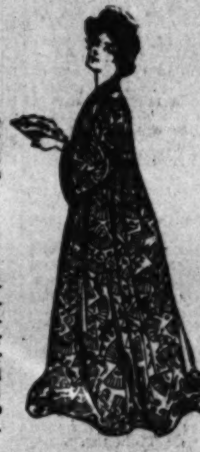
They're worth up to $1 a yard, that's about the best way we can describe these allovers, flounces, and corset coverings. We could go on and tell you about the blind, semi-blind, openwork and eyelet patterns and stitchings—tell you of the widths, the dainty designs, etc., but after all, inspection is the only possible way to convince yourself of the fact that these embroideries are worth up to very nearly three times the price we're asking. They'll stand the test. Come and see them in the Eighth-street window—but better still, be on hand when every yard in that window gets taken out Monday morning and put on sale. 8 o'clock starts the ball rolling. Main Floor.

Very Latest in Tucked and Fancy Nets—$1.25

This is good news to the stylish dresser. Tucked nets are very scare. According to custom, however, scarce nets are in plenty at Hamburger's. They're here in different size tucks and best quality net in white, cream and ecru, and we've included some 42-inch dress nets and fancy nets in pretty designs and spots. Oriental allovers in beautiful new patterns and Venise allovers that'll certainly catch your eye. The assortment includes values from $1.65 to $3 a yard.

Richest Kind of Silk Kimonos $5

There aren't but three in the lot that are worth less than $7.50, and those three are worth a good bit more than $5.00. There's comfort, grace and good long wear in every one of these Japanese silk kimonos. We have them in loose and fitted styles. Nicely set off with satin trimming bands. Big choice of designs and colors.



Genuine Reduso Corsets $3

Graceful "Royal Regents" $1.50

Two corset lines worth studying. Each of a different character—each with different points of vantage—each with so many attractions and features of interest that both deserve twice the space we're able to give the combined offerings here. Reduso corsets are without a peer for the women of medium or stout figure, who wish to adopt the more confined, graceful lines prescribed for the ultra-fashionable today. "Royal Regents," alike in this $1.50 class and higher priced lines, are the corsets we recommend even beyond and above all others as the line wherein a model can surely be found for your figure, the equal of which would cost you 20 to 50 per cent. more under any other brand.

A REVOLUTIONIST.

HE SAYS HE'S THE GEORGE WASHINGTON OF THE INDIES.

Krishnavarma Tells of His Plans for Creating a United States of India Even at the Cost of a Revolt That Will "Stagger Humanity"—Directs His Movement in London from Paris and Is Looked Upon as a Serious Menace.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PARIS, July 30.—Within the past four years, and more especially within the last twelve months, a current of revolutionary agitation, mysterious in its workings, spasmodic, but terrible in its manifestations, has been steadily gathering force among the Hindu population of India, threatening the very existence of British dominion in that country.

It is called the Home Rule movement, but that is a misnomer, for the avowed subject of its partisans is to cast off the foreign—that is the British—yoke entirely and restore India to the Indians. After half a century of patient submission the inoffensive unwarlike Hindu is turning on his rulers. And because he is inoffensive and unwarlike by nature, he has chosen the most terrible and deadly of weapons, those which the modern chemist has placed at his disposal. The bomb and the revolver are to set India free! What is most awful in this silent death-struggle is that he strikes not only at the representatives of the British government; governors, commissioners, judges, minor officials and the like, but also those who are nearest and dearest to them, their wives and children, should they happen to cross his path.

So seriously has the agitation been taken in England that Shyamaji Krishnavarma, the intellectual leader of the movement, is looked on as a public danger. The benchers of the Inner Temple recently struck him off their roll. This is equivalent to disbarment and as Kirshnavarma is by profession a barrister he will never be able to practice law again in any country under British rule. The benchers went further and refused a few days ago to admit to practice two young Indians whose only offense was that they were known to sympathize with Krishnavarma, and his aspirations, and they have appointed a committee of eminent men to advise and guide Indian students in England and prevent them from getting under the influence of the arch-revolutionist.

Oxford University, too, has taken up the war on this distinguished graduate and is casting round to find some legal way of terminating a lectureship endowed upon him. Krishnavarma has shown the Oxford dons the way by offering to take back the money if its association with him is unpalatable.

So grave is the situation that Lord Curzon, the ex-Viceroy of India, has just seized the opportunity of a meeting at the Royal Colonial Institute to warn England that another Indian mutiny is brewing.

"I am no alarmist," he said, "and I hope the developments of which I speak may begin in the distant future, but I think they are nearer than some people imagine.

"There is in India a party characterized by sedition and disloyalty whose desire it is to get rid of the English as soon as possible. What form of government will be set up in India when it is independent they do not stop to tell."

American readers are too well acquainted with the recent assassinations for it to be necessary to recount these significant incidents in detail. What is not so well known is the personality of Shyamaji Krishnavarma, founder and editor of "The Indian Sociologist," who is the initiator, the brain, the guiding spirit of this movement which may ere long set heaving in the throes of rebellion a mass of 300,000,000 human beings.

"My object," he stated to me in substance, "it to preach certain political doctrines with a view to the complete emancipation of India and its separation from Great Britain. It does not specially concern me how and by whom these doctrines are carried out. I deal exclusively with theory.

"I have no connection whatever, directly or indirectly, with the actual working of the movement. I had never heard of the four young Indians (concerned in the death of two Englishwomen) Praffula Chaki, Khudiram Bose, Kanailal Dutt and Satyendra Bose, whose memory as martyrs to the cause of Indian freedom I tried to honor by associating their names with scholarships I have founded. Not a single outrage was known to me beforehand.

"It was George Washington, who in 1769, made the emphatic declaration that 'no man should scruple or hesitate a moment to use arms in defense of freedom' and the British Ambassador, Mr. Bryce, speaking at Springfield on the occasion of the Lincoln Centenary, dwelling on the value of great and good men, who are the noblest possession of a nation, added: 'Thus did the memory of George Washington stir and rouse Lincoln himself.'"

"But," I asked, "if we admit that your separatist movement succeeds, what form of government do you propose to set up in the place of British rule?"

"It is impossible to answer that question now. But I imagine that we shall create the United States of India, more or less on the American model. If the British government really doubts, as it affects to do, that this movement is truly national, let it hold a plebiscite to decide the question. I have no doubt as to the issue.

"In any case the present state of things cannot last. A short time ago I prophesied that ten years will see the end of British dominion in India. I hold that belief more strongly than ever. Let the English take heed, lest a catastrophe overtake them in India that will stagger humanity.

"'Until after the rejection of a second petition of Congress, 1775,' said John Jay, 'I never heard an American of any class or of any description express a wish for the independence of the colonies.' Eight years later, American independence was recognized in England!"

It is now exactly thirty years ago that a young Hindu, 22 years old, was appointed assistant to Sir Monier Williams, Boden professor of Sanskrit at the University of Oxford. This young professor was Shyamaji Krishnavarma, a pupil of the late Svami Dayananda, who was the first apostle of political, social and religious freedom in India, and whose nationalist teachings, though at first unnoticed, are now regarded with suspicion by the British authorities in India. Prof. Monier Williams was anxious to have an assistant who had imbibed Sanskrit as only a Hindu can, and Shyanaji Krishnavarma was deeply versed in Sanskrit writing, and could speak with fluency that dead tongue which Max Muller called "the language of languages," not to mention living oriental idioms. In course of time the young Pandit was appointed oriental lecturer at Balliol College, among his pupils being the present Boden professor of Sanskrit, Prof. A. A. Macneil, and Prof. Margoliouth, now professor of Arabic at Oxford. By a strange coincidence Lord Curzon was then an undergraduate at Balliol.

The youthful Pandit soon attracted attention by his learning, and became the friend of many distinguished scholars. In spite of his professional duties he determined to go through the Oxford course and take his degree, and such was his power of application and assimilation that he rapidly acquired a good knowledge of Greek and Latin—his culture had been until then purely oriental—and, what is more remarkable still, though of the Hindu religion, he studied the Christian doctrine, and passed an examination in the gospels in Greek, which, in the words of his examiners, put to shame most of the Christian candidates. The Pandit was the first Indian to take the M.A. degree at Oxford.

In 1885, Shyamaji Krishnavarma, who had already left Oxford, and who was now a barrister-at-law, returned to India. He was at once appointed chief minister to the Maharaja of Rutlam, in Central India. Here he remained for four years having power of life and death over the Maharaja's subjects. Then, after practicing as a barrister, and filling two high posts in other natives states, he devoted himself for some years to successful business, and was a director of several press companies. Finally, zeal for Indian liberty got the upper hand of his other pursuits.

The crisis in Shyamaji's career came in 1907, when his friend Tilak was arrested, and, after him, two other influential Brahmins, acquaintances of the Pandit, were flung into prison without being brought to trial or any charge being made against them, though, of course, the reason was political. Feeling that no Indian was safe from such arbitrary action, Shyamaji Krishnavarma voluntarily exiled himself from India, and went to live in London.

In 1905, Krishnavarma bought the freehold of Indian house, Highgate, as a meeting place for young Indians and the headquarters of the home-rule movement. In the same year he founded the Indian Home Rule Society, and his now famous organ, "The Indian Sociologist," which, printed in London, was admitted into India until 1907, when the British authorities in that country, alarmed at the strides the agitation was making, prohibited its circulation.

That same year, 1907, saw the freedom of the press, freedom of speech, and the right of public meeting suspended in India, and from that moment the Indian Nationalists determined to resort to the methods of Russian revolutionaries and use the revolver and the bomb to promote their cause. In the same year also Shyamaji Krisnavarma once more voluntarily exiled himself, and sought refuge in Paris, whence he continued to pursue his agitation unhampered by the fear of British wrath. The Indian Sociologist is still printed in London, for the authorities, though they may suppress the freedom of the press in India, dare not resort to such a measure in England.

R. FRANKLIN.

Mrs. Shyamaji Krishnavarma, typical Hindu woman, who sticks to the dress of her youth even in her Paris flat.

Shyamaji Krishnavarma, Indian patriot, who plots from Paris to overthrow British rule in his native land.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

It is noted in London, and has been pointed out in the Meredith number of the London Reader, that among the latest, if not the last literary work from the pen of George Meredith, barring his spontaneous letter of tribute on the death of Swinburne, was the preface written by him for the "Collected Poems of Dora Sigerson Shorter," wife of Clement Shorter. The volume came out in this country through the Harpers in 1907. Dora Sigerson, whom Mr. Meredith knew personally, is an Irishwoman, and her poems, all lyrical, most of them ballads, contain the mystical singing passion of the Celt.

Although the spirit of Meredith's own verse was far more akin to the German, he had his own separate appreciation of the Celtic spirit and of Ireland, which supplied, he said, "one of the richest of fields" for the ballad writer.

Justus Miles Forman, author of "Jason," before he took to story writing, spent a couple of years studying painting in Paris. One recalls in addition to Mr. Forman a number of well-known writers who handle well both the pen and brush. There is the author of the "Cradle of the Rose," whose water color drawings may be seen reproduced in her book. Then there are Rose O'Neill and F. Hopkinson Smith, Howard Pyle, and that gifted southerner, Amélie Rives, the author of "The Quick and the Dead," whom painters have urged to give herself up entirely to art. I might mention her husband, the Prince Troubetzkoy, although his novels are sad affairs.

Seumas MacManus in all probability will lecture in this country this fall. It is uncertain whether he will visit the West Coast or not.

A Midsummer Eve.

Dreamily, dreamily, to and fro,
In a shadowy hammock swinging;
Now lapped in the dusk of the magic night,
Now touched by the large moon's tender light,
A mystical vision of rest in white,
Dreamily, dreamily swinging.

Silvery, silvery, soft and low,
Out of the glimmering twilight speaking;
In tune with the airs of the midsummer night,
In rhythm with the lisp of the leaves' delight,
A voice with all moods ever chording aright,
Silvery, silvery speaking.

Silently, silently, sweet and slow,
To the seen from the unseen straying;
Long dreamed of, long sought for, with violet eyes,
With chestnut hair, and a charm from the skies,
Lo! Eve through the garden called Paradise,
Silently, silently straying.

The Old Times.

The old times—the old times—they're just the times for me,
Sweet where the rivers sang their way to sea;
The new times are good times, as good times may be,
But the old times forever are still the times for me.

The old times—the old times—the meadows and the dells,
And all the pleasant pathways where the cattle clanked their bells;
How kind it was to know them in ways I loved to roam,
And I had the breath of daisies when I drove the cattle home.

The old times—the old times, and summer in a sigh,
And all the winds of autumn go wailing—wailing by,
And the winter snows are lonesome, but the winter fires are bright,
And the old times forever make me dream of love and light.

Some Consolation.

"Madam," shrieked the excited individual, "your husband has been hurt and they are bringing him home in an ambulance now."

"Are his injuries fatal?" asked the wife.

"No. But his leg is broken."

"Well," replied the woman, "this is one night, I suppose, that he will be home to supper on time."—[Detroit

Slender and Beautiful

How Stout People Regain a Perfect Shape.

When a person is too stout and contemplates a special treatment in order to regain slenderness and beauty of form, there is one vital recommendation to be borne in mind: do nothing, take nothing that might possibly be detrimental to health and strength. That means, do not go in for fasting; avoid violent exercising; but take plenty of rest and enjoy rational meals.

With this exordium we will proceed to give the full recipe of the preparation, for reducing weight to normal and restoring slenderness and beauty, which is now in vogue everywhere: ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ oz. Peppermint Water.

Any druggist will make up this prescription or supply the ingredients to mix at home. Take one teaspoonful of this harmless mixture after each meal and at bedtime. This truly scientific remedy acts beneficially on the whole organism, restoring vigor, appetite, digestive power; renewing the blood and rebeautifying the complexion. The reduction leaves no wrinkles; and there is a splendid redevelopment of muscular fibre.

United States holds friendly intercourse.

"I have regretted very much since coming to Washington that I know so little of the exceedingly entertaining folk-lore of the Lowlands, and one of my first investments was a number of books bearing on these themes. I found that the children of my friends had quite a collection of pretty legends of Holland, and that everything connected with the country was devoured with eagerness. It is quite an incentive to industry to have such an audience awaiting results," said Mme. Loudon in discussing this point. But one may observe that while Mme. Loudon could not boast antiquarian knowledge of the lowland folk-lore, she has a fund of entertaining anecdotes about salient points. She has found much diversion in tracing the evolution of the Dutch house wife in many of the descendants of the men who first sailed the majestic river of New York with Hendrik Hudson. She takes keen interest in the history of the country, where it touches Dutch exploration, and if rumor does not prove false when the daughter of James Biddle Eustis publishes that long-threatened book, it will contain some valuable historical data.

It is said that every woman prominently connected with Washington society is accused at some point of her career of emulating Hamlet in a desire for immortality, and this immortality is generally obtained through writing a book. Mme. Loudon's kinswoman by marriage, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, recently published a novel, "Mary Manning," dealing with diplomatic society in London and Washington, and there have been numerous surmises about the identity of the characters, which are rather accurately described. Some have believed that Mme. Loudon and the former Mrs. George Peabody Eustis were both depicted, but the authoress never took any one into her confidence about from where she drew the pictures.

Mme. Loudon was so closely associated with her distinguished father that no one would be astonished if she [illegible] timable service to the language by translating into pure classical English "The Institutes of Justinian," and Guizot's "History of Civilization." He was for ten years professor of civil law in the University of Louisiana, and his contributions to current literature at this time rank among the illuminating pages of systematic law, as well as among the most scholarly and exquisite literary productions of the time. Mme. Loudon received her education principally from her father, although, of course, she went through the prescribed training for the southern gentlewoman, especially those of French Catholic families, and attended the best convent schools in New Orleans and Paris. Mr. Eustis represented his country twice in the home of his distinguished ancestors. He was Minister and later Ambassador, and none of the courtly line of American diplomatists in the French capital shed more luster on the office than he. His daughters were his constant companions, but Celeste was especially congenial because of her particularly brilliant mental endowments. Mme. Loudon's devotion to her family history and to her father especially is a strongly marked characteristic. She has a complete library dealing with every part of American history, in which those of her blood played a leading part. Mr. Eustis has in addition to his reputation as a scholar and a statesman, an enviable martial record. He gave up a lucrative law practice in New Orleans when the war between the States began, and served as judge-advocate on the staffs of Gens. Magruder and Joseph E. Johnston. But he smelled the smoke of battle in all the engagements connected with these leaders of the Confederacy, and he has left memories for bravery and martial wisdom prized as highly by his children as his legal attainments.

ENGLISH LAWYERS ANGRY AT THE LAW'S DELAYS.

Prime Minister to Appoint Commission to Investigate and Lord Chancellor Introduces a Bill to Extend the Jurdisdiction of the Inferior Courts.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.)

LONDON, Aug. 8.—English justice which once had the reputation of being the surest and speediest in the world is becoming leaden footed and a loud cry is going up from litigants and the public generally for reform. The judges are joining in the cry and the Prime Minister has promised to appoint a commission to investigate the whole subject of the law's delays.

No one blames the judges or the other officials of the court. The trouble is that the number of judges has not kept pace with the growth in population and the increase of litigation incident on the complex conditions of modern life. There are now sixteen judges of the King's bench—which would correspond to the Supreme Court in most American States—and they have to do practically all the work for the whole of England and Wales. This is practically the same number as a hundred years ago, although the volume of litigation has more than doubled.

The result is that the calendar in the King's Bench is now about 1000 cases behind, and the arrears are growing steadily. Many of the judges are working overtime in a vain effort to catch up, but about all they can do is to keep down the ar- [illegible] wait a year now before he can get a hearing.

The Lord Chancellor a few days ago introduced a bill in the House of Lords which may help a little, but no one thinks that it will solve the problem. He proposes to extend the powers of the county courts, and thus reduce a little the pressure on the High Courts. The County Courts are the poor man's tribunals. At present they may not deal with any cases in which the amount involved is more than $500 and there are certain classes of cases such as libel and slander, seduction, and breach of promise of marriage which they may not touch. The Lord Chancellor's bill removes the $500 limit and allows them to deal, with the consent of litigants, with cases involving any amount of money, but does not extend the list of classes of business which they may handle.

Competent legal observers declare, too, that a large increase in the County Court force is needed. There are now no fewer than thirty-four County Court judges, who are trying 5000 cases a year each, and it is difficult to see how they can do more than they are doing at present. It is estimated that to deal adequately with the volume of litigation at least twenty-five additional County Court judges and half a dozen judges of the High Court are needed.

Of course the members of the upper branch of the legal profession are unanimously in favor of these proposed changes. It is not every day that thirty or more vacancies on the bench occur, and every barrister of prominence is hoping that he will secure one of them. In this country, it may be remarked, judges are appointed for life and the pay is good. There are two other reforms being urged, however, that are not meeting with such unanimous approval from the disciples of Blackstone. One is that the vacancies in the higher courts be filled by promotion from the County Court bench. At present judgeships of the High Court are usually given to the political barristers who have served their party in Parliament, and the politicians are naturally averse to losing control of [illegible] be eligible for appointments to the bench. In this country lawyers are divided into two classes—solicitors who may not plead in the higher courts, and barristers who have a monopoly of this privilege. The litigant may not engage his own barrister and deal with him direct. He must proceed through a solicitor who does all the preliminary work on the case, and then sits in court at the barrister's elbow and prompts him. The solicitor is generally the better lawyer but he is not eligible for any of the prizes of the profession.

Another reform which is urgently needed is either the abolition or the drastic remodeling of the assize system. Under this plan, which was all well enough in the days of stage coaches and post chaises, the judges of the High Court must appear at the chief town of each county four times a year, and hold court. It does not matter whether there is any business to be done or not, the judge must drive through the town in an open carriage attired in his red robe and his wig, and declare the court open and then as solemnly close it again.

It often happens that there are no cases for trial, or that there are only one or two which might without any hardship be transferred to London or to the adjoining county, but this cannot be done under the present system. In these days of railways there is no excuse for the assize plan. It might entail some hardship if all litigants had to come to London but it would be quite possible to hold High Court assizes at two or three central points in the provinces, and if this were done and the jurisdiction of the County Courts were extended no hardship would be inflicted.

So serious has the situation become that a great many business men refuse to take their disputes into court at all, but submit them to arbitration. A number of the commercial exchanges in London have established what are really private courts where business disputes are heard by experts and argued by counsel just as in the official courts. Before entering on an arbitration of this kind both par- [illegible]

"DIVIDING THE SOULS."

Innocent Boys Scared the Wits Out of a Negro While They Were Counting Walnuts.

[Philadelphia Star:] Gus Bacharach stopped me on Chestnut street to tell me this story:

"Down in a village in the South," said the jovial Gus, "two boys had been out gathering walnuts all day long. On the way home they stopped in a cemetery to divide the product of the day's labor. They sat on a little mound near the cemetery gate and divided the walnuts in boy fashion. One kid did the dividing. With all the walnuts heaped in a pile, he would apportion them thus, 'one for me, and one for you, one for me, and one for you, one for me and one or you.'

A colored citizen came along the road just as dusk was coming on. Passing the cemetery gate, he heard voices and though he couldn't see the boys, he heard them saying, 'one for me, and one for you, one for me, and one for you.'

"He listened a moment and then he took flight for the village. The butcher was standing in front of his store on Main street when the negro rushed up. 'Say, butcher, de debbil and de Lord is down yander at de cemetery dividin' up de souls. Yassir, Ah done hear 'em.'

"'What you talkin' bout, ye darn fool? Les' go see what you heard.' So they started down to the cemetery.

"The boys in the meantime had gone on dividing walnuts. Two walnuts had rolled down the hillock to the gate. As the butcher and the negro came to the gate, they heard the monotonous 'one for me, and for you; one for me and one for you.' The divider finished his task at that moment, however, and said: 'Well, that's all, and I'm glad. There's two more down there at the gate, though. We'll go get them. You take one and I'll take the other.'

"The shaking darkey turned to the ashen-faced butcher. 'When dey comes down, butcher, you may be hyah, but Ah won't. Ah'se goin'

BILL LORIMER, THE "BLONDE BOSS."

The Leader of Illinois Republicans Has Had a Strange Political Career, but a Highly Successful One.

BY JAMES B. MORROW.

Senator Lorrimer.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—A red-headed bootblack, an immigrant child of the steerage, who never ent to school a single day in his fe, now a tall, wide-shouldered man, ith dark auburn hair, a short blonde ustache, and friendly and candid lue eyes, has become the acknowledged and autocratic master of the epublican party in the State of Illinois. Not long since he took the ath of office as a Senator of the nited States.

"We have a famous Democratic alerman in Chicago," William Lorimer aid to me, "who is known far and ide as 'Hinky Dink,' although his ame is Michael Kenna. About the econd Sunday after I began to make y living in the streets, several big oys robbed me of my newspapers. I as 10 years old, the loss was very rious and I raised my voice in lamentation. Michael Kenna, older than yself, bootblack and newsboy, kindly t roughly asked about my trouble. told him.

" 'Wait rite dere,' he called, as he n around the corner.

"In five minutes he brought my pers back. I have never forgotten ichael Kenna, and I have never ught him. People have wondered y I do not oppose him when he ns for office. He came to me not g ago. He is as much of a Turk he was when he was a kid.

" 'Billy,' he said, with his old-time ogue, 'I hear you may be a candite for United States Senator. When u are, let me know, and the memr of the Legislature from my dist will vote for you.'

'I sent no word to Michael Kenna, t I got the vote he promised."

QUIET AND UNASSUMING.

The customary positiveness and using vanity of the self-made man not noticeable either in William rimer's conversation or demeanor. voice is low, his smile honest, and manner natural. If he is dogtic, he does not show it. Obviously, strength is not in noise.

In a word," I asked, when we re in the full swing of the interw, "how can success be achieved politics?"

It may sound hackneyed to say t one must be industrious," was reply, "but ceaseless, tireless, inigent and enthusiastic diligence is olutely necessary. Then one must p his word. Theoretically, truthess is a common human quality; ctically, it is a rare virtue—in pol. Men utter preachments conning it and practice something . In the excitement of a campaign, h defeat not only possible but bable, managers and candidates, sping at every straw, are likely to r into bargains which later may se great embarrassment or may re e a serious sacrifice of personal rest.

A campaign promise, however, t be as good as a check on a bank. man who makes a pledge that opes or expects to escape and the who gives a check when there is eposit to his credit are cheap and ar swindlers. So then, after each ion, every obligation must be met, matter what may be the cost. in, when a man does another a r, it should be returned at the iest possible moment. To wait unyou are asked to liquidate such ebt of honor really discounts the ment about 50 per cent. A hairger memory is one of the indispene assets of politics."

When you were a street railroad luctor in Chicago," I asked, "what ld you have thought had it been gested that some day you might a member of the United States ate?"

HIGHER IN SOCIAL GRADE.

Harry Hildreth, an alderman, used ide on my car," Senator Lorimer wered. "I felt honored when he me his fare. If a man with a or a shovel took a seat by the I would point and say: 'See gentleman in a plug hat? He's alderman of the Seventh Ward. he was a street car conductor myself.' " our father," I said, "was a Presrian minister?"

es; a preacher who nearly always his services to those who could or did not pay him a cent of y. He made a living by the work is hands. Having the Scotch conon that it was his duty to preach, ent about and held meetings both Manchester, Eng., where I was and in the United States."

Why did he emigrate to America?"

le was a rugged advocate of hu liberty. Had he lived in this try in the days of William Lloyd ison and Wendell Phillips he d have been an abolitionist. Wantto breathe free air, he came to country, bringing his family with in the steerage."

What is your earliest recollection e United States?"

the way over I was terribly sea. Passengers told me, in the way joke, that my father and mother d be admitted to the country bee they were not sick, but that I d be sent back to England. Alther, I was very miserable and ppy. Teasing children—I was five s old—may be fine sport for men women, but it is rather hard on victims. So I landed at Castle len with a great fear in my heart. I was elected to Congress I visCastle Garden and it was exactly had always remembered it. We directly to Michigan, after landin New York, but I have no disrecollection of the journey on railroad.

IRST TASTE OF PEACHES.

y second most vivid memory of rica concerns the peach orchard y uncle. One peach remained of harvested crop, and my cousin, ing me the honors of a relative a foreigner, climbed into the tree got it. I broke it in two and half to my sister. It was the peach I had ever tasted. I have crazy for peaches ever since. le Garden, with its crowd of men, en and children, loaded with les and bags, and the red peach e Michigan orchard, are my first memories of America."

ater your family moved to Ohio settled on a farm in Holmes ty?"

hat is so. My father worked as rm laborer in Michigan and at hing else that offered a living. ad a large family of small chiland it was hard, being a stranger new land, for him to get along. moved to Ohio, where we took a arm in a community of Germans. grew older I went with him to ous meetings, carrying his Bible hymn book under my arm and to feel like a minister. I recolhat he preached to large conations and that he was earnest vigorous, both in gestures and age. His doctrinal points, of e, I could neither remember or rehend. I only know that he ched goodness and lived the life consistent Christian. But we did prosper in Ohio. We moved to Illinois, and when I was ten years old my father died in Chicago."

"And you became a newsboy and a bootblack?"

"When the little money we had was spent, I began to think of getting some kind of work. (There were six children in the family, and I was the eldest. A boy in the neighborhood sold Sunday newspapers. At his invitation, I went along with him one morning. I bought fifty copies of the Chicago Tribune and sold them all in a walk toward home of several miles. My profits amounted to $1. That was the first money I ever earned. In a little while I obtained a newspaper route of my own. I would get out of bed at 3 o'clock in the morning and deliver all of my papers before breakfast. By and by I would keep right on downtown and blacken shoes until evening. From $10 a week I worked my business up until I had doubled my earnings. Meanwhile my mother and the children were living in comfort.

MET GOOD AND BAD.

"As a newsboy I came into contact with good people—ministers, merchants, and clerks. As a shoeblack I did business with gamblers and the worst men in the city. I knew all the sneak thieves, highwaymen, burglars and pickpockets in Chicago, meeting them on the sidewalks, in doorways, gambling rooms, and saloons, and polishing their shoes. Without vanity or excuse, I can say that I was as popular with one class of my customers as with the other. Burglars often urged me to meet them at certain places in the night. I never asked them any questions, nor did I ever meet them after my day's work was done. When I became older I realized that they probably wanted to push me through transoms and to teach me to be a thief and robber."

"And you came out of such temptations and associations decent and clean," I said; "without the vice of profanity, liquor or tobacco? How did you escape?"

"I don't know. My business in the streets, of course, taught me a great deal about the infirmities of human nature. At the age of twelve, I dare say, I knew as much in some respects as does the average boy of twenty-two. I remembered, too, that I was the head of the Lorimer family, and that the bread and butter of five brothers and sisters depended on my strict attention to business. I thought of my father and his preaching, and recollected what he had said about right living. And I saw the struggles of my mother to keep her children together. Right here, let me say that my mother lived until two years ago, and that she came to Washington and saw me take the oath as a member of the House of Representatives.

SET GOOD EXAMPLE.

"During my life on the streets," Senator Lorimer continued, "she never lectured me. She didn't warn me to avoid this or shun that. When she talked, she was always impersonal. She laid down wholesome principles of conduct without mentioning any one's name. In the rearing of my own eight children, I have followed the same method. I don't preach to them, but try to influence them in the way I was influenced. If a person whom we all know does wrong, I make him the subject of a sermon in one sentence. 'Poor Jones,' I may say, 'will suffer all his life,' or, 'I don't understand why Jones should have done it, because he has very respectable parents.'

"And yet as a little chap in the streets, to return to my early experiences, I don't know that I had any thought-out policy of individual action. I just went about my work and kept out of mischief. When there was a chance to do wrong, I let it go by, but I was no missionary among my companions. I did not preach, but stuck to my tasks and took my money home to mother."

"But when did you go to school?"

"I was never at school a day in my life. When we lived in the country, I was scarcely more than an infant. After we moved to Chicago, it was a battle to live. My mother taught me the alphabet and I would take a school book along when I delivered my papers and study it as I walked from one street lamp to another. At the age of fifteen I was earning $1600 a year. My mother thought I was too old for the streets and that I ought to get into a settled occupation.

GETS LAUNDRY JOB.

"So I went to a sign painter to learn his trade. I soon discovered, however, that it would be a year or two before I could be of any help to my family. You see, I simply had to make enough money to support my brothers and sisters. Besides, sign painting didn't suit me. I quit my prospective trade and got a place as solicitor for a laundry. Necessity compelled me to hustle and to be rather brazen. I actually went into houses and walked off the wash, doing it with a smile, of course, and a pleasant word. I was a success and was soon making $12 a week in commissions.

"About that time the teacher of my Sunday-school class became interested in my welfare. I was 15, and she was two years older, but she wore her hair in a coil, her dresses were long, and she had been graduated from high school. I looked upon myself as a boy, notwithstanding my many experiences, and upon her as a capable and educated woman. Seeing that I was woefully ignorant, but was trying to learn, she gave me books and assigned me to lessons. I went to her home every Monday evening for two years, where she heard my recitations. That was the only systematic teaching I ever had during my boyhood."

Senator Lorimer went no further into the history of his teacher, but I happened to know that her husband, a newspaper man and a lawyer, has fared well in Chicago politics, because of the help of the once red-headed shoeblack and laundry solicitor.

"Then you went into a packing-house," I said. "What was the nature of your work?"

HOURS ARE TOO LONG.

"The packing industry promised steady and lucrative employment, and my mother advised me to learn the business. I found a place with Wilson & Co., canners of meat, and familiarized myself with every department—cooking, capping, processing, inspecting, and so on. In a short time I was making from $25 to $35 a week. But Wilson's business began to drag, and I thought it prudent to go into the regular packing-houses. I worked everywhere except on the killing floor. At the age of 20 I broke down under long hours and the damp and unhealthful conditions of my employment. I was canning meat for Armour. Nearly every morning some one failed to appear because of a spree the night before, and I had to do two men's work. Fifteen hours a day caused me to collapse physically. The uncle of the young lady who taught my Sunday-school class was a city Alderman. Through his kind offices I was made a conductor on a street railroad."

"In 1884," I said, "you got into politics by organizing a Republican club in your mother's kitchen?"

"During my service on the street railroad I became infatuated with James G. Blaine, who, I was particular to inform everybody, was the greatest man in the world. I talked Blaine to every passenger who would listen to what I said. Lumber merchants on the way to dinner would wait for my car just to hear my fervid panegyrics. I could find no Republican tickets when I went to the polls on election day to vote the first time for President. I procured two tickets in the adjoining precinct, but gave them away to men with dinner pails in their hands. So I walked back and got a ballot for myself. I was on duty all night hauling the election crowds back and forth. At 12 o'clock I knew Blaine had been defeated, I took the news as a personal bereavement. The figures may not have been accurate, but we heard that Cleveland had carried New York by 1146 votes.

BECOMES AN ORGANIZER.

"At home, in bed, I thought that I understood the cause of Blaine's defeat. Doubtless, there were precincts in the city of New York, like my own in Chicago, where the Republican vote had not been cast. I talked my theory to every passenger who mourned with me over the result. Half a dozen young men showed partisan and patriotic interest. The following year Chicago was to choose a Mayor. I regarded it as my duty to see that the Republicans in my precinct, at least, were supplied with tickets. Nothing more was in my mind. I had never attended a primary meeting, and was utterly ignorant concerning political management and methods. So we met in my mother's kitchen and took amateur measures in the matter of supplying an adequate number of ballots.

"I talked later with young men in other precincts. Then I got into the neighboring wards. Little by little I learned the game of politics and extended my acquaintance. Before long I was a member of the Republican Central Committee. After Harrison's defeat for President in 1892, I called a meeting of prominent party workers, at which I said that Republicanism was doomed in Chicago unless we had an efficient organization. Opposition developed, on the ground that if we educated politicians they would ultimately displace us as party managers, but my suggestion was accepted. I went from precinct to precinct, and almost from house to house. That was seventeen years ago. Today Chicago has the most scientific organization ever known in all the history of American politics. I have told you frankly how I got into public matters. Let me add that I had no thought whatever of making politics my business."

"Did you continue to be a street railroad conductor?"

"No; I had learned enough about signs to paint a house. I became, therefore, a contractor, taking small jobs only and doing the work myself."

MAKES MONEY IN LAND.

"And presently you attempted a speculation in real estate?"

"I purchased twenty acres of land from William Pitt Kellogg, who had been Governor of Louisiana. A young man whom I knew had $2000. I hadn't a cent. We bought the land for $80,000, paying $3000 as earnest money and giving three notes for the balance. I sold the land in one evening and divided $24,000 with my partner. Afterward, I bought 320 acres and was deep in debt when Grover Cleveland swept the country in 1892. I began to trade and sell right after the election, getting a brickyard, which I have owned and operated ever since. At the coming of the panic of 1893 I was enabled, therefore, to protect my remaining real estate interests."

"You were nominated for Congress in 1894?" I said.

"I didn't care to be a candidate at that time," Senator Lorimer answered. "I was 33 years of age. While I hoped to be a member of Congress, I had planned to wait until I was 50 years old. But the district was 17,000 Democratic and the huge majority frightened every man who was fit for the place. I tried for a long time to get a candidate. 'Run yourself,' said 'Doc' Jamieson, our national committeeman. 'If you wait until you are 50 you may be dead and buried politically.'

"I took Jamieson's advice. The stockyards were located in the district and I had worked with nearly all of the men who were then in positions of influence. I was elected and served twelve years in the House of Representatives."

An Interesting Pension Experiment.

A large mercantile company, which has branches in nine of our cities, has put into effect an employés' old age pension system, which is an interesting experiment. To this the employés themselves contribute nothing, but all are eligible at 60 years of age, if they have served the company for twenty years. Provision, too, is made for those who, at any age, are incapacitated for work after twenty years of service. The amount of a pension is based upon the salary of an employé and the number of years he has served. The salary figured on is the average salary during the five years preceding retirement, and the pension amounts to 1 per cent. of this, multiplied by the number of years in service. Thus, a man whose salary is $2000 a year, upon retiring after twenty-five years' service, will receive a pension of $500. The smallest pension to be paid is $300, the largest, $1000; so that the system strongly favors those who have received small or moderate salaries and who, unable to save as they have gone along, have looked forward to old age with consternation.—[World's Work.

A Fair Cuban.

Senora Garcia y Velez, Wife of the Cuban Minister, Is American by Birth, But Has Lived for Past Ten Years in Havana.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—When the reëstablished Cuban government removed Señor Gonzalo Quesada, its representative at the American capital, from the dawn of the independence and before that the leader of the Junta, which kept alive Cuban patriotism among the Americanized Cubans, some predicted a cold welcome for the new envoy. Cuba could have chosen no man so acceptable to this country as the son of that noble patriot and fearless leader, Gen. Callisto Garcia. Garcia died in Washington when about to negotiate peace between the leaders of the Cuban revolution and the representatives of Spain. He is honored as the Solon of his party and reverently regarded as the first martyr after the independence. His health much impaired by privations endured during the war, he undertook to journey to Washington because his country required his services. On reaching this city he was seized with pneumonia and died after a day's illness at the Raleigh Hotel. The American nation fittingly honored his memory. He was buried with military pomp from St. Patrick's church. President McKinley sat in the edifice with many of his Cabinet and a large representation of official Washington to hear the eulogy pronounced over the dead hero by Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul.

Madam Garcia and sons.

The present Minister from Cuba and Señora Garcia y Veles resided during the early days of their Washington life at the Raleigh and they spent their first leisure in reverently visiting all the places hallowed by the memory of Gen. Garcia. The eldest son of the Minister bears his grandfather's name, Callisto Garcia. One of the pleasant pieces of news which the new envoy brought from Havana was that Cuba is about to erect a handsome legation home. Work will begin on the new structure just as soon as the Minister selects the site when he returns to Washington in the autumn. He is passing the summer with his family near Boston and will remain North until the end of October.

Señora Garcia is among the youngest matrons of the corps and is dainty and graceful in appearance. "I have paid many visits to Washington," she said to the writer just before leaving for the North. "My father was forced for political reasons to leave the land of his birth and seek an asylum in the United States. He built up a great business near Tampa, Fla., and we lived there until I was quite a well-grown girl. Invariably we came North for the summer. Sometimes we went to the Springs of Virginia and we always stopped for a few days in Washington, where my father always had friends. Often we went to Saratoga, and I am among those who sincerely mourn the passing of that renowned spa.

"I have recently came from Havana and it affords me much gratification to tell Americans that the Cuban Rip Van Winkle would now experience much trouble in locating his native town if he came down from the hills. It was formerly a joke among my American friends that Rip in Cuba could sleep for a cycle and find things at home just the same when he awoke. In appearance Havana and the great centers of shipping are much changed. But I doubt if the social habits and customs of Cuba will be disturbed. Frankly, we hope they will not. We cling to the old conservative ideas about the sacredness of marriage and nothing afforded me so much pleasure as the overwhelming negative placed on a bill permitting divorce, introduced in a recent legislative assembly.

"We cling to our leisurely social method and nothing would persuade the Cuban matron to work as hard to have a good time as her American sister. Of course, I can allow that the difference in the size of the two countries will give the Cuban social leader a much greater opportunity for leisure than the chatelaine of an official home in Washington. But we perform our social duties after a different scheme. My Washington friends are scandalized when I tell them that our visiting hours in Havana are from 10 at night until 2 o'clock in the morning. But then the climate must be considered and the Havanese are not in the habit of deserting their beloved city just because the themometer rises. We are not fond of the formal entertaining which enthralls the northern people. Our delight is the impromptu the almost unconscious social gathering. Few families eat the last meal of the day without a guest, numerous guests in important homes, but they come without the ostentation of a written invitation. The formal functions are in fact always state affairs. After dinner, those who are on intimate terms visit each other from 10 until about 2 o'clock in the morning. Generally engagements are made at different homes and large parties meet in one house by general accord and there are conversation and music and, best of all, an opportunity to talk and enjoy life as it can never be enjoyed without this close communion. It surpasses the American method of the hurried calls, the breathless eagerness to get away and make more calls. I wonder that Americans do not try the Latin method as it prevails in Cuba. Cards will answer for calls, as they are now prescribed by etiquette and the time saved could be devoted to visiting and really getting acquainted with each other.

"One of the signs of social progress in Havana is the increasing strength of the Femina movement. This organization is similar to the suffrage propaganda in the United States, but not so radical as the English suffragettes nor so advanced and successful as the Feministe movement in France. The Femina in Cuba has adopted the French society as a model and all their aspirations are founded on propaganda of the Parisians. A woman's paper advancing rather liberal and ultra views was published in Havana for some time by Mme. Blanche Barait, a powerful writer and eloquent lecturer, who enjoys in Havana much of the prestige accorded Mme. Marguerite Durand in Paris. But the paper was not financially successful and it recently suspended publication. Despite much criticism the suffrage movement is gaining considerable impetus in Cuba. Some of the influential and intellectual women of the country have joined their fortunes to the propaganda. There is Mme. Zayas Bazan, professor of letters in a Havana seat of learning and daughter of the well-known Dr. Bazan, whose salons are the attraction of the city during the winter. Mme. Bazan is a fervid advocate of the rights for women and she claims for them almost as much as the French feministes do. Mme. Del Castillo, a leader of the old Royalist set in Havana, is a fervent Femina and so is Magdalena Penarrendona, a popular writer. These ladies give their time, money and intellect to the propaganda. But in a way, the movement is as yet considered a sort of fad and many do not take it seriously. But of course the legal aspect of getting rights for women appeals to those who take no interest in the increasing influence which it would bring. The old Spanish law still prevails in Cuba, and women do not possess many rights under that construction."

Señora Garcia dwells with evident pleasure on the constant interchange of visits between this country and the Cuban resorts. Señor Garcia, who has been in the Foreign Office of Havana since leaving the City of Mexico, where he was envoy, devoted part of his vacation last winter to taking American friends over the superb roads recently built for automobilists. He guided several parties personally, and the travelers were enthusiastic over the experience. The Minister hopes to interest the travel-loving Americans in the beauties of Cuban tours. The roads for touring cars are now as near perfect as may be found in Massachusetts and the Old World. In Havana cars may be obtained at prices which make the Americans open their eyes and an excellent system of road inns adds to the pleasure of the trip.

"We are intense lovers of the dance," said Señora Garcia. "The entire winter we dance and dance. The married people as well as the young belles and beaux enjoy this pleasure. Three or four dances may be given in prominent homes on the same evening and every one will be filled with guests. Then we love music and we are seldom without some musical attraction during the season proper. Americans who formerly sojourned in the Bermudas and the Bahamas come now to Havana and to Santiago and they seem to find the winter amusements more varied. I can scarcely put in the language the feelings which animate the Cuban toward Americans. From the earliest day of the trouble with Spain we always found a hospitable asylum and true and disinterested friends across the bay. You can find few families in Havana without a personal reason for gratitude to some American or to the great nation in the aggregate. For this reason alone Americans can enjoy life to the fullest when they come to the Cuban capital, for they feel they are the most welcome of guests. We are so glad that they are now coming in larger numbers than formerly."

Señora Garcia was married nine years ago in the Church of Our Lady of Mercy in Havana. Her husband's family, like her own, had been for years under Spain's displeasure, and the romance which terminated in a happy marriage was one which began in exile. Señor Garcia left Cuba at an early age and took refuge in Florida. At times he returned to Cuba with his parents and received his education in snatches during the periods in which Spain was not making active war on those who favored the separation of Cuba from the mother country. Señor Ybor, having early emigrated from the land of his birth, and having prospered in his adopted home, became a filibuster of the most fearless type and collected about all those who favored the war of the independence. Young Garcia joined in his tender years this group, with the result of this marriage to Señor Ybor's youngest daughter. There are three boys in the Garcia y Veles family, the eldest called for the heroic warrior who died in Washington, and the second bearing his maternal grandfather's name, Carlos Ybor Garcia, which he has written Carlos Garcia y Ybor. The Señora speaks English perfectly and she is also a master of the French, German and Spanish languages. She was carefully educated at home and having married at the age of 17, she did not have ... opportunity of testing whether higher education makes for the happiness of woman. But she is an exceedingly cultured and liberal woman and favors all the advantages of education and travel which a girl can obtain. She plays skillfully on the piano and on the guitar, and is in every respect a pleasing type of the high-born, intellectual woman of the Latin-American race.

To Prove Catarrh Can Be Cured—We Will Treat Free Until Cured All Persons Applying at Our Offices and Beginning a Course of Treatment on or Before Aug. 28.

No matter how long you have suffered, or how many different things you have tried, don't consider your case incurable until you have had our opinion and tried our treatment. You need not hesitate to accept this exceptionally generous offer. We mean just what we say. WHY DO WE DO IT? Simply to convince every person, the skeptical ones particularly, that Catarrh in any form can be cured positively and permanently. Last, but not least, we want to demonstrate in a thorough and positive manner that our treatment is the right kind. That it reaches the cavities of the head, NOSE and THROAT, that it purifies the BLOOD, eradicates the GERMS of CATARRH from the STOMACH and BOWELS, in fact, it penetrates every part of the body where CATARRH GERMS can possibly locate, and puts the SYSTEM in such a healthy condition that with proper care recurrence of the disease is impossible. STATEMENT OF REV. J. S. ANDERSON OF M. E. CHURCH.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: Los Angeles, 418 South Hope st.

From childhood I have been more or less inconvenienced by a growth in the nasal organs, which made it difficult—yes, impossible—for me to breathe in the proper manner, through the nostrils. It also impaired my speaking.

At last I decided to consult some specialist concerning the matter. Dr. S. G. Edwards of the Broadway Physicians' and Surgeons' Association was the specialist I selected. He performed an operation, removing the growth and now I feel like a new and healthier person.

It affords me great pleasure to give Dr. Edwards my highest recommendation as to skill, ability and conscientiousness. Yours very truly, J. S. Anderson, Formerly Missionary in Utah of the M. E. Church.

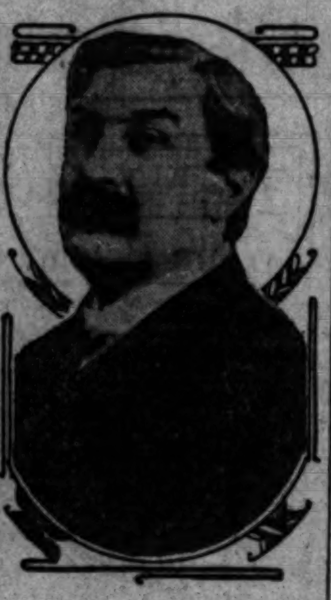
BILL LORIMER, THE "BLONDE BOSS."

The Leader of Illinois Republicans Has Had a Strange Political Career, but a Highly Successful One.

BY JAMES B. MORROW.



Senator Lorrimer.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—A red-headed bootblack, an immigrant child of the steerage, who never ent to school a single day in his fe, now a tall, wide-shouldered man, ith dark auburn hair, a short blonde ustache, and friendly and candid lue eyes, has become the acknowl-dged and autocratic master of the epublican party in the State of Illinois. Not long since he took the ath of office as a Senator of the nited States.

"We have a famous Democratic al-erman in Chicago," William Lorimer aid to me, "who is known far and ide as 'Hinky Dink,' although his ame is Michael Kenna. About the cond Sunday after I began to make y living in the streets, several big ys robbed me of my newspapers. I as 10 years old, the loss was very rious and I raised my voice in la-entation. Michael Kenna, older than yself, bootblack and newsboy, kindly t roughly asked about my trouble. told him.

"'Wait rite dere,' he called, as he n around the corner.

"In five minutes he brought my pers back. I have never forgotten ichael Kenna, and I have never ught him. People have wondered y I do not oppose him when he ns for office. He came to me not g ago. He is as much of a Turk he was when he was a kid.

"'Billy,' he said, with his old-time ogue, 'I hear you may be a candi-te for United States Senator. When n are, let me know, and the mem-of the Legislature from my dis-ct will vote for you.'

"I sent no word to Michael Kenna, t I got the vote he promised."

QUIET AND UNASSUMING.

The customary positiveness and using vanity of the self-made man not noticeable either in William rimer's conversation or demeanor. voice is low, his smile honest, and manner natural. If he is dog-tic, he does not show it. Obviously, strength is not in noise.

"In a word," I asked, when we re in the full swing of the inter-w, "how can success be achieved politics?"

"It may sound hackneyed to say t one must be industrious," was reply, "but ceaseless, tireless, in-igent and enthusiastic diligence is olutely necessary. Then one must p his word. Theoretically, truth-ness is a common human quality; ctically, it is a rare virtue—in poli-s. Men utter preachments con-ing it and practice something. In the excitement of a campaign, h defeat not only possible but bable, managers and candidates, sping at every straw, are likely to r into bargains which later may e great embarrassment or may re-e a serious sacrifice of personal rest.

"A campaign promise, however, t be as good as a check on a bank. man who makes a pledge that hopes or expects to escape and the who gives a check when there is eposit to his credit are cheap and ar swindlers. So then, after each tion, every obligation must be met, matter what may be the cost. in, when a man does another a r, it should be returned at the lest possible moment. To wait un-you are asked to liquidate such ebt of honor really discounts the ment about 50 per cent. A hair-ger memory is one of the indispen-e assets of politics."

"When you were a street railroad ductor in Chicago," I asked, "what ld you have thought had it been gested that some day you might a member of the United States ate?"

HIGHER IN SOCIAL GRADE.

"Harry Hildreth, an alderman, used ide on my car," Senator Lorimer wered. "I felt honored when he me his fare. If a man with a or a shovel took a seat by the , I would point and say: 'See gentleman in a plug hat? He's alderman of the Seventh Ward. he was a street car conductor myself.'"

"Your father," I said, "was a Pres-rian minister?"

"es; a preacher who nearly always his services to those who could or did not pay him a cent of y. He made a living by the work is hands. Having the Scotch con-on that it was his duty to preach, ent about and held meetings both Manchester, Eng., where I was and in the United States."

"hy did he emigrate to America?"

"e was a rugged advocate of hu-liberty. Had he lived in this try in the days of William Lloyd ison and Wendell Phillips he d have been an abolitionist. Want-to breathe free air, he came to country, bringing his family with in the steerage."

"hat is your earliest recollection e United States?"

"the way over I was terribly sea-Passengers told me, in the way joke, that my father and mother d be admitted to the country be-e they were not sick, but that I d be sent back to England. Al-ther, I was very miserable and ppy. Teasing children—I was five s old—may be fine sport for men women, but it is rather hard on victims. So I landed at Castle en with a great fear in my heart. I was elected to Congress I vis-Castle Garden and it was exactly had always remembered it. We directly to Michigan, after land-in New York, but I have no dis-recollection of the journey on railroad.

IRST TASTE OF PEACHES.

"y second most vivid memory of rica concerns the peach orchard y uncle. One peach remained of harvested crop, and my cousin, ing me the honors of a relative a foreigner, climbed into the tree got it. I broke it in two and half to my sister. It was the peach I had ever tasted. I have crazy for peaches ever since. le Garden, with its crowd of men, en and children, loaded with les and bags, and the red peach e Michigan orchard, are my first memories of America."

"ater your family moved to Ohio settled on a farm in Holmes ty?"

"hat is so. My father worked as rm laborer in Michigan and at hing else that offered a living. ad a large family of small chil-and it was hard, being a stranger new land, for him to get along. moved to Ohio, where we took a rm in a community of Germans. grew older I went with him to ous meetings, carrying his Bible hymn book under my arm and to feel like a minister. I recol-hat he preached to large con-ations and that he was earnest vigorous, both in gestures and age. His doctrinal points, of e, I could neither remember or prehend. I only know that he ched goodness and lived the life consistent Christian. But we did prosper in Ohio. We moved to Illinois, and when I was ten years old my father died in Chicago."

"And you became a newsboy and a bootblack?"

"When the little money we had was spent, I began to think of getting some kind of work. (There were six children in the family, and I was the eldest. A boy in the neighborhood sold Sunday newspapers. At his invitation, I went along with him one morning. I bought fifty copies of the Chicago Tribune and sold them all in a walk toward home of several miles. My profits amounted to $1. That was the first money I ever earned. In a little while I obtained a newspaper route of my own. I would get out of bed at 3 o'clock in the morning and deliver all of my papers before breakfast. By and by I would keep right on downtown and blacken shoes until evening. From $10 a week I worked my business up until I had doubled my earnings. Meanwhile my mother and the children were living in comfort.

MET GOOD AND BAD.

"As a newsboy I came into contact with good people—ministers, merchants, and clerks. As a shoeblack I did business with gamblers and the worst men in the city. I knew all the sneak thieves, highwaymen, burglars and pickpockets in Chicago, meeting them on the sidewalks, in doorways, gambling rooms, and saloons, and polishing their shoes. Without vanity or excuse, I can say that I was as popular with one class of my customers as with the other. Burglars often urged me to meet them at certain places in the night. I never asked them any questions, nor did I ever meet them after my day's work was done. When I became older I realized that they probably wanted to push me through transoms and to teach me to be a thief and robber."

"And you came out of such temptations and associations decent and clean," I said: "without the vice of profanity, liquor or tobacco? How did you escape?"

"I don't know. My business in the streets, of course, taught me a great deal about the infirmities of human nature. At the age of twelve, I dare say, I knew as much in some respects as does the average boy of twenty-two. I remembered, too, that I was the head of the Lorimer family, and that the bread and butter of five brothers and sisters depended on my strict attention to business. I thought of my father and his preaching, and recollected what he had said about right living. And I saw the struggles of my mother to keep her children together. Right here, let me say that my mother lived until two years ago, and that she came to Washington and saw me take the oath as a member of the House of Representatives.

SET GOOD EXAMPLE.

"During my life on the streets," Senator Lorimer continued, "she never lectured me. She didn't warn me to avoid this or shun that. When she talked, she was always impersonal. She laid down wholesome principles of conduct without mentioning any one's name. In the rearing of my own eight children, I have followed the same method. I don't preach to them, but try to influence them in the way I was influenced. If a person whom we all know does wrong, I make him the subject of a sermon in one sentence. 'Poor Jones,' I may say, 'will suffer all his life,' or, 'I don't understand why Jones should have done it, because he has very respectable parents.'

"And yet as a little chap in the streets, to return to my early experiences, I don't know that I had any thought-out policy of individual action. I just went about my work and kept out of mischief. When there was a chance to do wrong, I let it go by, but I was no missionary among my companions. I did not preach, but stuck to my tasks and took my money home to mother."

"But when did you go to school?"

"I was never at school a day in my life. When we lived in the country, I was scarcely more than an infant. After we moved to Chicago, it was a battle to live. My mother taught me the alphabet and I would take a school book along when I delivered my papers and study it as I walked from one street lamp to another. At the age of fifteen I was earning $1000 a year. My mother thought I was too old for the streets and that I ought to get into a settled occupation.

GETS LAUNDRY JOB.

"So I went to a sign painter to learn his trade. I soon discovered, however, that it would be a year or two before I could be of any help to my family. You see, I simply had to make enough money to support my brothers and sisters. Besides, sign painting didn't suit me. I quit my prospective trade and got a place as solicitor for a laundry. Necessity compelled me to hustle and to be rather brazen. I actually went into houses and walked off the wash, doing it with a smile, of course, and a pleasant word. I was a success and was soon making $12 a week in commissions.

"About that time the teacher of my Sunday-school class became interested in my welfare. I was 15, and she was two years older, but she wore her hair in a coil, her dresses were long, and she had been graduated from high school. I looked upon myself as a boy, notwithstanding my many experiences, and upon her as a capable and educated woman. Seeing that I was woefully ignorant, but was trying to learn, she gave me books and assigned me to lessons. I went to her home every Monday evening for two years, where she heard my recitations. That was the only systematic teaching I ever had during my boyhood."

Senator Lorimer went no further into the history of his teacher, but I happened to know that her husband, a newspaper man and a lawyer, has fared well in Chicago politics, because of the help of the once red-headed shoeblack and laundry solicitor.

"Then you went into a packing-house," I said. "What was the nature of your work?"

HOURS ARE TOO LONG.

"The packing industry promised steady and lucrative employment, and my mother advised me to learn the business. I found a place with Wilson & Co., canners of meat, and familiarized myself with every department—cooking, capping, processing, inspecting, and so on. In a short time I was making from $25 to $35 a week. But Wilson's business began to drag, and I thought it prudent to go into the regular packing-houses. I worked everywhere except on the killing floor. At the age of 20 I broke down under long hours and the damp and unhealthful conditions of my employment. I was canning meat for Armour. Nearly every morning some one failed to appear because of a spree the night before, and I had to do two men's work. Fifteen hours a day caused me to collapse physically. The uncle of the young lady who taught my Sunday-school class was a city Alderman. Through his kind offices I was made a conductor on a street railroad."

"In 1884," I said, "you got into politics by organizing a Republican club in your mother's kitchen?"

"During my service on the street railroad I became infatuated with James G. Blaine, who, I was particular to inform everybody, was the greatest man in the world. I talked Blaine to every passenger who would listen to what I said. Lumber merchants on the way to dinner would wait for my car just to hear my fervid panegyrics. I could find no Republican tickets when I went to the polls on election day to vote the first time for President. I procured two tickets in the adjoining precinct, but gave them away to men with dinner pails in their hands. So I walked back and got a ballot for myself. I was on duty all night hauling the election crowds back and forth. At 12 o'clock I knew Blaine had been defeated. I took the news as a personal bereavement. The figures may not have been accurate, but we heard that Cleveland had carried New York by 1146 votes.

BECOMES AN ORGANIZER.

"At home, in bed, I thought that I understood the cause of Blaine's defeat. Doubtless, there were precincts in the city of New York, like my own in Chicago, where the Republican vote had not been cast. I talked my theory to every passenger who mourned with me over the result. Half a dozen young men showed partisan and patriotic interest. The following year Chicago was to choose a Mayor. I regarded it as my duty to see that the Republicans in my precinct, at least, were supplied with tickets. Nothing more was in my mind. I had never attended a primary meeting, and was utterly ignorant concerning political management and methods. So we met in my mother's kitchen and took amateur measures in the matter of supplying an adequate number of ballots.

"I talked later with young men in other precincts. Then I got into the neighboring wards. Little by little I learned the game of politics and extended my acquaintance. Before long I was a member of the Republican Central Committee. After Harrison's defeat for President in 1892, I called a meeting of prominent party workers, at which I said that Republicanism was doomed in Chicago unless we had an efficient organization. Opposition developed, on the ground that if we educated politicians they would ultimately displace us as party managers, but my suggestion was accepted. I went from precinct to precinct, and almost from house to house. That was seventeen years ago. Today Chicago has the most scientific organization ever known in all the history of American politics. I have told you frankly how I got into public matters. Let me add that I had no thought whatever of making politics my business."

"Did you continue to be a street railroad conductor?"

"No; I had learned enough about signs to paint a house. I became, therefore, a contractor, taking small jobs only and doing the work myself."

MAKES MONEY IN LAND.

"And presently you attempted a speculation in real estate?"

"I purchased twenty acres of land from William Pitt Kellogg, who had been Governor of Louisiana. A young man whom I knew had $3000. I hadn't a cent. We bought the land for $60,000, paying $3000 as earnest money and giving three notes for the balance. I sold the land in one evening and divided $24,000 with my partner. Afterward, I bought 320 acres and was deep in debt when Grover Cleveland swept the country in 1892. I began to trade and sell right after the election, getting a brickyard, which I have owned and operated ever since. At the coming of the panic of 1893 I was enabled, therefore, to protect my remaining real estate interests."

"You were nominated for Congress in 1894?" I said.

"I didn't care to be a candidate at that time," Senator Lorimer answered. "I was 33 years of age. While I hoped to be a member of Congress, I had planned to wait until I was 50 years old. But the district was 17,000 Democratic and the huge majority frightened every man who was fit for the place. I tried for a long time to get a candidate. 'Run yourself,' said 'Doc' Jamieson, our national committeeman. 'If you wait until you are 50 you may be dead and buried politically.'

"I took Jamieson's advice. The stockyards were located in the district and I had worked with nearly all of the men who were then in positions of influence. I was elected and served twelve years in the House of Representatives."

An Interesting Pension Experiment.

A large mercantile company, which has branches in nine of our cities, has put into effect an employés' old age pension system, which is an interesting experiment. To this the employés themselves contribute nothing, but all are eligible at 60 years of age, if they have served the company for twenty years. Provision, too, is made for those who, at any age, are incapacitated for work after twenty years of service. The amount of a pension is based upon the salary of an employé and the number of years he has served. The salary figured on is the average salary during the five years preceding retirement, and the pension amounts to 1 per cent. of this, multiplied by the number of years in service. Thus, a man whose salary is $2000 a year, upon retiring after twenty-five years' service, will receive a pension of $500. The smallest pension to be paid is $300, the largest, $1000; so that the system strongly favors those who have received small or moderate salaries and who, unable to save as they have gone along, have looked forward to old age with consternation.—[World's Work.

A Fair Cuban.

Senora Garcia y Velez, Wife of the Cuban Minister, Is American by Birth, But Has Lived for Past Ten Years in Havana.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—When the reëstablished Cuban government removed Señor Gonzalo Quesada, its representative at the American capital, from the dawn of the independence and before that the leader of the Junta, which kept alive Cuban patriotism among the Americanized Cubans, some predicted a cold welcome for the new envoy. Cuba could have chosen no man so acceptable to this country as the son of that noble patriot and fearless leader, Gen. Callisto Garcia. Garcia died in Washington when about to negotiate peace between the leaders of the Cuban revolution and the representatives of Spain. He is honored as the Solon of his party and reverently regarded as the first martyr after the independence. His health much impaired by privations endured during the war, he undertook to journey to Washington because his country required his services. On reaching this city he was seized with pneumonia and died after a day's illness at the Raleigh Hotel. The American nation fittingly honored his memory. He was buried with military pomp from St. Patrick's church. President McKinley sat in the edifice with many of his Cabinet and a large representation of official Washington to hear the eulogy pronounced over the dead hero by Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul.

Madam Garcia and sons.

The present Minister from Cuba and Señora Garcia y Velez resided during the early days of their Washington life at the Raleigh and they spent their first leisure in reverently visiting all the places hallowed by the memory of Gen. Garcia. The eldest son of the Minister bears his grandfather's name, Callisto Garcia. One of the pleasant pieces of news which the new envoy brought from Havana was that Cuba is about to erect a handsome legation home. Work will begin on the new structure just as soon as the Minister selects the site when he returns to Washington in the autumn. He is passing the summer with his family near Boston and will remain North until the end of October.

Señora Garcia is among the youngest matrons of the corps and is dainty and graceful in appearance. "I have paid many visits to Washington," she said to the writer just before leaving for the North. "My father was forced for political reasons to leave the land of his birth and seek an asylum in the United States. He built up a great business near Tampa, Fla., and we lived there until I was quite a well-grown girl. Invariably we came North for the summer. Sometimes we went to the Springs of Virginia and we always stopped for a few days in Washington, where my father always had friends. Often we went to Saratoga, and I am among those who sincerely mourn the passing of that renowned spa.

"I have recently came from Havana and it affords me much gratification to tell Americans that the Cuban Rip Van Winkle would now experience much trouble in locating his native town if he came down from the hills. It was formerly a joke among my American friends that Rip in Cuba could sleep for a cycle and find things at home just the same when he awoke. In appearance Havana and the great centers of shipping are much changed. But I doubt if the social habits and customs of Cuba will be disturbed. Frankly, we hope they will not. We cling to the old conservative ideas about the sacredness of marriage and nothing afforded me so much pleasure as the overwhelming negative placed on a bill permitting divorce, introduced in a recent legislative assembly.

"We cling to our leisurely social method and nothing would persuade the Cuban matron to work as hard to have a good time as her American sister. Of course, I can allow that the difference in the size of the two countries will give the Cuban social leader a much greater opportunity for leisure than the chatelaine of an official home in Washington. But we perform our social duties after a different scheme. My Washington friends are scandalized when I tell them that our visiting hours in Havana are from 10 at night until 2 o'clock in the morning. But then the climate must be considered and the Havanese are not in the habit of deserting their beloved city just because the themometer rises. We are not fond of the formal entertaining which enthralls the northern people. Our delight is the impromptu the almost unconscious social gathering. Few families eat the last meal of the day without a guest, numerous guests in important homes, but they come without the ostentation of a written invitation. The formal functions are in fact always state affairs. After dinner, those who are on intimate terms visit each other from 10 until about 2 o'clock in the morning. Generally engagements are made at different homes and large parties meet in one house by general accord and there are conversation and music and, best of all, an opportunity to talk and enjoy life as it can never be enjoyed without this close communion. It surpasses the American method of the hurried calls, the breathless eagerness to get away and make more calls. I wonder that Americans do not try the Latin method as it prevails in Cuba. Cards will answer for calls, as they are now prescribed by etiquette and the time saved could be devoted to visiting and really getting acquainted with each other.

"One of the signs of social progress in Havana is the increasing strength of the Femina movement. This organization is similar to the suffrage propaganda in the United States, but not so radical as the English suffragettes nor so advanced and successful as the Feministe movement in France. The Femina in Cuba has adopted the French society as a model and all their aspirations are founded on propaganda of the Parisians. A woman's paper advancing rather liberal and ultra views was published in Havana for some time by Mme. Blanche Barait, a powerful writer and eloquent lecturer, who enjoys in Havana much of the prestige accorded Mme. Marguerite Durand in Paris. But the paper was not financially successful and it recently suspended publication. Despite much criticism the suffrage movement is gaining considerable impetus in Cuba. Some of the influential and intellectual women of the country have joined their fortunes to the propaganda. There is Mme. Zayas Bazan, professor of letters in a Havana seat of learning and daughter of the well-known Dr. Bazan, whose salons are the attraction of the city during the winter. Mme. Bazan is a fervid advocate of the rights for women and she claims for them almost as much as the French feministes do. Mme. Del Castillo, a leader of the old Royalist set in Havana, is a fervent Femina and so is Magdalena Penarrendona, a popular writer. These ladies give their time, money and intellect to the propaganda. But in a way, the movement is as yet considered a sort of fad and many do not take it seriously. But of course the legal aspect of getting rights for women appeals to those who take no interest in the increasing influence which it would bring. The old Spanish law still prevails in Cuba, and women do not possess many rights under that construction."

Señora Garcia dwells with evident pleasure on the constant interchange of visits between this country and the Cuban resorts. Señor Garcia, who has been in the Foreign Office of Havana since leaving the City of Mexico, where he was envoy, devoted part of his vacation last winter to taking American friends over the superb roads recently built for automobilists. He guided several parties personally, and the travelers were enthusiastic over the experience. The Minister hopes to interest the travel-loving Americans in the beauties of Cuban tours. The roads for touring cars are now as near perfect as may be found in Massachusetts and the Old World. In Havana cars may be obtained at prices which make the Americans open their eyes and an excellent system of road inns adds to the pleasure of the trip.

"We are intense lovers of the dance," said Señora Garcia. "The entire winter we dance and dance. The married people as well as the young belles and beaux enjoy this pleasure. Three or four dances may be given in prominent homes on the same evening and every one will be filled with guests. Then we love music and we are seldom without some musical attraction during the season proper. Americans who formerly sojourned in the Bermudas and the Bahamas come now to Havana and to Santiago and they seem to find the winter amusements more varied. I can scarcely put in the language the feelings which animate the Cuban toward Americans. From the earliest day of the trouble with Spain we always found a hospitable asylum and true and disinterested friends across the bay. You can find few families in Havana without a personal reason for gratitude to some American or to the great nation in the aggregate. For this reason alone Americans can enjoy life to the fullest when they come to the Cuban capital, for they feel they are the most welcome of guests. We are so glad that they are now coming in larger numbers than formerly."

Señora Garcia was married nine years ago in the Church of Our Lady of Mercy in Havana. Her husband's family, like her own, had been for years under Spain's displeasure, and the romance which terminated in a happy marriage was one which began in exile. Señor Garcia left Cuba at an early age and took refuge in Florida. At times he returned to Cuba with his parents and received his education in snatches during the periods in which Spain was not making active war on those who favored the separation of Cuba from the mother country. Señor Ybor, having early emigrated from the land of his birth, and having prospered in his adopted home, became a filibuster of the most fearless type and collected about all those who favored the war of the independence. Young Garcia joined in his tender years this group, with the result of this marriage to Señor Ybor's youngest daughter. There are three boys in the Garcia y Velez family, the eldest called for the heroic warrior who died in Washington, and the second bearing his maternal grandfather's name, Carlos Ybor Garcia, which he has written Carlos Garcia y Ybor. The Señora speaks English perfectly and she is also a master of the French, German and Spanish languages. She was carefully educated at home and having married at the age of 17, she did not have .... opportunity of testing whether higher education makes for the happiness of woman. But she is an exceedingly cultured and liberal woman and favors all the advantages of education and travel which a girl can obtain. She plays skillfully on the piano and on the guitar, and is in every respect a pleasing type of the high-born, intellectual woman of the Latin-American race.

To Prove Catarrh Can Be Cured—We Will Treat Free Until Cured All Persons Applying at Our Offices and Beginning a Course of Treatment on or Before Aug. 28.

No matter how long you have suffered, or how many different things you have tried, don't consider your case incurable until you have had our opinion and tried our treatment. You need not hesitate to accept this exceptionally generous offer. We mean just what we say. WHY DO WE DO IT? Simply to convince every person, the skeptical ones particularly, that Catarrh in any form can be cured positively and permanently. To prove to those who have tried many remedies and so-called "sure cures" and failed to obtain the results they wanted, that it was the fault of the remedy or treatment and not because their case was incurable. Last, but not least, we want to demonstrate in a thorough and positive manner that our treatment is the right kind. That it reaches the cavities of the head, NOSE and THROAT, that it purifies the BLOOD, eradicates the GERMS of CATARRH from the STOMACH and BOWELS, in fact, it penetrates every part of the body where CATARRH GERMS can possibly locate, and puts the SYSTEM in such a healthy condition that with proper care recurrence of the disease is impossible. Such is our idea of CURING CATARRH. If that is the kind of a cure you want, call upon us at once and receive treatment FREE.

STATEMENT OF REV. J. S. ANDERSON OF M. E. CHURCH.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: Los Angeles, 418 South Hope st.

From childhood I have been more or less inconvenienced by a growth in the nasal organs, which made it difficult—yes, impossible—for me to breathe in the proper manner, through the nostrils. It also impaired my speaking.

At last I decided to consult some specialist concerning the matter. Dr. S. G. Edwards of the Broadway Physicians' and Surgeons' Association was the specialist I selected. He performed an operation, removing the growth and now I feel like a new and healthier person.

It affords me great pleasure to give Dr. Edwards my highest recommendation as to skill, ability and conscientiousness. Yours very truly, J. S. Anderson, Formerly Missionary in Utah of the M. E. Church.

charged against the novelist canceled.

Arnold Schmidt, a delivery boy for a bakery at San Rafael, has received word from an attorney in Switzerland that his father has died leaving him heir to a $50,000 estate in the Alps. His father conducted a hotel near Lake Lucerne.

Prof. F. B. Franklin, who lost his position on the faculty of the University of the Pacific, San José, at the end of the last semester when Dr. W. W. Guth, the new president of the institution, discharged several instructors to make room for new blood, is to become instructor of history in Albany College at Albany, Or.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

COL. EDWARD B. PRATT, Thirtieth Infantry, has assumed command of the post at the Presidio, San Francisco. Capt. Isaac Erwin, also of the Thirtieth Infantry will act as his adjutant. This relieves Col. John A. Lundeen as post commander, but Lundeen will continue at the head of the artillery district at this post, and his adjutant will be Capt. James M. Wheeler.

Maj.-Gen. William P. Duvall, commanding the Philippine division, is now absent from Manila making a general inspection of the military posts of the islands. He will probably be on this tour for several weeks. President Taft is much interested in the proposed establishment of a large military camp near Manila, and Gen. Duvall will visit the place which has been suggested as an advantageous location for it.

Maj.-Gen. John F. Weston, commander of the Department of California and the third officer in rank in the United States Army, is planning to end his long military career in a few days. He will ask leave of absence, and if it is granted will retire to a healthful resort in Arizona until his regular date of retirement, early in November. While in command of the Department of the Philippines, just previous to his transfer to this department, Gen. Weston's health was undermined by the climate. He has never fully recovered.

Lieut.-Col. H. S. T. Harris of the army medical department has assumed the duties of chief surgeon of the Department of California. He has relieved Maj. James M. Kennedy, who for a long time had been compelled to bear the double task of serving as chief surgeon and having personal command of the general hospital at the Presidio.

Col. Charles W. Larned of West Point denies hotly Prof. Zueblin's accusation that the national military and naval academies are "turning out a generation of snobs," and calls to mind, Grant, Lee, Sherman and Jackson as modest doers of deeds.

The United States Naval Institute has lost a most valuable executive by the resignation of Rear-Admiral Caspar F. Goodrich as president. He relinquishes the office because he has reached the retiring age. Admiral Goodrich has been connected with the institute since its origin, he has been a frequent contributor to its proceedings, and was awarded the prize medal in 1908. He has been president since October, 1904. It is likely that Rear-Admiral Richard Wainwright will be elected to succeed Admiral Goodrich. He is a prize medalist of the institute, and is now in command of the third division of the Atlantic fleet.

Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood has been added to the already long list of officers and officials who have had decorations and honors given them by foreign governments, but have had no authorization from Congress to permit them to receive and wear them. France has given Gen. Wood the cross of the Legion of Honor.

By the retirement of Col. Levi P. Hunt, commander the Tenth United States Cavalry, the following promotions ensue: Lieut.-Col. Thaddeus W. Jones, Third Cavalry, to be colonel; Maj. B. H. Cheever, Second Cavalry, to be lieutenant-colonel; Capt. R. J. Duff, Eighth Cavalry, to be major; First Lieutenant Dan Van Voorhis, Third Cavalry, to be captain, and Second Lieutenant Leon R. Partridge, Fifteenth Cacalry, to be first lieutenant.

Gen. O. O. Howard, U.S.A., retired, is one of the three surviving corps commanders of the Civil War period, Gen. Grenville M. Dodge of Council Bluffs and Gen. Daniel E. Sickles being the other two. Gen. Howard is 79 years of age.

EDUCATORS, ARTISTS.

PROF. ERNEST DEWITT BURTON of the University of Chicago has returned from a long sojourn in the Orient, where he has been studying educational methods in Constantinople, Syria, Egypt, India, China and Japan. The most interesting thing about his tour, he says, was his trip into West China, where very few white men, except missionaries, ever go. The population of West China is about 60,000,000, and it is an empire in itself, with no imports or exports. Wide as the country was he saw scarcely space enough to pitch a tent, so extensively was the land tilled.

E. C. Griffin, recently engaged to head the chemistry department of the Kansas State Agricultural College, is spending his vacation in Brighton, Cal., as a hod carrier. He is not trying to solve the labor problem, but likes hard work.

Van Tassel Sutphen, author of "The Doomsman" and "The Gates of Chance," sailed a few days ago for a sojourn of several months abroad, chiefly in Italy. Mr. Sutphen is a golf player, formerly editor of Golf and writer of several stories of the links.

Karel Havlicek, the sixteen-year-old son of Edward Havlicek, whose playing on the violin in Omaha in recent years is well remembered, is making a decided hit in Berlin with his musical ability. At a concert at the Berlin Conservatory of Music, where he was down on the programme for one number, he was given five recalls.

Henry Weidenbach, artist, serving a term of four years in the Ohio penitentiary for grand larceny, is to go over the State house in Columbus under the guard of an official and redecorate some of the valuable oil paintings there. Gov. Harmon and Adjt.-Gen. Weybrecht have said that they consider Weidenbach a thoroughly competent artist to do the work.

Alexander Lawrie, 82 years of age, an inmate of the Indiana State Soldiers' Home, is painting the portraits of forty of the noted generals of the Union Army of the Civil War. He has completed thirty-one, and is now at work on three more.

David Edstrom, the now famous sculptor of Paris, used to sell papers as a newsboy in Ottumwa, Iowa. When no customers were present he pitched pennies to the advantage or disadvantage of other newsboys. He had a great admiration for gamblers and successful saloon-keepers, principally because they wore diamonds sometimes. In the course of his rise in life he got a job in an Ottumwa slaughter-house. Then two men realized the possibilities in David Edstrom. One offered to back him in the saloon business. The other, Johannes Schelwe, Ottumwa artist, told David Edstrom of the slaughter-house that he was a born artist, and that his future lay in Paris with the masters. The influence of his sister caused him to take the advice to become an artist. Today he is world-

KENTUCKY BELLE WILL WED MARQUIS.

Miss Susanne Henning.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Miss Susanna Henning, whose engagement to the Marquis de Charette has been announced, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Williamson Henning, formerly of Louisville, but now of New York. Mrs. Henning was a Miss Merriwether of Shelby county, Kentucky, where she now has a Blue Grass estate.

Miss Henning, who has spent much of her time in the last five years abroad, has not yet reached her majority and is counted one of the most beautiful young women of Kentucky. She is petite and vivacious. Her greatest hobby is show horses, and she has caused a sensation at various horse shows, including the annual Louisville show, by her handling of high steppers.

Miss Henning met the Marquis in the East, and upon her return to Kentucky for a visit to her grandmother, Mrs. S. K. Henning of Louisville, the marquis came also and, registering at a hotel, remained in Louisville for six months. The two were almost constantly together.

The marquis' mother was a Miss Polk of Tennessee.

OVER THE SEA.

KEIR HARDIE, M. P., who has been accused by his foes and critics with having had much to do with stirring up Indian revolt against British rule in the territory over which Edward VII is Emperor, has made up his mind to stop what he believes is a gross misrepresentation, and he has brought his latest accuser before the courts.

Lieut. Shackleton, the Antarctic explorer, found himself at the end of his expedition $100,000 in debt, because the financial crisis in the United States brought ruin to the group of Americans who promised him the necessary financial assistance. Lieut. Shackleton has arranged an American lecture tour to raise the money to pay this indebtedness.

Twelve years ago Prince Buelow was a poor man. He retires from the office of German Chancellor with a large private fortune and the rank of count and prince. On the day the Kaiser gave him the latter title, Buelow was notified that his share of the estate of Herr Godfrey, the wealthy sugar merchant of Hamburg, amounted to $1,875,000. Herr Godfrey had never met Prince Buelow, but had become interested in his public career and left him his fortune.

Hon. Lionel de Rothschild has sent an expedition to Africa to collect fleas.

William T. Stead, the editor of the Review of Reviews, has become so much interested in spiritualism, that he has abandoned his editorial offices and converted them into a sort of spiritualistic telephone exchange, where the living may call up and communicate with the "so-called dead."

Miss Mary Helen Carlisle, the English artist, who proposes to sketch from a cab in the middle of a New York street, learned to make sketches by the clock at the age of 15 in South Africa, under the guidance of a very martinet of an uncle. Miss Carlisle relates how under this martial rule she would be deposited at a certain spot, congenial or uncongenial, and left with the message that she would be called for in half an hour, and that she was expected to have her sketch finished within that time. There was no time allowance for poetic inspirations or elusive themes. Painting was a business; therefore, if you meant business, paint.

Aristide Briand, new premier of France, is 47 years of age. He has risen rapidly. A few years ago he was hardly known except among the members of his own party, the revolutionary socialists. He was appointed reporter of the Church and State Separation Bill, and soon became recognised as a high authority on the subject. He aimed to draw up a bill broadly liberal in spirit, but devoid of fanaticism and designed to assure freedom of worship and of conscience. The result was his elevation to the post of Minister of Public Instruction and Worship in 1906. During the church and state troubles he appears to have acted with moderation, and after the death of M. Guyot-Dessaigne, December 31, 1907, he was appointed Minister of Justice, retaining the portfolio of worship.

Miss Lucy Burns, who was arrested for taking part in the suffragette meeting in London June 29, is a Vassar graduate and a student of modern languages at the University of Bonn. Miss Alice Paul, who was among those taken in charge by the London police, is also an American woman and holds the degree of Master of Arts.

"Very well, I will see him. It will at least give me an opportunity of—oh! how I have longed to be free, and yet—what a price to pay for freedom!" and she buried her face in her hands.

"The sting of it will pass away," Leonore replied. "The freedom will remain. But are you quite, quite sure that you wish to be free? Is there nothing that might alter your decision, nothing that would oblige you to sacrifice your own happiness in order to do that which was right? Is there nothing that might make it your duty to wait till—till you can be legally married to William Tankerlane?"

"There is nothing," Laura replied, with flaming cheeks and averted head. She understood.

"I am glad," said Leonore, and a sudden impulse moved her to fling her arms round her companion's neck and kiss her. "I am glad," she repeated, "for a divorce would create a scandal, and it would mean more than a mere divorce. It might mean a prosecution for bigamy, and that would be terrible. As it is, we can all three go our separate ways, and the world will be none the wiser, and William Tankerlane will pass out of both our lives. I have no wish to be free. I shall never marry again. I have my art to live for. It is enough, as much as any woman can want in her life. Let William Tankerlane be judged and punished by his God."

Laura rose suddenly to her feet with a white face and blazing eyes.

"God will judge him," she cried fiercely, "for this, and for more than this, more than I can tell you, Leonore. I sold myself to him. I cannot expain, but I was forced to do it. I sold myself to him, but I little thought that I had sold my honor. Go, Leonore; for heaven's sake leave me. Let me be alone. I cannot endure your presence a moment longer. I must be alone or I shall go mad."

Leonore rose from the sofa and laid her hand on the girl's arm. Beside the flaming beauty of Laura's impassioned face she seemed ugly and insignificant. Yet there was much strength of will and intellect in those large dark eyes.

"Laura," she said softly, "you must be calm and brave. Your nature is too noble to concern itself with revenge, which, after all, is one of the most paltry of human passions. I, too, have much to avenge. But I have conquered my feelings of resentment long ago. You must only think of the practical side of the matter. You have a long and useful life before you. You must only think of how you can use it to the best advantage."

"Words!" cried Laura fiercely. "Nothing but words. Do you think I am made of stone, that I can forget, that I can forgive, that—oh, Leonore, for heaven's sake leave me, or I don't know what will come from my lips."

"Good-by, dear," said Leonore, kissing her gently on the cheek. "When you have seen your—when you have seen Tankerlane, come round to me. I will put you up for the night. We can then talk over your plans for the future. Good-by till then."

Laura did not reply, but stared fixedly before her with a hard look in her eyes.

"Laura," repeated the actress firmly, "you must not let this come between us. You must not let this worthless man affect our friendship."

"I am just beginning to realize things," replied Laura slowly, "just beginning to see how terrible it all is, how horrible it is for you to kiss me. I don't think I quite understood before. I am just beginning to see things clearly. You must go, Leonore. I must never see you again. This thing has come between us. Any friendship now would be unnatural, repulsive." Her voice was hard and cold. She did not even look at Leonore as she spoke, but still gazed past her at the door.

"Laura," replied the actress, and the single word was in itself a fry of fear, a wail of sorrow, a whisper of reproach. It vibrated like a chord of music. No other woman, perhaps, in the world could have expressed such intensity of feeling in a single word.

Laura turned her eyes on the speaker, and her lips trembled. Then the hard look died from her face and the tears came into her eyes.

"Forgive me, Leonore," she cried, "I will come with you—now, at once; I cannot face him. If I do, I will not answer for the consequences. I will come with you——"

She stopped, and both the women looked towards the door. They heard steps in the passage outside.

"It is too late," said Leonore; "I will go now. But come to me afterwards."

The the door opened, and William Tankerlane entered the room.

CHAPTER XI.

DISHONORED LOVE.

William Tankerlane glanced sharply at the faces of the two women. Both bore traces of the storm through which they had passed. Leonore realised this, and hastened to explain.

"I was just going," she said with a smile. "I have been saying good-by to your wife. It is too cruel of you to take her away."

"I am very sorry we have to go, Mrs. Bonsal," he said, "but we shall probably have the pleasure of seeing you again."

There was a challenge in his voice, and the actress was quick to answer it.

"I shall certainly see Laura again," she replied.

"We shall be delighted to see you," he answered, but the tone of his voice belied his words.

Leonore held out her hand. "Good-by," she said with a smile, "good-by, Laura," and crossing over to the girl's side, she kissed her effusively on the cheek. Then she left the room.

Directly the door had closed behind her, Tankerlane lit a cigarette, and, strolling over to the fireplace, gazed thoughtfully at his wife, who was looking out of the window. He could only see the profile of her face, clear-cut like a cameo, against the daylight. It seemed almost without expression.

"Well, Laura," he said cheerfully, "this time tomorrow we shall be in London. I daresay you're not sorry to leave Paris. By and by, I hope your friendship with Mrs. Bonsal will come to an end."

She did not answer him, but still looked out of the window.

"I daresay it will cool off," he continued, "without any interference on my part. I know these violent friendships between women. They are beautiful, wonderful, while they last, but they don't last very long."

Laura turned away from the window, and, crossing over to a table, a few feet away from Tankerlane, began to turn over the pages of a magazine. The man frowned. She was behaving for all the world as though he were not in the room.

"I am sorry if you are annoyed about our departure," he continued quietly; "I can assure you that it is better for us to be in London. You can't expect me to stay in Paris all my life, because you desire the society of Mrs. Bonsal."

Laura looked up from the magazine, and Tankerlane saw her eyes. They blazed like living coals, and their fire was accentuated by the calm pallor of her face.

"Why do you call her Mrs. Bonsal?" she asked in a cold voice. Tankerlane laughed.

Presumably because that is her name. Would you rather I called her Mademoiselle Jackson?"

"No," answered Laura, "I would rather you called her by her right name—Mrs. William Tankerlane."

And, as she uttered the name, which, until an hour ago, she had believed to be her own, the whole expression of her face changed. A storm of passionate hatred swept across it, and it seemed like the face of another woman. She clenched her hands and trembled from head to foot. She forgot that she cared nothing for this man. She only remembered the shame he had brought upon her, the dishonor he had thrust into her pure life.

For a brief moment Tankerlane was staggered by the shock. The hour, which he had long dreaded, had come at last to him. But he quickly mastered his confusion. His strong mind reasserted itself. He knew that he would need all his strength, all his coolness, and all his sublety of intellect.

"My dear Laura," he said, with a laugh, "are you mad?"

"No, I am not mad," she exclaimed, "though I might have been if I had loved you. As it is, I have only to bear the shame of what you have done to me. Thank God, I never had any love for you."

"You are not yourself, Laura," he replied gently, "you have been ill. Something has occurred to upset you. That woman, who has just left, has told you some lie. Surely it is better for you to ask me for an explanation of what she has told you than to speak to me in the way you have just spoken."

His words, uttered in a dignified and reproachful voice, recalled something that Leonore had said a few minutes previously. "That is not the kind of justice a man would require." She made an effort to calm herself.

"Give me some explanation," she said coldly. "The woman who has just left has told me that she is your wife. I have no reason to doubt her words. But, for the sake of common justice, I ask you whether she has spoken the truth or not?"

"She has not spoken the truth," he replied gravely. "You are my wife."

"I could hardly expect you to make any other reply to my question. But, for all that, you have lied to me, and I know that you have lied to me, because I know that Leonore has spoken the truth."

"That being the case," he replied sarcastically, "it was hardly necessary to ask the question."

"I can so easily find out the truth," she continued. "Leonore can give me all the details. I have only to verify them. I intend to leave you tonight. You will return to England alone. I shall stay with Leonore. I shall at once proceed to investigate the matter. If I find that Leonore has not spoken the truth, I shall return to you and ask your forgiveness. If I find that she has spoken the truth, you will never see me again."

"The inquiry is hardly likely to be conducted on impartial lines," he replied. "You have every reason for wishing to be rid of me. Under Mrs. Bonsal's guidance, you will find no difficulty in coming to the conclusion which you desire."

Laura looked at him with contempt.

"I wish to learn the truth," she said quietly. "I am not looking out for an excuse to leave you. I wish to satisfy myself as to the truth. It would be no pleasure to me to do you an injustice."

William Tankerlane was silent. He had long foreseen the possibility of the present situation, and had resolved, if ever it did occur, to leave the scanty protection, which a tissue of lies would afford him, and to come out and do battle in the open. The situation had, however, been sprung rather suddenly upon him, and it was hard to make up his mind to go back on the words he had spoken in the first stress and confusion of the conflict.

Yet, if he had to confess, it would be better to confess now, than have the confession forced on him by the result of Laura's investigations. He could, at any rate, plead to her in the name of love, for forgiveness, point out how he had sinned through the sheer strength of his passion.

Laura watched his inscrutable face with her steady, fearless eyes, but she could read nothing of the thoughts that were passing through his brain. The long silence was becoming unbearable to a mind that was wrought up to the highest pitch of excitement. Would the man ever speak? At last, when more than a minute had elapsed, she could bear the strain no longer.

"If you have nothing to say to me," she exclaimed, "I will go and pack my things. I shall leave the hotel before dinner."

He made no reply, and she moved away from him toward the door. But before she could reach it, he sprang after her and caught her by the arm.

"Laura," he cried hoarsely, "you must not leave me. I will not let you leave me."

She stopped, but she did not turn her face to his.

"I will not lie to you, Laura," he continued, "I will confess everything. Leonore spoke the truth. She is my wife."

"Please leave go of my arm," she said, "you are hurting me."

"Yes, in the eyes of the law she is my wife," he continued, loosing her arm, "but in the sight of God you, the woman I love, are my wife."

"In the sight of God?" queried Laura, turning round on him with eyes that blazed with scorn. "In the sight of God? What has God to do with our unholy union? But I am glad you have spoken the truth at last. I will wish you good-by, here, in this room; now, at this moment. Do not let me see you again! Leave the hotel till I have gone from it! Every moment that I see you or hear your voice seems to drive me still deeper into the mire."

"You shall not go," he cried. "I will not let you go. Do you realise how much I love you?" The mask had dropped from the man's face. He was in earnest now, and the fierce hunger of love was in his eyes. The time for acting had passed. On the brink of a great crisis he bared his heart and soul to the light. No one who looked on his face could doubt that his love was fierce and scorching as the fires of hell.

"I realize what you have done to me," she replied, "to me, the woman you profess to love. I married you to gain your silence, for the sake of the man I love. Even an honorable marriage was a heavy price to pay. But this was not enough for you. Nothing less than my ruin would satisfy you. I hope you are satisfied. A little while ago I was an innocent girl. Today I am the thing you have made me! I wonder that you dare to speak to me of love. The very word, as it comes from your lips, is too foul a thing for decent people to listen to."

"I love you," he said, suddenly clasping her in his arms, and drawing her close to him, "and I will not let hold you fast. I have sinned against you because my love was stronger than my conscience. I wished you to be mine, and nothing else mattered. Honor? Morality? Truth? What are all these in the path of love? Straws to be whirled away in the storm of passion, dust to be scattered to the four winds of heaven. I love you, Laurie, and nothing else matters—nothing else has ever mattered."

She lay white and still in his arms as he poured out his stream of passionate words. She did not even struggle to free herself from his grasp. All her strength seemed to have left her. His voice sounded like a distant echo. She left the grip of his muscles like a vice, and then when the voice had died away into silence she felt his burning kisses on her lips, her brow, her neck, her cheek. And every kiss seemed to sear her soul as white hot iron sears the flesh.

"Laurie!" he cried, fiercely. "Speak to me! Tell me that you will not leave me."

The sound of Tankerlane's voice broke the spell which his furious passion had cast over Laura's mind. The blood rushed to her white cheeks, and her eyes blazed with anger. She struggled violently to free herself from his strong arms.

"No, Laurie, no," he cried hoarsely; "you shall not leave me. You are mine, Laurie, mine;" and he kissed her passionately again and again, on lips and cheeks and forehead.

"You coward!" she screamed. "Oh, God will kill you, will strike you dead!" She had lost all control of herself, and scarcely knew what words had come from her lips. But every word struck home to Tankerlane's heart.

The passion slowly died from his face, and a hard look came into his eyes. Then he let go of the girl, and walked away from her. She flung herself on the sofa, and, burying her face in her hands, sobbed piteously.

He turned round, looked at her for a moment, and then, walking over to the door, locked it, and placed the key in his pocket.

"Laurie," he said gently, when he had returned to her side.

She did not move nor answer him. But her body quivered at the sound of his voice, as though he had struck it with a whip.

"Laurie," he continued, "forgive me. I did not know what I was doing. I love you so much. I cannot lose you. The violence of my passion carried me away, made me forget. I have been a brute. But I wish to put things straight. I wish to do what is fair and honorable. Will you talk over matters quietly with me?"

The man's voice was tender and broken with emotion. He stood before her like a guilty criminal pleading for his life. But she did not answer him.

"Lauria," he cried fiercely, "I do not plead to you in the name of love; that would be useless, for you do not love me. I only want to do what is best for you. Will you listen to me, and discuss matters calmly? I only wish to do what is right." Laura raised her tear-stained face from the cushions of the sofa, and looked at him with fear and loathing in her eyes.

"There is nothing to be said," she replied mechanically.

"There is much to be said," he retorted. "Let us put the question of love aside. I only wish to consider your position."

Laura rose to her feet with an ugly look on her face.

"My position," she said coldly, "is the one you have placed me in. Does it give you any satisfaction to talk about it?"

"I wish," he answered humbly, "to make amends."

"There is nothing to be said," she cried, turning away from him, "nothing to be done. I do not wish to hear you. I am going to leave you now, and I hope that I shall never set eyes on you again. Every minute I stay good name. I will leave here at once."

She walked across to the door, and, turning the handle, shook it violently. Then she came swiftly back to Tankerlane, and her eyes blazed with anger.

"Give me the key of that door," she cried, "or I will ring the bell."

The man's face hardened and his mouth closed like a vice.

"Give me the key of that door," she repeated, "unless you wish us to be the talk of the servants in the hotel."

"You will not dare," he replied firmly; "you have some pride, some respect for yourself."

"I have no pride, no respect for myself. I know well enough what I am—what you have made me. Give me the key of that door."

"For God's sake be calm, Laurie," he exclaimed. "I wish to put things straight. All the world believes you to be my wife. No one need ever know the truth. Leonore will not speak. She does not love me. She is fond of you. She will not speak, for your sake. She has no wish to obtain her rights."

"How dare you!" she cried. "Give me the key of that door—at once, or I will rouse the whole hotel."

The girl's gentle face was transfigured with passion, and no one who had seen her at that moment would have recognised the cold and courteous Mrs. Tankerlane. Her cheeks flamed crimson, her hands were clenched, and there was a light almost of madness in her eyes. Her body trembled from head to foot, and the veins stood out on her forehead. If a weapon had been ready to her hand she would have used it, for she had lost all control of her reason.

"Hush, Laurie," the man replied in a firm voice, "you know I did not mean that. We can be married. A divorce can be easily arranged. I was married in America, and divorce excites no comment there. No one will hear of it. Then we can be married in a registry office, and the world will know nothing, save that we are still man and wife. There will be no scandal. Your reputation will have no slur cast upon it. I am sure my wife will agree to an arrangement of this sort. She will be glad to be free." And he laughed bitterly.

"And I, too, am glad to be free," cried Laura; "ay, glad—from the bottom of my heart. Give me the key of the door, and let me out of my prison."

The man's eyes flashed dangerously. So far he had controlled his temper, and had assumed the position of a suppliant. But he could restrain himself no longer.

"I am sorry I have wasted my pity on you," he said coldly. "I only wished to do what was right. I wished to keep your name unsullied. I love you and desire to shield you from harm."

"I have no desire for your pity or your protection," she retorted hotly. "You have acted like a blackguard, and my only wish is to be rid of you."

"If freedom is all that you wish, it is easily granted. Here is the key of the door."

He held out the key, and she took it from his hand.

"I do not know what your plans are," he said quietly, "but I presume we both return to England as unmarried people, and all this is to be a blank in our lives."

"It is to be as though it had never been," she answered, moving towards the door.

"I have dared all to gain you," he continued, "I have counted honor as nothing. I love you still, and though I have given you your freedom, I will still fight to bring you back to me. So long as I live, Laura, I shall try to conquer you. You cannot escape me. Remember that John Shil's life is still in my hands."

She turned round on him with a look of terror.

"You do not mean it," she faltered; "you could not be so vile. You swore on the Bible, you swore to keep silence."

Kind Hearts--Good Deeds

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Theodore Harris, who died at Louisville, Ky., a few days ago, left practically all of his million-dollar estate to the Baptists of that State. Even the portions given to relatives were accompanied by the provision that should they die or become otherwise disqualified their portion shall revert to the estate as a whole and be paid eventually into the hands of the Baptist Church organizations. The discrepancy between his bequests to the church and those to his own children he explains by saying: "The observations of a long life have taught me that inherited wealth is seldom useful to the one inheriting it, while on the other hand, with the blessings of God, these benefactions will do good to thousands yet unborn."

BITS OF VERSE.

The Path Across the Hill.

There is a path that leads across a hill—
A tiny path down to the meadow green,
And through them flows a slender, rippling rill,
The current glinting with a silvery sheen,
And all along its banks the violets grow—
They shine like amethysts amid the grass—
And sweet the music of the bubbling flow
Of the bright waters as they onward pass.

How restful is the memory of that scene
To one long weary with the toil and strife,
The care and fret, the daily dull routine,
That fill the measure of this sordid life!
That quiet picture comes amid the throng,
Binding the spirit with its olden spell;
Again I hear the rivulet's sweet song,
And far away the cadence of a bell.
—[Viola Virginie Antley, in the New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Little by Little.

Little by little the time goes by—
Short if you sing through it, long if you sigh;
Little by little—an hour a day,
Gone with the years that have vanished away;
Little by little the race is run;
Trouble and waiting and toil are done!

Little by little the skies grow clear,
Little by little the sun comes near;
Little by little the days smile out
Gladder and brighter on pain and doubt;
Little by little the seed we sow
Into a beautiful yield will grow.

Little by little the world grows strong
Fighting the battle of Right and Wrong;
Little by little the wrong gives way,
Little by little the Right has sway;
Little by little all longing souls
Struggle up nearer the shining goals.

Little by little the good in men
Blossoms to beauty for human ken;
Little by little the angels see
Prophecies better of good to be;
Little by little the God of all
Lifts the world nearer the pleading call.—[Author Unknown.

The Roses.

I.

The sweetheart roses linger and smiling deck the sod
And the world is like a picture where the green hills smile to God!
And life's sweet in the living, for no blessing he denies,
And the soul's divine thanksgiving floats in incense to the skies.

II.

The sweetheart roses linger. Though we wander far away
God ever sends his roses for a memory of May;
And the world is growing brighter with the morning and the night—
We're going on to glory in the beauty of the night!
—[Frank L. Stanton in Atlanta Constitution.

"Good-by."

"Good-by!"—Ah, me! the words are weird
As bells that toll for spirits fled.
"Good-by" forewarns the goal is neared.
And yet, "good-byes" are lightly said.
The farewell falls from laughing lips,
On ears that idly catch the sound,
As though our lives were buoyant ships,
And years were seas, sailed gaily round.

"Good-by!"—Ah, me! the words are fraught
With vanished hopes and broken ties,
With lessons all too rudely taught,
With angry clouds 'neath summer skies.
From heart to heart, the words should pass,
Whilst friendly hands clasped closely lie,
For swiftly runs the fatal glass,
And surely comes that last "good-by."

Fresh Literature: Reviews of the Newest Books.

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

[BY THE TIMES REVIEWER.]

"Tristram Shandy, Gentleman."

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF LAURENCE STERNE. By Wilbur L. Cross. The Macmillan Company, New York. (Price $3.)

The lives of eccentric geniuses are always interesting. The drab and monotonous career of the conventional man does not hold my attention. And even those virtuous and under-sexed ladies and gentlemen who make the lives of geniuses hard to bear by annoying them with their puritanism, like to read of those naughty and creative gentlemen who snap their fingers in the face of the conventions and of the morals which happen to be in vogue during their lifetime.

Little has been known of Laurence Sterne, and in Sterne's previous biographies there have been many erroneous statements and many omissions of facts. In a book remarkable for it painstakingness, its care and scholarly discrimination and research, Prof. Wilbur L. Cross has given us an account of this eccentric parish clergyman to whom we owe some of the most delicious and ironical humor in English.

Sterne, by nature, was controversial. Though a clergyman, he abhorred the conventions; cared not a bagatelle for public opinion; saw only a pompous and serious humor in the warring men of science with their flamboyant egotism; had a spirit bordering on ridicule for smug, self-satisfied indoor learning; and thereupon went to work to relieve himself of his true feelings. He took the natural course that a man of literary instincts would take. He wrote a book, with no thought of any human being but himself, poked fun at everyone and everything he did not like and thereby proved again that indiscretion is the better part of genius.

The publishers of those days, no doubt, were modeled very much as they are in these days—tremendously virtuous (wholly for monetary reasons) and inordinately timid. Their goal was the goal of our own publishers—to offend no one and to apotheosize mediocrity. They refused to publish Sterne's book. However, it made little difference, for this clergyman-author secured the money and put forth a volume himself. And what a volume it was! Every typographical rule in the printer's decalogue was smashed to smithereens. The punctuation, consisting mostly of dashes, gave the impression of having been thrown at the copy from across the room, landing haphazard here and there among the words. The printing of the book, apparently, was done from the ends of some job-lots of type, and gave a most curious appearance. The subject matter was written very much on the same order in which it was set up. In text, it was very much like some of our modern novels, consisting for the most part of padding. The book was entitled, "The Life and Opinions of Tristram Shandy, Gentleman," although the facetious author informed his readers that this satirical gentleman still had the experience of birth before him. However, the book immediately became one of the "six best sellers"—although this charming term was not in use in the eighteenth century; its success was colossal. The book reviewers grabbed their stylographs and went into ecstacies over Tristram Shandy. Their enthusiasm was genuine, too—unlike (whisper!) the enthusiasm of the modern reviewer—because they could not even hope for any advertising from a poor and obscure parish clergyman.

Then the lionizing commenced. The 400 (how little we have changed) opened their arms to Sterne. He was famous. An epistle addressed merely "Tristram Shandy, Europe," was duly received by the Yorkshire parson. Then the publishers (how human and how like our own sweet publishers!) wished to contract with Sterne for his future books. And Sterne, drunk with the madness of it all, promised a new Tristram Shandy every year. But, as if to counterbalance the unconventionality of Tristram, which was unbecoming to a clergyman, he issued intermittently with these books of satire (which in 1767 numbered nine) volumes of ethical lectures and sermons.

Then, of a sudden, Sterne forewent his humor for sentiment. Just why this sudden change came we do not know. Prof. Cross offers an explanation, but to me it is inadequate. He says that Sterne, feeling the approach of death, wished to leave the world with a different impression than had been made upon it by Tristram Shandy. His humor had led him into many indecorums of speech, and after all, Sterne prized his sensibility. However, whatever the explanation of the change, then came the famous Sentimental Journey by which the majority of people know Sterne. Sterne's sentiment, to me, however, has not the interest nor the originality of his humor. But what great writer is known by his finest production? As in Sterne's case, a writer's poorest and most unthinking work often gains him the reputation by which he is to live through the ages.

Criminal History.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORIES. By A. L. Drummond. G. W. Dillingham Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

For people who enjoy detective stories, or even tales of adventure, I recommend most heartily Mr. Drummond's book. The book is not written in the style of literary detective yarns, but in a simple, straightforward and unembellished manner, and by this very directness it carries an amount of conviction rarely found in stories of this kind.

Few men in this country have been as actively engaged, and for so long a time as Mr. Drummond, in the business of running down criminals. As far back as 1871, he was engaged in the United States Secret Service, and when, in 1894, he resigned from the government employ, he was chief of the service. By no means did this end his activities. For the last fifteen years he has been at the head of a detective agency of his own in New York. He tells us that most of the stories in this book relate to events that took place while he was in the government employ. The stories cover a very wide range of material, from Red River, immediately following the Civil War, to New York Broadway of today. Ex-chief Drummond has had to do with the biggest and most famous criminals in this country, and the inside history of many notable cases is set forth here by the man who was instrumental in bringing the criminals to justice. Many of the stories deal with the counterfeiters, and the magnitude of the operations of this class of criminals in the last century is a thing that we do not realize today.

The most startling story in the book is the last, "Three Women and a Man." It is a most remarkable account of one of the boldest blackmailing schemes on record.

As a literary work, the book makes no pretensions, but, as a record of certain phases of life little known to the general public except through imagination and the overdrawn accounts of professional writers, it must be accorded a place of first rank.

Two Stories.

THE SCORE. By Lucas Malet (Mrs. Mary St. Leger Harrison.) E. P. Dutton & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

Although I have not consulted him, I am sure that Mrs. Mary St. Leger Harrison's new book would delight Mr. Parker, because this gentleman takes a consuming interest in the psychological ramifications of the feminine intelligence. Prof. Munsterberg may deny the existence of the subconscious mind, but whatever may be the phase of one's mental development which acts in contradistinction to one's objectivity, this activity is undeniably interesting in fiction, and in Mrs. Harrison's subjectivity lies her power. Her latest book, called (for some strange reason which I have so far been unable to figure out) "The Score," has but two stories, the latter of which could well have been omitted. It lacks the subtlety of development which marks so strongly the first. Though a great emotional truth is brought out in "Miserere Novis," it is weakened by the fact that the story of its motivation is related by another person than the author. Not being given the freedom of literary language, the choice of syntax, the breadth of vocabulary, nor the methods of story-telling allowed the author of the book, in order to make his psychological point, the young man in the hospital has to indulge occasionally in didacticism to clarify his line of argument. In an objective story this line of procedure is permissible; in a subjective tale it is weakening.

"Out in the Open," the first story in the book, is a very fine thing of its kind. The story, in short, is of two totally different types of men in love with the same woman—the one a playwright and the other a politician. It is a study of the primitive and elemental passions, of the savagery that has still remained in woman's nature, and of its manifestations in modern life. The action of the story is purely psychological, but it reaches such an emotional intensity that no line of physical action could produce so strong an effect on the reader. Lucas Malet has given us a vision of a woman's soul, stripped of the conventionalities and the veneer of modernity. Despite its occasional unnecessary elaboration and one or two minor inconsistencies, "Out in the Open" is one of the strongest things I have read this year.

Mostly Enemies.

OUR INSECT FRIENDS AND ENEMIES. By John B. Smith. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. (Price $1.50.)

A unique and interesting book is Prof. Smith's volume on "Our Insect Friends and Enemies," and before we have read many pages of it we begin to realize how absorbing entomological study may be. Not overburdened with technical phrases, nor written in the didactic manner of text-books, this book of general and condensed information can be read and enjoyed by those whose knowledge of insect life has been limited to being attacked by a bumble bee, or to chasing a butterfly.

There are over 200,000 varieties of insect life known to entomology, but Prof. Smith believes that twice this number would scarcely cover the differentiated species actually in existence.

A passage from the book that will prove of unusual interest to the small boy is that in which it is declared that insects are not capable of feeling pain.

As to the utilitarianism of certain species of insects, Prof. Smith says that, broadly speaking, there are no insects that are indispensable to man. He adds, however, that there are a few which are of use to man, although for nearly all of such insects there is a chemical or other material substitute. Perhaps there is no more interesting passage in the book than that in which Prof. Smith claims as a fallacy the much-asserted value of bird life to the farmer. While admitting that birds check vast numbers of certain insect parasites, he applies some simple mathematics to the subject with a very interesting result. Birds reproduce in comparatively small and set numers; in fact, their numbers are fairly well fixed, and their increase is very small. On the other hand, insects never increase under a multiple of ten, and sometimes they reproduce a billion of themselves in a season. With these figures, it is easy to see how utterly incapable birds are of coping with these prolific breeders. Prof. Smith points out specifically that it sounds large to find a hundred larvae of an elm leaf beetle in a bird's stomach, and to find a hundred birds to the acre. But when one finds a hundred larvae on a dozen leaves, and knows that many thousand leaves are on one tree, the impressiveness of the figures is lost.

While the faults of insects are dwelt on in this book, the credit due them as plant pollenizers is freely given. Without the bee we would have no red clover. The converse of this statement was proved when Australia imported a great number of bumble bees, with the result that, where theretofore no red clover had existed, it now grew in profusion.

Contrary to belief and the action of of housewives, the centipede has many useful traits, and none of these ugly, belegged creatures should be killed. They are death to moths and roaches and do much to keep them out of the home.

While the suggestions concerning the bumble bee and the centipede may be adhered to, I doubt seriously if the usages to which Prof. Smith urges that the grasshopper should be put will ever come into universal practice. Grasshoppers, we are informed, make a very delicious meal, and can be served in any number of ways. Frying seems to be the author's favorite method of cooking them, although he says if they are stewed in cream they would, by their delicacy of flavor, in time be a rival of the oyster.

Some interesting facts regarding the mosquito are given in another chapter, and many other phases of insect life are treated in an entertaining manner. In conclusion, many methods of extermination for the useless insects are set forth.

Very Suffragettish.

A WOMAN FOR MAYOR. By Helen M. Winslow. Reilly & Britton Company, Chicago. (Price $1.50.)

Members of the Friday Morning Club, allow me to recommend a book to you, which is after your own suffrage hearts—"A Woman for Mayor." Here is the first suffrage novel, and you, whose yearnings for the ballot have led you astray in bypaths of masculine endeavor, can find here, worked out in specific form, the materialization of your fond and earnest dreams. All of your theories, your courses of procedure, your strange and remarkable arguments, are gathered together and set forth in fictional form. The book excludes, characteristically, every argument to the contrary (I know you do not admit there is any argument to the contrary—I am speaking for the male man,) and (with wondrous syllogisms and overwhelming deductions,) demonstrates how simple a matter it would be to have a woman for Mayor. Nor is this all. The suffragette who becomes Mayor is a thoroughly domestic woman and fulfills not only her duty of office, but her home duties as well. There is the proverbial love story here, and no suffragette worthy of the name should fail to read this remarkable tract, which demonstrates to all women that they can eat the cake and have it, too.

Let us all rally and join lustily in three cheers for Aunt Alec of Los Angeles, the first lady Mayor of the West.

From Japan.

THE PILGRIMAGE. By Yone Noguchi. The Valley Press, Tokio.

From the Valley Press, Japan, there comes to me an edition of Yone Noguchi's poems. They are bound in Japanese-wise, flimsily, and with such extreme estheticism that it is difficult and inconvenient to read them—in fact, even to get at them. The process consists of releasing from two pockets two ivory tooth picks, attached to an outer cover by blue strings. When this is done it is possible to remove the exterior cover, which is detachable. Then we find two thin volumes, which open with difficulty, refuse to stay open, smell like soft soap, and are sprinkled with ground isinglass. When the process of opening the book is at last accomplished, we come upon some very atmospheric poetry (I know of no other word to use.) Noguchi is a Japanese, a poet by profession, and writes in English. As a freak, he is extremely interesting, and as the product of a freak his poetry also is interesting. Judged solely on its merits as the production of a human being (if poets are such,) the verses could hardly be taken seriously. They are superficial in thought, flimsy in diction, and freakish in their use of words. However, there is a charm in this flimsiness—the charm, possibly, of very shallow water rippling over pebbles. The poems are written, for the most part, in a broken, unparsable, analysis-defying, non-synthetic manner. They are snatches from here and there, half-delineated pastels, with a suggestion now and then of faded-out color. Some of them—the simpler ones, which do not blurt too much—make delightful reading if the brain is tired and one does not care to think about anything in particular. I quote from page 16, volume 1:

"My song is sung, but a moment . . .
The song of voice is merely the body
(the body dies,)
And the real part of the song, its soul, remains after it is sung:
Yea, it remains in the vibration of thy waves of heart-sea Echoing still my song (O shadow my song threw!)
In thy heart's thrill I see my far truer and whiter soul,
And through my soul thou soarest out of thy dust and griefs.

. . . Spring passed, (Spring in roses and birds is merely the body,)
And I see the greater Spring (O soul-shadow she left!)
In the Summer forest, luminous in green and dream:
O to be that Spring over the world's Summer valley,
O shadow I may cast in the after-age, O my shadow of soul!

The Goose Book.

THE GOOSE GIRL. By Harold MacGrath. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. (Price $1.50.)

Dear young ladies of the frivolous brains and the goitre-like coiffures who visit your hebdomidal wrath upon me by scented letters of anathema because I ruthlessly dethrone your literary idols, McCutcheon, MacGrath and Chambers—I am going to incur your anger again today (pray, save your perfumed stationery,) by informing you that Harold, in his latest goose book, "The Goose Girl," is even poor for Harold. And when you are absorbing the morsels of this bowl of sweetened gruel, remember the following little items of interest concerning the book:

It is unoriginal, nigh unto sickening in its ultra-sentimental places, designed apparently only for such callow young misses as you, was probably written, or rather dictated, in a space of time not to exceed two weeks, has avoided in every instance any semblance of literary or intellectual endeavor, and should be read in conjunction with the consumption of a box of chocolates.

"The Goose Girl" is a literary ice-cream soda.

LITERARY CHIT-CHAT.

"Give me leave to say it (I know it sounds vain,) I know how to make a man of sense happy, but then that man must resolve to contribute something toward it himself." Thus wrote Lady Mary Wortley Montagu to Mr. Wortley Montagu, on March 28, 1710, in a letter which even the independent young female of two hundred years after could not have surpassed in coolheaded logic. "I should be very sorry," she proceeded, "to hear you were unhappy; for the world I would not be the instrument of making you so, which (of the humor you are) is hardly to be avoided if I am your wife. You distrust me—I can neither be easy, nor loved, where I am distrusted. I wish I loved you enough to devote myself to be forever miserable. I cannot resolve upon it." Nevertheless, Lady Mary married this gentleman, who, two years later eloped with her, after her father had selected a rival suitor for her hand. Her strange love letter has been preserved—which, by the way, it never would have been if the gentleman had obeyed the lady's final paragraph: "I don't enjoin you to burn this letter. I know you will. 'Tis the first I ever writ to one of your sex and shall be the last."

"The House of the Vampire," Mr. Viereck's strange tale of the absorptive genius, has just been published, with a new preface, by Axel, Berlin and Stuttgart. This German edition is dedicated to Prof. Hugo Munsterberg, who has been strongly interested in Mr. Viereck's theory of absorptive genius. Prof. Ladd, likewise, has metaphysically indorsed Mr. Viereck's views. It is interesting, in connection with the recent Shakespeare controversy, newly enlivened by poor old Mark Twain, that Mrs. Gertrude Atherton, in a letter to Mr. Viereck, has remarked that "The House of the Vampire," fantastic though it is, is the first thing that has ever given her a glimmer of a belief in the idea that Shakespeare is the author of the plays.

"The Vampire," the play based on Mr. Viereck's novel, is now, during the summer months, being played in stock, and it is expected that it will see the larger life of the metropolitan stage again in the forthcoming season.

In view of the recent discussion of President Eliot's "new religion," the issuance of a work on "Christianity, Its Nature and Its Truth," is timely. Its author is Dr. Arthur S. Peake, an English theologian of prominence. It will be published at once.

The Hudson tricentennial is being heralded by literature, some of which is destined to be of genuine value, nor is it ill-advised to predict that the promise of a book on Hudson by Thomas A. Janvier, who wrote "The Dutch Founding of New York," "In Old New York," etc., may be registered in this class. The announcement is made by Mr. Janvier's publishers, the Messrs. Harper, that the volume, while it will be sufficiently compressed not to burden the lighter readers, will contain fresh historic material only recently discovered, and now secured by Mr. Janvier with the authorization of certain historic societies abroad. This material will concern the debated mutiny on Hudson's ship, as a result of which it has been supposed that the explorer was cast adrift to starve and freeze in the bay that bears his name. The book will be published this month. It will be entitled simply "Henry Hudson."

The centenary of Edward Fitzgerald's birth is being commemorated by Thomas Y. Crowell & Company, in the issuance of a Fitzgerald edition of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. It is spoken of as a genuine artist's de luxe, every page and every letter being the work of the Hungarian artist, Willy Pogany. The motif and color effects are oriental.

Messrs. Henry Holt & Company hope to issue in September the third volume of DeAlva Stanwood Alexander's "Political History of the State of New York," bringing it down to Cleveland's first term.

The Century announces in the September number the identity of the authors who contributed the three stories published anonymously in the June, July and August numbers, each having for its theme the thirteen at table superstition. "With the Coin of Her Life" was written by Owen Wister; "The Waiting Hand," by Margaret Deland; and "The Fourteenth Guest," by S. Weir Mitchell. It was Dr. Mitchell who suggested the series.

Justus Miles Forman, author of "Jason," is traveling in Europe. Half of every year Mr. Forman spends on the other side, leaving in early spring and wandering in whatever direction his friends and his fancy lead. Sailing this spring with England as an initial destination, he crossed over to France and latterly has been in Italy and Switzerland, where most of the accessible mountain peaks offer familiar trails to him. He will return probably in September.

The Reid Publishing Company announces that it will soon issue the fourth edition of "Paul Anthony, Christian." The book was first published in December, 1907.

Moffat, Yard & Company announce that "The Conquest of the Air," by Prof. A. Lawrence Rotch, of Harvard University, director of the Blue Hill Meteorological Observatory, is practically ready for publication.

Wilkie Collins's "Man and Wife," "Armandale," and the "Miscellanies," have gone into fresh impressions on the Harper press. A summary of reports like this shows that Collins has exhausted as many editions of his books in the last year as though he were a popular contemporary novelist.

FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

Mr. William Watson, one of the few English poets, who has received a pension from the government, will publish a collection of verses this fall.

E. V. Lucas will publish a book in the autumn dealing with Paris. It is on somewhat similar lines to his volume called a "Wanderer in London," special attention being given to places and buildings that call to mind the famous names and deeds of the past.

Robert Herrick anticipates publishing a new novel in the near future. It will be entitled, "A Life for a Life," and those who have read "Together," I believe, will turn to this new book with greater interest than ever before in the case of Mr. Harris.

Doubleday, Page & Company have just issued a pamphlet concerning O'Henry and his works. They propose to make this the first of a series of similar publications devoted to their authors.

The Macmillans have on their list for September a book by Clifton Johnson, called "The Picturesque Hudson." This book has been written in much the same way that has proved so popular with the author's "Highways and Byways" series that has calculated to give a familiar as well as vivid impression of the locality described. It carries numerous illustrations.

Longmans, Green & Company announce for publication this autumn "The Memoir of the Right Honorable William Edward Hartpole Lecky," which his widow has written.

Small, Maynard & Company announce for early publication a new book by Prof. Lombroso on "Spiritualistic Phenomena and Their Interpretation." It is said that the alienist retains scarcely a doubt as to the ability of the dead to communicate with the living.

Small, Maynard & Company announce a volume entitled, "Anti-Pragmatism," by Prof. Albert Schinz, who occupies the chair of French literature at Bryn Mawr.

CRAVING TO BREAK AWAY.

Impulse That Sometimes Seizes the Painters of Classical to Do Something Startling.

[Strand Magazine:] "Do you ever," asked an admirer of the late Lord Leighton, "grow weary of painting classical subjects?"

"Often. Every painter is tempted now and then to abandon his province and do something startlingly unlike himself?"

Once when the academy was filled with "sensational" canvases Millais said he awoke in the middle of the night after dreaming he was painting a picture, "which even now makes my pulses thrill. It had something to do with a crazy canon and the dome of St. Paul's, but I don't dare describe it."

Probably, if the truth were known, every artist has felt a craving to break away from convention and portray something, either melodramatic, unreal or astonishing. If one casts an eye upon the accumulated products of art for the past century a large number of canvases stand out as being frankly an appeal to the love of the marvelous, if not, indeed, of the impossible. Certain painters, too, have long figured as the exponents of that species of art which, as Whistler said, "hits you in the eye," which is odd, bizarre or thrilling, whether in landscape or allegory, or the representation of human life and incident. One of the most famous a century ago was John Martin, whose pictures, remarked Macaulay, "overwhelmed the spectator." When he showed you a landscape it was such a one as fairly took your breath away, full of immeasurable spaces, gorgeous prodigies of architecture, blazing skies and impossible monsters. Then there came the pictures of Blake, which were of another order of sensationalism. He was gruesome, symbolical, mysterious. Watts was under the influence of Blake when he painted such works as "Cruel Avarice," a man with an eagle's head, "Mammon" and other weird and somewhat disagreeable productions.

Perhaps no man was ever a greater master of pictorial sensationalism than Gustave Dore, for whom "mountains and mirages, monsters and murderers," seemed to possess a charm. But for downright blood-curdling art the Belgian painter Wierts is unapproached, and doubtless unapproachable. There is a museum at Brussels entirely devoted to his works, most of which are literally too horrible for reproduction.

Lanes of Fancy.

Lanes hedged with wild white blos-
soming rose,
And ripening filberts sheated in green,
Where, spread in splendor of golden sheen,
The white convolvulus shyly grows.

My spirit thrills and my fancy glows
When, lured by dreams, I review the scene,
Lanes hedged with blossoming wild white rose,
And ripening filberts sheathed in green.

All fair, frail blossoms are doomed to close;
A little sunlight and life between
The shy bud-maid and the proud blown queen,
And then comes Death . . . But the fond heart knows
Lanes hedged with wild white blossoming rose.

A Rose's Love.

The dewey night was cool and fair;
The crescent moon, with a radiance
bright,
Shed o'er the garden its silvery light,
And touched the roses sleeping there.

A dainty tea-rose op'd her eyes;
A moonbeam caught in her delicate heart
Endeavored to disengage the cruel dart
And rid her soul of tears and sighs.

The early dawn was cool and fair;
The morning sun, with a radiance
bright,
Shed o'er the garden its golden light,
And touched the tea-rose dying there.

Tears.

When I consider life and its few years,
A wisp of fog betwixt us and the sun,
A call to battle, and the battle done
Ere the last echo dies within our ears;
A rose choked in the grass; an hour of fear,
The gusts that past a darkening shore do beat;
The bursts of music down an un-listening street—
I wonder at the idleness of tears.
Ye old, old dead, and we of yesternight,
Chieftains, and bards, and keepers of the sheep,
By every cup of sorrow that you had Loose me from tears, and make me see aright
How each hath back what once he stayed to weep—
Homer his sight, David his little lad!

"Stir the pudding, Peggy, and give the ducks a turn.

There were more than a half dozen brothers and sisters to share the scrapings. Happy days were those jam-making days, with a mother who knew how to make jam and bring up children so that they were happy and hearty. That jam question hits a good many of us. Come again, Belinda, when I am making jam and you shall scrape the kettle and I will have the spoon. You deserve it for sending me back in memory to a jam-loving, fun-loving group of happy brothers and sisters.

I hoped that many would follow Betty in writing against woman suffrage.

I would like to see the forces line-up well. There are several points to the question. Those who favor; those who do not. Those who are on the fence as Irvie expresses it, ready to jump to the winning side; those, who like Elsa, will submit to the inevitable and vote if the ballot is given because it is a duty, and last, but not least, the unknown quantity to be reckoned with—"the don't care girl." She is the dangerous one. You are sure of everyone else. Marguerite Winnifred starts out bravely; so does the Beaver.

Now line up, girls, arouse this "don't care" maiden, direct all your batteries toward this sluggish one. Let the girls that represent Irvie's point of view have their fun. Those that express Elsa's get ready "for the inevitable," but the "for and against" sides must direct all their wit and wisdom toward "Lady Don't Care."

Now, girls, for some intellectual fun! Send all letters on this subject to my address, No. 800 East Edgeware Road, Los Angeles. Sign your correct name, as well as a pen name, so that I may identify you in my mind. Now for the fusillade!

I must tell you of my appreciation of that conversation on a late page, between Aunt Mary and Margaret about living one's own life and acting according to one's own principles of right. This little lesson is one of the best that has been given us and will go far to aid us in solving some of the problems of home government.

One of our dear girls writes how her heart is grieved over a daughter's neglect of her mother. She notes that this young daughter is eager to help others even in homely tasks, but gives no loving service to her mother.

Why is this? Can any of you tell? The subject of daughtering should be taken up; that of mothering is a wide one. Where does the blame lie in this and parallel cases? Mothers of daughters are especially invited to help me solve this problem.

I am glad many are taking hold of the fly question bravely and quietly. Soon there'll be no "fly time" in this State; then disease will fly away and we can use the amount of money generally paid to doctors, toward flying machines. How we'll fly! Have you noted Mr. Brook's advice on exterminating flies. Very good indeed! Did you read of the brand-new idea of the young stenographer which enabled a friend to make money by making oversleeves for office girls? It was crowded down on the Children's part of the page. As I cannot resist reading about childern, I found it and wondered if that would not be a good idea for some one of our girls to follow, who wished to earn money at home. Another idea coursed along and that was to ask the Each and All girls to write me letters, telling their experiences in earning money for pin money or a livelihood. Give your real name and address; also a pen name so that I may identify you in my mind.

Those who fail to give pen name, I will attach one to the expression of opinion given. This is one of the ways in which we can be helpful to many. Address the president of Each and All Society, No. 800 East Edgeware Road, Los Angeles, Cal.

Lovingly your president,

ARIEL.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

OUR PLEDGE.

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

SUNSHINE SOCIETY.

The Rest Room at Venice Helpful to Many Tired Mothers—A Successful Tag Day.

State headquarters with the State organizer and president of the Los Angeles branch, Mrs. William Wallace McLeod, No. 408 South Garfield avenue, Alhambra, Cal.

Los Angeles headquarters for donations, with Mrs. H. B. McKinney, No. 2303 Budlong avenue, Los Angeles.

Monthly meetings the first Thursday of the month, at 2:30 o'clock p.m., committee-room, third floor Chamber of Commerce building.

MOTTO.

"Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on!
'Twas not given for you alone—
Pass it on!
Let it travel down the years;
Let it wipe another's tears
'Till in heaven the deed appears—Pass it on!"

The Sunshine Rest Room, maintained on the ocean front at Venice, by the Venice Sunshine Society, has been a boon to many during the hot weather. It is delightfully situated, and is most comfortably furnished. The large living-room has a table piled with late magazines and is furnished with many easy chairs and a couch. The little dining-room and kitchen are complete, and have helped many tired mothers to prepare lunches for hungry children.

Mrs. F. N. Spear, who is chairman of the Emergency Chapter of the Each and All Society in Los Angeles, has given her time for six weeks, free of charge, to the Venice branch, and is proving herself a real sunshiner by spending her entire time there with a kind word, a smile and a helping hand for all who avail themselves of the rest offered. All the comforts are free, but on the table stands a mite box, into which those who wish to help the sunshine cause can drop an offering. At the room a wheel chair, a baby's go-cart and a pair of crutches are kept until an emergency call arrives, when they become messengers of sunshine work.

Not long ago the Venice branch held a "tag day" on the beach, and made $186 for their good work. The members of the branch are indefatigable workers, and never lose a chance to "pass on" kindness.

The Civic League of Venice is maintaining a vacation home on the canal, carrying on a beautiful work along the lines of the same work as the sunshiners last year. They have the same matron this summer that the sunshiners had last season, and are giving vacations to those who might not have had a rest, otherwise.

The Tropico Sunshine Society, recently organized, is now well under way. It meets on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month, and the ladies are at work on several baby outfits, to be given to the Maternity Home in Los Angeles. The officers of the branch are Mrs. A. M. Watson, president; Miss Maude Moore, secretary; Mrs. L. L. Cushing, treasurer; Mrs. Edward Ayers, chairman Visiting Committee; Mrs. R. S. Robinson, chairman of the Collecting Committee; Mrs. J. J. Laws, chairman of the Committee on "Shut-ins." Communications to the Tropico Sunshine Society may be addressed to Miss Maude Moore, No. 1116 Glendale avenue, Tropico.

Oakland is soon to have a branch of the Sunshine Society, a young lady deeply interested in the work being now in correspondence with the California organizer.

Voting for the place of holding the Sunshine convention of 1910 is the question being agitated just now in Sunshine circles throughout the country. The Los Angeles branch has sent out postals to its membership with return cards attached, so that the vote may be accurate. The returns go to the president, Mrs. McLeod of Alhambra. So far, all the votes received by her have been for Los Angeles, except one cast for Atlantic City.

A delightful Sunshine whist party was given Monday afternoon by the Los Angeles branch at the residence of Mrs. Leigh Thornton, on Boylston avenue, through which $12 was added to the treasury. After the party, a short called meeting was held to decide several matters of importance. Ten dollars was given to a widowed mother toward the burial expenses of her only child.

The Los Angeles branch started in a very small way eight years ago with ten members. The first few years, while it was learning how to do things, it handled all the cases that came to the branch, and naturally made some mistakes. A number of times unworthy cases were helped, the unworthiness only being discovered after the money and aid had been given. Now, the membership has grown to 220, and the workers, realizing that Mrs. Alden's idea in organizing "the International Sunshine Society" was to make it a "good cheer" society, rather than a charitable organization—endeavor to work in conjunction with societies organized for relief work. When a case of destitution is reported, the investigating chairman confers with the Associated Charities, or if she finds that the family needing help should properly be assisted by the Jewish, Catholic or other organization, it is turned over to the right society, the sunshiners helping when it necessary. But the Sunshine Society does not wish to interfere with any other charitable workers, and many members of the Los Angeles branch feel that the work should be more along "good cheer" lines—such as loaning its nineteen wheel chairs to "shut-ins" (they are all in use at present,) making sunshine calls on the sick and the stranger; taking flowers to the hospitals; securing employment for those in need, and working for the betterment of widows and little children. Living "sunshine" day by day is the main thing, and it is not so easy as it sounds; though it pays. We cannot all do great things; we cannot give the money we would like to give toward decreasing the misery in the world. But we can give a smile, or a cheery, helpful word. We can "pass on" the bright things in our own life; we can find some one each day who needs us, and the uplift we can give.

At the convention last year in Houston, Mrs. Alden gave an illustration showing the power of a smile, or a frown, that caused her audience to shake with laughter for the moment, though it made her hearers think afterward.

She said that in a certain large public school in Buffalo, N. Y., there was a thriving junior branch of sunshine, and most of the children, as well as the teachers, wore the little white and gold Sunshine pin. One rainy morning, when the spirits of the children were naturally somewhat depressed, the teacher of one of the lower grades was in a very bad humor. Nothing suited her, and, with a heavy frown, she made no attempt at being pleasant, but found fault with everything. The gathering unpleasantness could be felt, and the children were getting restless almost beyond the point of control. Suddenly, the teacher noticed a little fellow in a back seat take off his Sunshine pin, and furtively hide it in his desk. Curiosity got the better of her temper and, calling him to her, she asked why he had hidden his Sunshine pin. Quick as a flash came the answer, accompanied by a frown as heavy as had distorted her own brow all morning. "Ah! it ain't no use trying to be pleasant and sunshiny with such a cross teacher!" The teacher's sense of humor was appealed to, and she laughed so heartily that the children, including the small offender, joined her. The atmosphere was cleared, and the lessons were recited in a quiet, orderly room. Later she told Mrs. Alden "the small boy and his Sunshine pin taught me a lesson I shall never forget."

"So brief the time to smile,
Why darken we the air
With frowns and tears, the while
We nurse despair?
Stand in the sunshine sweet,
And treasure every ray,
Nor seek with stubborn feet
The darksome way."

APPEAL TO THE ANTIS.

One of Those Opposed to Woman Suffrage Speaks Her Mind on the Subject.

Dear President and Girls of the Each and All: I want to have my say, too. I believe there are more women who do not want the ballot than who do, and I do wish the members of this society who do not want the ballot would say so. I'll warrant that Marguerite Winnifred is a young woman, unmarried, with her ideas about a man's vote being "for the control and advancement of business and material interests." Some men may take this view of the matter, but not "principally" so. There are quite a number of good men left yet who are wide awake to every interest for the betterment of humanity. They deem the position of husband and father a sacred one, and the interests of home, wife and children are paramount in their hearts. The trouble with women is, they have not enough patience. Do not meddle, Marguerite Winnifred, and the rest of you girls who want that ballot, with what is no concern of yours. The men who do not realize their position will soon understand all that is expected of them and come up to your ideals. Let them evolute; give them time. Be patient, girls, be patient. The best men are husbands and fathers of families. If you'd start a training school for wives and mothers, teaching women what is expected of a wife and mother, how to govern children, how to regulate the family expenses, how to dress harmoniously without running into debt, and following fashion's extremes, you would be accomplishing something. "The Beaver" says it is a step backward. Why, girls, it's a whole flight of stairs downward. How many of you think so? Then say so. There is one thing I have observed. The women who want the ballot are a lot of bachelor maids, women with few or no children, and women who live in hotels and apartment-houses. The women who do not want it are women who know what love of children, husband and home means; women who are not carried away by every foolish fad; women who believe in doing their duty to husband, children, home and country, church and state, and letting the men boss the job of voting.

If the men do not do their work properly, who is to blame? Who in this country control the up-bringing of the men children? The mothers, surely! Now, because a lot of old maids and women without children want the ballot, is it fair that the rest of us should have it? How much better it would be if the maids would marry and make homes that were homes, and these women who are putting away baby hands would let them come into their lives and train them in usefulness and love.

Girls, girls, you are asking for what you do not need. You think you need it, but something is the matter with your "think tanks."

What the country needs is more good mothers, trained mothers and trained fathers. There are worse evils than non-voting women; evils that the women can be busy in eradicating. Get very busy, girls, and do a little real thinking. You do not need the ballot to help eradicate the evils. It is quite unnecessary. The president has my address. She seems to fear that I'll hurt your feelings. I told her that women who wanted the ballot should have their feelings hurt. She said something about being a member of a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, but I think it is real cruelty to men folks to say so much against them in a society where they are not allowed to say a word. I know all men do not do their duty, but the most of them do, or civilization would not advance so rapidly, and the men who do not do their duty are men who have not had the proper training, the proper kind of mothers, wives and sisters. I know that some of you girls will not like what I said, but I am telling you the truth as I see it, and am old enough to be your grandmother.

A Letter from a Member Who Is Still in Doubt in Regard to the Suffrage Question.

Dear Betty: I am still on the fence about that suffrage question. You make your position very clear and positive. I am very anxious to hear some more from your side of the question, but perhaps that will make me become as Blossom wrote of Prof. Starr, "the victim of his researches." I wish to be very impartial in my decisions. So many of my friends who are suffragists seem to understand something about physical culture. The way they carry themselves shows that they fully understand the part that great muscle, the diaphragm, plays in their being. Any one of them could wear that new pantaloon costume that there is such a furore about; or the jersey dress, and look beautiful. Women who claim that sort of dress immodest are generally women who carry the weight of the body on the heels, and they have all sorts of diseases in consequence. A woman can't wear that style of dress with her body in an unsoldier-like attitude. Perhaps the antis understand about the diaphragm also, but I know one thing surely, and that is this: It is impossible to be perfectly poised mentally and physically unless one carries the diaphragm in proper position. The rest of the girls consider that my hobby. I intend to ride it until I find a better one. The suffrage question may be a good one to discuss, but this is a better one, for there is only one side to it and that is the side I am on. It is the only important subject before the race. That was one reason I wanted to find Bettie to see if she understood. She certainly is jolly and laughs much, and that is half the battle against sin and disease.

The other girls will write soon. No, they are not angry with you, Bettie. They are as calm, cool and collected as cucumbers. The furore over the suffrage question which is going on at our house is interesting enough to write a book about. The other girls are taking it seriously, but to me it is great fun.

News of Health Chapter.

The following letter has been received from "Versatile Verona:"

Dear Girls of the Health Chapter: The round-robin letters are flitting away this week to class No. 1, with a further review of how to generate life electricity, as given you orally last spring. They also contain information in response to questions asked. Your postals received and appreciated, also letter of Mrs. M., asking for the round robin, when we were all through with it.

Class No. 2 will soon need this review, and so it must fly a greater distance. One of the members is in Pennsylvania, another in Mexico. There are so many in class No. 2 that it had to be arranged in groups, and yet there are several waiting for the first letter to make its rounds, so that it may be sent upon another errand.

May C. promises to study, regain her health and teach. She has the entire printed lessons. One dear girl inclosed 50 cents, which was used to defray stationery expenses of many who forgot stamps when they made inquiries.

Several gentlemen have applied for admission to this chapter, but, of course, could not be admitted. They can have the printed lessons and information regarding the same by addressing the chairman of the Health Chapter, care of Mrs. Mitchell, No. [illegible] Clay street, Los Angeles.

Our round-robin letters are only for members of this society. It is a very easy matter to generate electricity in the body when one understands how. Once having learned how to get it there never is a time that it cannot be brought to life. It is the best stock in trade that any human being can have, and for this reason it should be sought by all persons. This is no money-making scheme. I am only trying to interest a few women to take up what I have found very valuable.

Be patient until you receive your round robin. Send it on quickly, so others may get the benefit of its song, for it surely sings a new song.

Yours for health.

Who Will Help?

Is there any office girl or commercial student who reads the Each and All page who will consent to do a little typewriting each week to assist Marguerite Winnifred, the chairman of the Would-Be Authors, to copy a circular letter, explanatory of the chapter's work, which is mailed with a personal note to prospective members? Later on, when the circular letter has been perfected, it may be printed, but at present the wisest course seems to be to typewrite it.

The circular letter runs to four pages, double-spaced, and an original and five carbon copies can be made at a time on thin paper. From a half hour to an hour will make one set of copies, and seldom more than one set a week will be wanted. The typewriting can be done in spare moments, the first page one day, the second some other day, and so on. Some girl who is not particularly busy with her office work might scarcely miss the odd minutes she used "in between" to do this copying. The cost of typewriter paper and carbon paper, as well as postage, will be gladly paid by Marguerite Winnifred. If any compensation is made above actual expenses for materials, it will have to be paid from the chairman's own pocketbook.

There is so much personal correspondence connected with the Would Be Authors' chapter, and so many details of work to be planned, with which no one except the chairman can deal, that Marguerite Winnifred feels that she needs every one of her few spare moments for these imperative demands and is hoping that she may be able to relieve herself of the duplication of circulars.

Is there any girl who will help? If there is, will she not address a note to Marguerite Winnifred, in care of the Each and All department, to be forwarded? Any help rendered will be greatly appreciated, and the girl who gives her time to aid may feel assured of the thanks not only of the chairman of the Would-Be Authors but of all the members of the chapter as well.

he took it and opened it and drew out—what do you think. A paper doll!

It came so sudden and Richard looked so funny that we all laughed, and before we knew it the teacher had turned around and the next thing we knew, teacher was pulling Richard, paper doll and envelope out into the middle of the room. Richard Parker never did anything in school but study, and it seemed funny to see him standing there with his face all red, and a paper doll held in his outstretched hand. For this was the punishment that had been meted out to the poor boy.

"We did not know you were so artistic, Richard," said the teacher. "Who taught you to make paper dolls?"

"I did not make it," said Richard.

"Then who did make it?"

But Richard made no further reply. He only stood there very quietly.

"This is not Richard's doll," I finally said, for I could stand it no longer. "I saw the envelope containing it handed to him."

Poor Richard looked around at me gratefully, but the teacher turned to me and said:

"So it is some of your work." I only shook my head for I was afraid to speak for fear I should cry.

Then she asked if I knew whose property the doll was, but I did not answer, I only hung my head.

Then at last there was a smothered hum of voices in the room, and when I looked up there was Alice Brady walking right up to Richard. She took the paper doll from his fingers and turning her face toward the teacher, who sat at her desk she said: "This is my property. It was sent by mistake." Her face was as red as scarlet, but she looked very calmly at the teacher. The teacher very quietly told Richard and Alice both to take their seats, and advised Alice not to make such mistakes again.

After school Alice got the envelope from Richard, and he never knew of the mean little note she had intended for him, although it was in the envelope all the time.

Pap Ezra on Suffrage.

In a rather picturesque way, Harry B. Allyn, in his August "Pap Ezra" letter in Spare Moments, gives some reasons against woman suffrage that it might be interesting to reprint. He says:

"The right to vote carries a lot of things with it that women hadn't ought to tamper with. A man running for office—and no woman ought to vote who isn't prepared to take the office as well as work for it—has got to recognize, along about election time, every scalawag in the township as a bosom friend and brother, or he can't hope to see his party come out on top. I'd like to inquire how a woman'd drive up to Hen Miller's shack full of young-uns and kiss every one of them with a smile on her face and compliments on her lips, when everybody knows that they're the homeliest, meanest-featured and dirtiest bouquet of infantiles this side of the county seat. And I'd also like to be informed as to just how she would go about it to rope in and tie that bunch of loafers who frequent the livery barn behind the Barley Sheaf saloon.

"I suppose women figure a lot on moral suasion, added to their sex, but that ain't politics as they're played. And when a woman stoops, in fact grovels, to the level of politics, she's losing the very thing she needs to score with—the attractiveness of a womanly woman.

"Here in the shrewdest republic in the world, a two-dollar bill will go further than anything I've ever run across, and women are notoriously addicted to being tight wads when it's a hundred to one as to the results.

"I never heard of a woman's hankering to break horses or heave coal or wade into the wood lot with an ax in her hand, so why should she pick out the daintier work of man, such as playing politics?"

A Fence With a History.

A peaceful citizen of Georgetown, D. C., which is now a part of Washington, has surrounded his home with a most belligerent looking fence. This fence is a picket one, and is made of old gun barrels, and the gun barrels have a very wonderful history.

It was to secure these guns that John Brown made his raid on the United States arsenal at Harper's Ferry. In 1858, the government arsenal at the juncture of the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers was working full time. Brown had heard that a large shipment of guns from the armory was to be made to San Francisco, so it was planned to capture these muskets and to arm his followers with them.

Brown took possession of the armory gates and the principal streets, and as the gunsmiths approached the arsenal, one morning, they were arrested and lodged in the fire-engine house, which came to be called John Brown's fort. After the Brown insurrection, the United States decided not to ship these muskets to the West. It is believed that the Federal authorities came to this conclusion, because late inventions had made the gun valueless, as a weapon of war. Anyway a batch of 400 guns was offered at public auction and the whole lot was bought by Ruben Daw of Georgetown, a gunsmith. Finding it difficult to dispose of such a number of military weapons at a profit and having recently erected a new house in Georgetown, the idea came to him to take the gun barrels out of their frames and stocks, saw them off at the hammer, file away the end sight and use them as pickets of a fence. He carried the idea into effect. The base of the fence was made of granite, and into this the guns were sunk, breech first. A connecting rod was run along near the tops of the old barrels, and thus the gun-barrel fence, which has become famous at Georgetown was constructed.

A Sponge That Works.

"Here is a clever notion. A fog bell," said an old New England fisherman.

On a bleak, gray afternoon they stood at the seashore—the old man and his city cousin, up for the holidays from Boston. A great bell hung from a scaffold, and under a metal cover hung a great sponge.

"This here machinery is wound up regular," the fisherman explained, "and this here sponge is kept under cover so as the rain can't get at it. In dry weather natch'rally, the sponge is dry and light; in foggy, though, it gets heavy with fog satch'rations, just heavy enough for to press down the lever that starts the machinery a-going. Then, ding-dong, ding-dong, sounds the bell in the fog, savin' many a fisherman from wreck on this rock-bound coast.

A Wild Bee's Home.

A wild bee's home, as we all know, serves the purpose of a storehouse as well as of a place for the young to grow and develop. The entrance used by the bees is often very small, but it always leads into a large room. The wax for their honey and brood cells is the only thing in the least like furniture which they require. The firmer and more bare the walls and floor, the better for them.—[St. Nicholas.

Los Angeles Sunday Times

Part IV—12 Pages
FIRST LINER SHEET

SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 22, 1909.

On All News Stands, Trains and Streets. | 5 CENTS.

SPECIAL NOTICES—

TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS—
Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1½c Sunday.

Close calculations, covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words to the line is a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.

Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.

The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

THE TIMES-MIRROR COMPANY.

SUNDAY REAL ESTATE LINERS—
Classified real estate advertisements for insertion in THE SUNDAY TIMES must be in the office not later than 10:30 o'clock Saturday nights. Other "want" advertisements for Sunday insertion will be taken over the counter until 11:30 p.m.

The great volume of liners printed in The Sunday Times, numbering regularly over 5000 separate announcements, makes this regulation absolutely necessary in order to get the big Sunday issue out on time.

LOOK FOR THE NAME AND NUMBER. "TRUTHFUL IN HIS PREDICTIONS. RELIABLE IN HIS ADVICE."

No matter what troubles you may have with yourself or others, come and he will guide you TO SUCCESS AND HAPPINESS.

READINGS—$1-$1-$1-$1-$1-$1-$1-

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO PSYCHIC THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.

It is true that his fee is more than some others charge. However, he believes that he has passed the experimental stages and finds no one who is not willing to pay this small fee of $1.00, providing they receive reliable advice. If after the reading is over and you are not perfectly satisfied, he will not accept one penny of your money.

IF THE TELLING OF YOUR NAME WILL SATISFY YOU, HE WILL DO SO FREE OF CHARGE; ALSO SHOW YOU HOW IT IS DONE.

What is of most importance is facts and figures.

Without your writing or even speaking, he will give you names, dates and figures.

If you want the truth, with reliable advice, you will consult BYRON STANLEY on past, present and future. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case.

NO NEED TO TELL HIM.

There is no need to tell Stanley your story. There will be no "quizzing" or asking of questions. His talents enable him to instinctively know your wants and troubles. Without any attempt at mystification, but with unerring sight into the inner nature of things, he reveals that which you most wish to know. His advice on all matters, business, lawsuits, marriage, health, is invaluable. It is exact and correct—not guesswork. He gives names, dates, facts and figures, and shows clearly and distinctly the road to success in business as well as in domestic and family affairs.

Before you go into anything of importance—or undertake anything serious—in business or love, or marriage, or before you make any change—you should consult the master mind of psychic.

If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money, and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and clairvoyants, and their cheap, claptrap methods, start anew, consult Prof. Stanley. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take a cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

PROF. STANLEY IS THE OLDEST CLAIRVOYANT in experience, the richest in knowledge and skill, crowned with years of unparalleled success. His advice has saved and made thousands happy. It will benefit you.

Readings daily and Sunday, 10 to 8. Permanently located.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

355½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.

A resident of Los Angeles 25 years.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environments; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE. In fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. He read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, and hundreds of others.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted, when reading my hand and Horoscope. YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL, TRUE READINGS."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

DR. ALEX. J. McIVOR TYNDALL, SAYS: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was MOST SATISFACTORY."

LOUIS JAMES, actor, says: "Your reading was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY."

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

MUNDO

The man of mystery is still here; acknowledged peer of all psychics and known as the wizard of India and the only graduate of the Ordoo College of Occultism to ever leave his native land. He is unlike any you ever saw, does positively all that others claim to do and demonstrates the power of mind over matter free to every patron. The only man in America possessing this power. Seeing is believing. Try him, then try others and see if they can do the same. A capable man has confidence in his ability and will not require to deposit your money before his work is done. Mundo has read for many of America's leading citizens and a few titled foreigners, but he has more respect for his patrons and more consideration for their feelings than to publish their names broadcast for the sake of advertisement. Nor does he claim to have read for dozens of prominent people that common sense will tell you he never saw. If you need advice and want a reading from a real life reader who does not spend half his time slandering his competitors, see Mundo, the real life reader who really tells what you desire to know or no charge. A foolish weakling only will pay for a reading that gives no benefit. Stop and think, then. See MUNDO, the Hindoo psychic. Special readings, 50c.

WANTED—
THE NAVY is composed of alert, reliable, efficient young men. They are being well paid because they know their work. When they enlisted, they were like the average untrained boy.

If you think you need the military training, practical instruction, regular hours, exercise and the chances the navy offers to show the stuff that's in you, investigate this subject.

If you have worked at any trade, you can probably follow it in the navy, becoming more expert by a course in a trade school; and promoted as you deserve it.

Plenty of recreation and sports, and spare time; shore leave granted deserving men frequently.

Many more apply than are enlisted, as the number of vacancies is limited; so if accepted, you will begin with a picked lot of young men. Applicants from 17 to 25 years old are enlisted for instruction in the Seaman Branch; electricity, clerical duty; Hospital Corps, etc. If you have a trade you may enlist if under 35.

Act promptly; get booklets about daily work, cruises, pay, promotion and privileges. But take time to consider fully before enlisting. Ask men in the navy how they like it. Apply NAVY RECRUITING STATION, San Fernando Bldg., Fourth and Main sts., Los Angeles. x*

MINING—

KRAMER CONSOLIDATED OIL COMPANY.
OIL IS KING.

We are offering to the public what we believe to be, and we are backed by expert opinion, an unequaled opportunity of getting in with what will eventually become the greatest oil producing field in the State of California.

At this time we are enabled to say that we are more certainly convinced than ever that our patience and perseverance exhibited during the long period of time in which we have been working to develop oil on our property, is about to be rewarded, and to such an extent, that it will prove a surprise that will exceed the fondest hopes that we may have in our imagination ever dreamed. We now know that we shall produce with absolute certainty an oil equal to if not of higher gravity than any now known upon the Pacific Coast, and of a base that is almost entirely unknown up to this time on the coast, viz "paraffine."

Frederick Salathe, the eminent chemist, states that from the analysis made this week of oil taken from the bottom of our 3000-foot well, he obtained more than fifty per cent. paraffine hydrocarbons, of which nearly eight per cent. was paraffine wax.

FOR SALE—MINE INVESTORS AND MINE promoters. A golden opportunity is now offered you to secure valuable mining property for a song. I own 5 valuable mining claims in a highly mineralized section and surrounded by mines of proven high values; located only 5 miles from Humboldt, Ariz., with its great smelter now soon to resume operation with ample capital and greater capacity; there are 4 strong, well-defined ledges extending through this group, and they all show good surface values, in gold, copper and silver; a 20-foot shaft on 1 claim shows a true fissure vein of ore over 2½ feet wide that assayed over $27 per ton. This property will stand investigation, and produce a fortune when properly developed, but like many other poor prospectors, I must let go. I will sell you these 5 claims for $400 each, and give you time on part if you need it. For full particulars and samples of ore address P.O. box 77, HUMBOLDT, Ariz. 22

WILLING TO LEARN SPANISH IN A VERY SHORT TIME?

In January, 1908, when I began to take a course in Spanish with Prof. Uribe (619 S. Hill st.,) I did not know a word of Spanish. In June of the same year I was elected teacher of that language at Covina High School.

This short story tells better than any words of praise what Prof. Uribe's method is worth. It makes one acquire the practical use of the language in a very effective way and master the difficulties of grammar without any drudgery.

SUMMER GAYETY.

WIN HONORS ON THE LINKS.

GOLF TOURNAMENT CLOSES AT AVALON.

Prizes Distributed to the Winners of the Various Events in the Series of Contests on Catalina Island. Women Throw Dice to Determine Positions.

AVALON, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In the tournament which closed this afternoon at the Catalina Island golf links, Justice William Frederickson won permanent possession of the famous old Banning cup, with a score of 145 for the thirty-six holes. This beats by four strokes the best record on the cup, made by Walter Fairbanks, whose name was the last engraved on the trophy. Frederickson has now won the cup for the third time.

In this final struggle of former winners were: Justice Frederickson, Walter Cosby, whose score was 171, and Windsor Walton, with a score of 156, all playing from scratch.

In the men's open handicap competition, Justice Frederickson and his brother, George Frederickson, of Oklahoma City, tied for the new Banning cup, with a net score of 145 each, George Frederickson having a handicap of 12. Dice were thrown to decide the matter, and George Frederickson's name will be the first on the new cup, his brother taking the fine golf bag, which is the second prize. The third prize was won by Windsor Walton.

The scores follow:

Name—	Gross.	H'dicap.	Net.
Frederickson, William	145	0	145
Frederickson, George	157	12	145
Scott, F. E.	193	16	177
Murphy, C.	207	20	187
Cosby, W.	171	0	171

Reineman, R.	170	10	160

Hieox	219	15	204
Dickinson, Dr.	205	16	189

In approaching and putting, Mrs. Wells, Mrs. Frederickson, Miss Coperthwaite and Mrs. Manning tied, with eleven strokes each. Mrs. Manning won by one stroke over Mrs. Wells in playing off the tie.

In the men's driving contest, Justice Frederickson won, and in the putting and approaching contest, F. E. Scott was the winner, after several ties were played off. The tournament was managed by Justice Frederickson and H. A. de Zayas.

The psychological moment in the ladies' handicap medal competition at the links today occurred after the event itself, when the scores were all in, and the three players who tied for second place, Mrs. Tom Manning, Mrs. H. A. de Zayas and Miss Echo Allen, threw dice on the bar of the clubhouse to decide the prize winner.

The three ladies tied with a net score of 93, Miss Allen having a handicap of 10, and Mrs. de Zayas a handicap of 16. Mrs. Manning played from scratch, and her gross score was five strokes less than the gross score of Mrs. Charles Wells, who won first place in this event, and the silver candlesticks offered as first prize by the Pilgrim Club.

Mrs. Banning carried off the honors, if not the prizes. The first round of nine holes she made in forty-four, but she was not in such good form today, and her balls continually rimmed the cups, so that today's score was sixty-one.

Mrs. Charles Wells of Oak Park, Ill., played a steady, even game, though she was not at home on the course, which made matters more difficult for her. Mrs. Wells is known as a fine golfer in the Middle West, and her husband was at one time president of the Oak Park Golf Club.

The scores follow:

	Handicap.	Gross.	Net.
Mrs. H. A. de Zayas	16	109	93
Mrs. C. H. Wells	10	98	88
Mrs. T. Manning	scratch	93	93

"Industrial Independence."

THE ANTI-UNION SHOP IS NECESSARY.

The rioting that has followed the attempts of the Pr Company at McKee's Rocks, Pa., to secure enough men to re recently went on strike has been the most serious outbreak the Teamsters' Union strike in Chicago. It has attracted because of the number of strikers who have participated scenes of violence accompany almost every smaller strik being one of degree rather than of spirit. The determinat ites is to rule, to dictate wages to be paid, hours of work, work to be rendered, the number of apprentices to be they are refused the right to do this they go on strike, by violence if necessary, to prevent their employers from Unionites care not for the competition an employer has the rising cost of material when it may be impossible to of products because of contracts that must be filled. They tion to the contracts they make with their employers, and think that operators can as readily violate their contracts do business.

It is such facts that are compelling employers to ado principles. Business conditions require them to manage thei establishments. They must be free to establish the rate paid, and the amount of product. In no other way ca business be met.

Every community should recognize this condition prevail and industrial establishments continue in operatio referred to several enterprises that were removing to new to be free from union turbulence. It is now announced th Central Railroad will remove its extensive shops from Hazelton, O., because of the frequent labor disturbances a This means taking 1400 men away from the Pittsburgh means a reduction of $3500 a day in wages that have in that locality, to say nothing about the large amounts o expended by the company. The Pressed Steel Car Compa plates the abandonment of plans for the erection of establishment there, and a specific assertion is made tha move its entire establishment elsewhere. Such industria a locality is a high price for a community to pay to union

Portland, Or., finds itself seriously pinched by union of grain shipments. There has been trouble between the Grain Handlers' Union since last April because the grai refused to sign a contract for one year at wages that will to do business in competition with Puget Sound ports. The have therefore declared an open shop on all grain handli various docks. If the grain handlers refuse to accept this, be shipped from Tacoma, to which point it can be forward to Portland. The grain handlers of Portland have for yea from 15 to 25 per cent. more wages than is paid at Tac that means a saving of about $300 per ship for the exporte business on Puget Sound. The situation has become Oregonian, a usually conservative paper, has been led to

"This is a very serious matter. It is one which conc handful of men who have been maintaining this labor differ port, and who, of course, can follow the grain to Puget S there at a wage scale declined here, but it also concerns the city. We have removed all differentials laid against and cannot well afford to permit our prestige to be destroy against it by a few waterfront laborers. There has been ing on this matter in the past, and the issue must be met at this time. The exporters who are making an effort to cap, which may prove so costly to Portland, should have of every good citizen and taxpayer who has assisted in ferentials from the port."

Portland thus stands to lose the shipment of abou of grain. This means the diversion of 200 sailing ship Tacoma. It means the loss of about $6000 which each in port, a total of $1,200,000. It also means the loss of be paid out in Portland for wages.

Communities cannot afford to submit to such industri are inevitable unless industrial independence is insisted conspirators out of the shop and keep them out!

GRAFT IN MONTREAL.

Evidence Uncovered Showing That the Big Canadian City Has Been Victimized for Millions.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MONTREAL, Aug. 21.—Testimony showing that the city of Montreal has lost millions of dollars in contract work and that official positions of all kinds have been bought and sold for years, has been brought out by the investigation into the city's civic affairs, begun by the provincial government.

The investigation has covered the administration of the police, fire and public works department, each of which is controlled by a committee of Aldermen, with an administrative chief.

In the fire and police department, it is alleged that the appointments were bought and sold for $200 each.

In the public works department, sworn testimony showed that the lowest bidders were ignored and that the contractors were awarded to higher tenderers, who had a pull with a certain middleman who conducted negotiations between the Aldermen and the contractors.

On contracts let this year, totalling $880,000 the excess price, it is charged amounted to $130,000. A man who swore that the total value of his plant was less than $100, that he kept no books and could produce no complete set of check stubs, was shown to have had contracts this year in excess of half a million dollars which he farmed out to subcontractors at a handsome profit.

It is estimated that these transactions have cost the city from $250,000 to $500,000 a year in one department alone.

The investigation is not yet complete. It was begun at the instance of a citizens' committee which raised the necessary funds and employed counsel to conduct their case.

Partly as a result of the revelation and partly as a movement for civic reform, an election will be held here September 20 on the question of reducing the number of Aldermen by one half and establishing a board of commissioners to administer the city's affairs.

BAN ON "FRATS."

Denver School Board Will Dismiss Any Girl or Boy Member of Secret Society.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The school board today issued an ultimatum, barring fraternity and sorority members from membership in any class. The action was taken because the committee having the matter in charge stated the milder rule made last year of barring the boys from winning prizes or taking part in athletic events had no effect. Today's rule says:

"No pupil in the elementary or high schools in school district No. 1, in the city and county of Denver, Colo., shall form or belong to any school fraternity, sorority or other secret organization.

"The superintendent and principals shall suspend any pupil in the Denver schools who fails to comply with the provisions of this rule."

SWEDISH STRIKERS LOSE.

Men Who Left Positions Get Back at Lowest Wages; New Men Get Best Jobs.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 21.—The local street railroad company has scored a complete victory over those of its employés who joined the strikers the beginning of this month.

Now that the strike is a failure, the men have applied for their old positions, but only a few of them who formerly received the maximum wage have been taken back at the minimum rate, and they were compelled to sign a personal contract and to furnish bonds guaranteeing their full loyalty to the company.

On the other hand, the strikebreakers have been rewarded with the best paying positions the company has.

The company instituted suit against the strikers for damages and breach of contract.

This victory is regarded as heralding the final breaking of the great strike.

BULLFIGHT AT SEA.

Animals Break Loose on Ship and Gore Each Other Until Decks Run Blood.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—Passengers on board the German ship Ella, which arrived in this port yesterday, were the spectators at a real bull fight while the vessel was rolling in a heavy sea. Several Mexican bulls, confined in stalls on the rear deck, became frightened at the snapping of some alligators, traveling with them as fellow-passengers, and breaking from their stalls commenced a sanguinary battle, which did not end until the deck was so slippery with blood that they could not stand on their feet.

The biggest bull of the herd was singled out by the others as a special object of attack, and although he flung his assailants off time after time with his mighty horns, he was finally borne to the deck and killed by the repeated gorings of his mates.

AHEAD OF TIME.

New York Man Offers to Build Aerial Battleship for Navy Department.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Acting Secretary Winthrop, of the navy, today informed a New York correspondent, who offered to build an aërial battleship for the government, that Congress had not made provision for such purpose.

The offer came from Henry T. Jones, New York City. He agreed to furnish an airship of the Zeppelin type, 450 feet long, capable of carrying twenty persons, and enough ammunition—several tons—to destroy a fleet of warships.

The writer also promised to furnish a bond of $50,000 guaranteeing fulfillment of contract.

The Marconi wireless station at Glace Bay, N. S., was yesterday destroyed by fire, causing a loss of several thousand dollars. The building consumed contained the operating room and the condenser room, and a quantity of valuable machinery and wireless apparatus. The loss is understood to be considerable. Mr. Marconi is expected to come here in the near future.

French Method of Developing the Bust

Mdme. DuBarrie Explains How the Bust May Be Developed 2 to 8 Inches in 30 Days.

"I am explaining for the first time to the ladies of America," says Madame Du Barrie, "the French method of developing the bust. It is much more effective, the results appear much more quickly, the breasts become more firm, plump and symmetrical, the method is more simple, the effects more lasting, and altogether beyond comparison with the results produced here.

"You know the French people have the development of the bust and form down to a fine point.

"By this French method the breasts may be developed from 2 to 8 inches in 30 days. This applies to women of almost any age, from young girls to elderly matrons, whether the bust is absolutely not developed at all, or has grown weak and flabby, and hangs, no matter from what cause.

"It is beauty of form that attracts much more than the features. You will always find it so with both sexes.

"I will be only too glad to tell any woman who is interested what this simple French method is, if she will inclose a 2-cent stamp to pay for the postage. I will send an illustrated booklet in a plain sealed wrapper that will explain it all."

We suggest to our lady readers that they write to Madame Du Barrie for particulars of this remarkable French method, inclose 2 cents in stamps for the illustrated booklet and address it to Mdme. DuBarrie, Suite 436, Lenox Building, Chicago, Ill.

TOO HARSH FOR HEALTH RESORT.

MRS. THAW COMPLAINS OF SON'S TREATMENT AT MATTEAWAN.

Says Dr. Lamb Is Taking Revenge on His Prisoner for Her Attack on the Asylum at Recent Hearing. Harry Obliged to Go Without Dinner Because He Was Busy With Lawyer at Meal Time.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MATTEAWAN (N. Y.) Aug. 21.—Mrs. Mary Coply Thaw, mother of Harry K. Thaw, made public today a statement criticising the treatment accorded her son in the Matteawan State Hospital for the criminal insane, since his return to that institution by order of Justice Mills.

Mrs. Thaw said not only that the comforts accorded to her son when he was first sent to the asylum were not restored after his return, but that he had been denied privileges he enjoyed for eighteen months while in the asylum.

Dr. Lamb, superintendent of the hospital, Mrs. Thaw said, when asked the reason for the discontinuance of the privileges to Thaw, answered that what had been done for him was not appreciated.

Mrs. Thaw said:

"Even the privilege is denied me of giving my son the whites of eggs and orange juice prescribed for him by his own and my physicians, and which heretofore I have given each afternoon when I made my visit.

"For the first time in these eighteen months they have denied him the privilege of playing the piano.

"He is still locked up in the bare cell, which I described in court, at 6 o'clock, although other patients, some of whom do not work, are allowed to remain up until 9 o'clock.

GIVEN NO DINNER.

"Yesterday my son had nothing to eat from 6:15 a.m. to 5:45 p.m., because a lawyer came to see him at noon dinner hour. Even the keepers wished to get him something to eat, but Dr. Baker gave special orders that they should give him nothing during this eleven and one-half hours of starvation.

"I inquired of Dr. Lamb the reason for the deprivations. He answered that what they had done was 'not appreciated much when he went to court.' To this Harry replied: 'Dr. Lamb, I treated both you and Dr. Baker much better in court than you deserved, as you know, when testifying. So this must be revenge for what my mother said.' Dr. Lamb made no denial.

"We asked Dr. Lamb more than once if he had any further reason except revenge toward me, and the desire to enfeeble my son's health so that he would not be able to testify the next time, as he had when opposed to Mr. Jerome at the last hearing. Dr. Lamb could give no other reason for this infamous conduct."

LAMB'S REPLY.

Superintendent Lamb of the Matteawan Asylum said today concerning Thaw's treatment at the hospital:

"When all arguments are made the question remaining for final settlement is shall Harry K. Thaw submit to the same treatment and accept the same privilege as are accorded all other patients at the Matteawan State Hospital, or shall he have all changed so as to suit his peculiar wishes?

"At no time during his residence in the hospital has he suffered any privation whatever. In fact, every time Mr. Thaw has left this institution to take up temporary jail residences, and there, in a measure, to follow his own rules and inclinations, he has lost weight, only to regain it directly on his return to our care.

"The visiting privileges to Mrs. Thaw have been more liberal than she could gain in any other State institution that I know of. It is to be regretted that differences have arisen, but the medical officers here can scarcely concede to any patient the sole right of prescribing for himself his own medicine, diet and rules of conduct.

"It is for lack of reason and judgment that Thaw is here. It is for lack of reason and judgment that he makes no effort to adjust himself to conditions that are by no means unfair or unjust."

GOLD WATCH IN BANDAGES.

Retiring Lumber Company's Superintendent Pleasantly Fooled at San Pedro.

SAN PEDRO, Aug. 21.—George S. Kling, who for the past four years has been superintendent of the mill of the San Pedro Lumber Company, was surprised, a few minutes before noon, today, when the mills were suddenly shut down and the foreman, Herman Ells, came running into the office for a supply of bandages. The entire office force stopped work and followed the foreman into the yard where all the other employés had gathered.

Mr. Kling was more surprised than ever when the bandages, which he supposed were intended for an injured workman, were unrolled and a gold watch was exposed. He recently resigned his position as superintendent to engage in business in Los Angeles. As a token of the esteem in which he is held by his associates here, James Weir, formerly Mayor of San Pedro, presented the watch to Mr. Kling. On the face are his initials and on the back the words: "Presented by the employés of the San Pedro Lumber Company."

Mr. Kling will assume active relations with the Kling Company, general contractors and agents for the California Marble Company, in which he and his brothers have been partners for some time.

TO CELEBRATE UNION.

An open-air consolidation ratification meeting will be held Wednesday night. On Tuesday, the city of San Pedro will become officially a part of Los Angeles. The meeting will be held in front of the City Hall, which it is expected, will be the seat of government for this part of the greater city. Members of the Los Angeles consolidation Committee and others will be invited.

There is much talk of having a representative from the harbor on the Council. E. D. Seward is suggested for the place and there is a movement on foot to have the Board of Trade indorse his candidacy. He is in the insurance business and secretary of the Board of Trade and also of the Consolidation Committee of San Pedro.

VERMONT SQUARE
The Largest Subdivision Ever Placed on the Market in Los Angeles

THE OLD time real estate activity is in evidence. It is in the air; everybody feels it.

Conditions, local, on the Pacific Slope generally, and all over the east are most favorable. The foundation for this is seen in enormous crops, the swelling volume of the iron and steel trade, of transportation traffic; the settlement of the tariff question.

At home we have the consolidation of Wilmington and San Pedro with Los Angeles; the certainty that $10,000,000 will be spent in harbor improvements; the Owens River water supply; the increased tariff on lemons; the steady increase in population; the growth of manufacturing and jobbing; the increase in bank clearings and postoffice receipts; the expenditure of millions for good roads, and many other things.

Real estate values have been maintained through all the hard times of the past two years, thus presenting a solid and immediate foundation for advancing prices and substantial profits without long waiting. Now is the time to buy real estate! Investigate.

It to occur to any of them, remember, so to run the as to bring it out at the and First near the openrailroad tunnel running nder Hill street to Temple change in the plan is idering. An open cut from Hill to Olive uld interfere with the st west of Olive. That ly not easily overcome, e tunnel at a little it might be made to Hill street, thus avoiding that open cut and leaving First street trafficable all the way through. There is still to be considered whether the property-owners above this tunnel would give a right of way for the cut free of cost. If this right of way has to be bought it will prove a great, if not an insurmountable obstacle. This is said in view of the project outlined in this department of The Times a few weeks ago, which contemplates a free right of way for a tunnel under private property from Figueroa street and Hill about midway in the block between First and Second streets. The advantages of the cut which we will call the Diamond street project over this one just referred to would not seem sufficiently weighty to justify the buying of the one right of way as against the free use of the other.

A Multitude of Projects.

This gives us at least six propositions before the city and the people in the western hills. With the outline of the last one just made they have all been pretty carefully considered by the Fact and Comment man. A great many persons residents of the western hills and property owners there are deeply interested in the subject, which is The Times' excuse for devoting so much attention and space to its consideration. To recapitulate, we have then: The project of a tunnel under Court street, coming out into Broadway opposite the Courthouse; this Diamond-street one just outlined; open cuts and a tunnel under First street all the way from beyond Figueroa street eastward into Hill street; the tunnel opening with a Y in two directions at Figueroa, and running under private property midway between First and Second streets, with an eastern mouth at Hill; a tunnel all the way under Second street, which would have to begin west of Figueroa one or two blocks and reach the business center at Hill street; or, lastly, a tunnel under Fourth street, paralleling all the way this last proposition under Second, excepting that it would begin on its western end at Figueroa.

Necessity of Union.

This is a subject which must come sooner or later before the City Council. It would certainly seem as if residents and property owners in the hills west of the western mouths of these proposed tunnels would have to come together on some well-considered and definite plan, unite on some one project, and then come before the Council. If the property owners and residents in the different sections of the hill country all pull apart, each intent upon having the western mouth of the tunnel nearest to his own home or property, the Council is not likely to take action. There will have to be some one definite proposition put before the municipal government before it will take any action at all. It is pretty generally the idea in the minds of those advocating any of these tunnels that the whole city will be taxed for the cost. There is really no basis in equity for such a tax. There is a precedent in that the Third-street tunnel was so financed. It was not a just proposition to property owners on Boyle Heights, in East Los Angeles, or in the portions of the city anywhere south of Fifth or Sixth streets. But it is difficult to overcome a precedent, and it may be that the property owners in the hill country will be able to impress the city government with the propriety of providing for the cost of a second tunnel through the hills.

ANOTHER BIG BUILDING.

Seven-Story Structure on Broadway, Near Seventh Street, for California Furniture Company.

Another big building will be started at once on the east side of South Broadway, between Sixth and Seventh streets, by J. E. Carr, whose building operations have already contributed much to the appearance of the city's business section. The structure will be seven stories in height, and will cost approximately $75,000. R. B. Young is the architect and bids for the construction are now being received.

The building, which will be occupied by the California Furniture Company, will probably be of class B construction. It will have a frontage of sixty feet and a depth of 150 feet to an alley, and be the third structure from the corner of Seventh street on that side of Broadway. The front will be of enameled white brick with terra-cotta trimmings. A great amount of plate glass will be used, and the storerooms will be among the best lighted on the Coast.

The interior will be finished in quarter-sawed oak, and the floors will be hardwood throughout. Two plunger elevators will be installed, and the building will be equipped with the most modern sprinkler system, together with other up-to-date conveniences. The work of construction will be completed by April 1, 1910. The future tenants have outgrown their present quarters on the other side of Broadway, and are forced as a business measure to seek the larger and more commodious establishment.

NEW COLD-STORAGE PLANT.

Five-Story Reinforced Concrete Building Going Up Corner Banning and Center Streets.

A five-story and basement reinforced concrete building is now being erected by the National Ice Company as an addition to its already large cold-storage plant at that point. The basement of the projected building is already excavated and the basement walls are in place. An inspection of the work done, including the footings for the pillars to hold up the building, indicates that the structure is to be of the strongest kind known in this class of architecture. The work is under the charge of John O. Cashin, who is known from Puget Sound to San Diego, all up and down the Coast, as a practical ice man, having been engaged in the business for a period of over thirty years.

Mr. Cashin informs the real estate department of The Times that the money going into this addition to the company's plant at this point will amount to about $100,000. In every respect the building and all the plant to be installed there will be of the highest class known in this kind of enterprise.

New and old, the plant of this company covers an entire block bounded on the south by Banning street and on the west by Center street. Jumping the street to the north, another half-block is covered with the stables of the company. The whole investment here represents a sum of about $400,000. One hundred and fifty horses and eighty men are constantly employed.

In referring to the extension made, Mr. Cashin said: "We are making this with a view to the further needs of a city growing as fast as Los Angeles is. With the annexation of Wilmington and San Pedro it is the opinion of the company that Los Angeles will be soon a great seaport city. The growth of the population here in the past has been so very rapid that we feel entirely justified in making the present very large addition to our plant at so much cost."

BIG DEAL AT BEACH.

Local Dealers Report Purchase of Forty-five Lots at Long Beach by Missourian.

The National Realty and Trust Company has just sold for the Signal Hill Improvement Company of Long Beach forty-five highly improved lots and a large eight-room house, all located on the crest of Signal Hill. The property commands an unsurpassed view of the ocean. The buyer is S. M. Pickler of Kirksville, Mo. The sale is one of the largest transactions in Long Beach since the quite times of 1907, the total consideration involved being $63,000.

The same dealers also report the sale of an eight-room house at No. 1721 West Twenty-fifth street, on a lot 50x125 feet, for C. Summis James to W. A. Ryon, the consideration being $5500; and of two lots and a six-room house on Fourth street, at Palms, from John Stintons to Mary Moore Kerr, the price paid being $2600.

The same firm also report the following acreage sales: Five hundred acres, seven miles west of Winchester, Ill., for S. M. Pickler, to George W. Hughes of Long Beach, the consideration being $40,000. Eighty acres of improved land in Tulare county, for W. A. Ryon and J. R. Blaine, to H. W. Reynolds of Los Angeles, price being $3200.

SOUTH MAIN SALE.

Frontage on Main and Twenty-eighth Streets Brings Fifty Thousand Dollars.

That South Main-street frontage has come to the front again as good investment material, as a result of the successful conclusion of the consolidation elections, is said to be evidenced by the renewed inquiry for good "buys" along that street, even as far south as Jefferson and beyond. Among the sales concluded the past week is one reported by Titus & Espe, by which the northwest corner of Main and Twenty-eighth streets, improved with a three-story brick block, valued at $50,000, was sold by Fred Espe to Charles Stansbury, who immediately resold the property to Mrs. Eva L. Schenck, taking in part payment a number of lots.

The new owner will furnish the rooms on the two upper floors. The property has a frontage of fifty-five feen on Main street, which was valued at $425 per foot in the deal. The present depth is 155 feet, but this will be ten feet shorter when the widening of Main street shall have been accomplished. Mr. Espe also purchased from Mr. Stansbury the latter's fine 200-acre alfalfa ranch at Artesia, which he will improve by increasing the acreage set to alfalfa.

GATHERING MOMENTUM.

GREAT GAIN IN NEW BUILDINGS.

PREDICTIONS OF LAST WEEK AMPLY REALIZED.

August Report of Building Permits Issued to Date Reveals an Increase of Fifty-five Per Cent. in Valuation Over Corresponding Period of Last Year.

The predictions of last week's Times that August would "comfortably exceed" the million mark in valuation of permits issued by the chief inspector of buildings was handsomely realized during the past week. The filing of the two big construction projects necessary to bring the month's total to record-breaking proportions took place just as expected, and with still another week ahead August has already crossed the coveted valuation, which is spelled with seven figures, and which has come to be taken as almost the standard of the building department's aspirations.

The two buildings which brought the big total were the Higgins building at Second and Main and the Fry building at the corner of Fifth and Los Angeles streets, work on both of which structures is to be rushed to completion. The amounts involved were $250,000 and $175,000, respectively. The total for the three weeks is raised to $1,022,493, as compared with $662,467 last year. The number of permits represented by the current total is 502, as compared with 437 in 1908. The gain in valuation is 55 per cent. It is possible that the filing of another huge project this week will bring the total for the month to still more flattering proportions.

TO BUILD NINE STORIES HIGH.

EARLY CONSTRUCTION PROMISED UNDER REVISED PLANS.

Huge Structure for Union League Club at Second and Hill to Be One of the Most Magnificent Club Homes on the Continent—Appointments to Be Luxurious.

The new Union League club building, which is to be erected at the northeast corner of Hill and Second streets, will according to plans just completed by L. S. Munson, the architect, be extended to a height of nine stories instead of eight as originally designed. The two street elevations of the structure have been altered but little, but the interior has been greatly modified. The extra story is secured by extending a roof from what was originally intended to have been the cornice line. The total cost of the huge building will be advanced to approximately $550,000.

The additional story will contain a gymnasium 120x50 feet, together with large bowling alleys. The roof garden will occupy the entire roof area. The five upper stories will be used by the club members, the next three floors being given over to offices. A number of professional men who are members of the club have already signified their intention of taking leases in this part of the building. The eighth floor will be given over to a billiard room 45x55 feet, a feature of which will be the complete absence of piers to interfere with the players. On the same floor will be found the library, game rooms, smoking rooms, barber shops and directors' rooms.

The seventh floor will be occupied by the main dining-room, 50x80 feet, and by a number of private dining-rooms. Here also will be the main lobby and the ladies' annex, consisting of parlors, dressing rooms, dining-room and kitchen. Elevator service will connect directly with this part of the floor. The fifth and sixth floors will be used for dormitory purposes.

The building, which will be of reinforced concrete construction, will embody many of the best features in clubhouse construction that are to be found in similar structures in the East. Ideas for the interior appointmentes have been secured by the personal visit of the officers to the Atlantic States. It is probable that the razing of the old wooden building which at present occupies the site will begin tomorrow, and the present club quarters will soon be vacated for the same purpose. The construction will be rushed by F. L. Spaulding, the contractor. The structure will have a frontage on Hill of 120 feet and of 105 feet on Second.

The officers of the club are D. R. Weller, president; Thomas Hughes, vice-president; F. D. Owens, treasurer; M. S. Gregory, secretary. Other members of the board of directors are Sherman Pease, L. C. Gates, G. G. Johnson, R. N. Bulla and E. B. Spencer.

EDISON OUTDONE.

When Gov. Altgeld was chief executive of the State of Illinois, he had on his staff Col. Robert H. Aiken. This person had in training a regiment of sharpshooters, and the question of providing rifle pits came up. The ordinary pit was a costly affair. Aiken conceived the idea of building them of concrete, without a frame to put the material into. He laid them flat on the ground, or rather upon a platform, and then tipped them up on edge, raising 140 feet in length and twenty feet in height as a single lift.

The army department of the United States government took the matter up and has adopted this style of structure for all its rifle pits throughout the country, also for houses at military posts, and it is now about to be applied in a large way by the government at Angel Island. At Fort Sill, in Oklahoma, the government is spending $1,000,000 on this kind of structure.

At the East, houses of from one to five stories are being put up in this way. A wall 27x200 feet can be raised at a single lift. The process used admits of very elaborate ornamentation, and the surface is as smooth as polished marble. Reinforcement may be introduced of any desired size and with any distance between centers.

This is likely to become a new industry throughout the country generally before long, as a good seven-room house can be constructed in this way in a month, at a cost of $1400. The walls are cast, so to speak, with the spaces for the windows and doors all provided, ready to fit the sashes right in place.

A HOUSE OF QUALITY.
TWELVE BEAUTIFUL ROOMS.
LARGE LOT. EAST FRONT.
WESTMORELAND BOULEVARD.
$20,000 HOME FOR $14,500.

To those capable of judging and with whom QUALITY counts, this house will strongly appeal, as there is not a more substantially and honestly built frame residence in the city today. A critical inspection together with a study of photographs taken at various stages of construction, showing beyond question the absolute character and strength of the structural work, will sustain this assertion.

Nor has QUALITY been produced at the expense of architectural beauty. The exterior with its very massive beams and bracket work, unusually extensive roof projections, heavy overhanging features, exceptionally wide cornices and verges, many large windows, numerous gables and pleasing lines, at once impresses one with its magnificence and striking individuality. No expense has been spared to make this one of the most beautiful residences in its locality.

The arrangement throughout is a marvel of convenience and simplicity. Among its commendable features are a large living-room, artistic dining-room, cosy den, spacious halls, five sunny chambers, ample servants' quarters, generous porches, pretty pergola, two baths, tiled floor, fine buffet, superb lighting fixtures, wide mantel, perfect heating plant, automatic water heater, refined wall coverings, expensive tapestries, decorated ceilings, finest art glass, well-appointed butler's pantry, sawed quartered oak floors throughout, carefully selected woodwork, faultless workmanship.

A splendid garage with machine room, tool room and chauffeur's room, also constitutes an attractive feature of the place. Lot is 60x150. House just completed.

Look this place over and compare it with any $20,000 home you have seen. Think again of the price—only $14,500.

A Splendid nine-room house in the choice residence portion of the southwest, near St. Andrews Place. This house was built last June, is in perfect condition and must be sold immediately. The price is a great sacrifice for this property, which is modern in every particular.

The main entrance is into a beautiful living-room, back of which is a large music-room or den. Another door from the front porch opens into the large dining-room. The kitchen and breakfast-room are perfect in arrangement and finish. There are two sleeping rooms downstairs. The two bedrooms upstairs are unusually light and airy, and have commodious closets. The lot is large, and highly improved and has garage. Do not fail to see this if you are looking for a home.

THE PERFECT BUNGALOW.

This perfect example of the "Swiss chalet" style bungalow is located in the Wilshire-Normandie Hill district, and "perfect" is certainly the word for it. On an east-front lot 50x150 feet, with eight large rooms, within one-half block from excellent car service, and with a view of mountain and valley which is unsurpassed, we believe you will agree with us that it is without an equal. The interior is the acme of cosy comfort and elegant simplicity—hardwood floors throughout, basement and furnace, two toilets and lavatories, handsome stone mantel, all those delightful built-in features which render furniture almost superfluous, the handsomest lighting fixtures and the finest of triple-satin-finish woodwork throughout. There are four superb sleeping-rooms, part below stairs and part above, one with its own sun porch and outside entrance. Finally there is a good garage with cement drive. One of the most artistic bungalows in the Wilshire section, located on Cahuenga blvd., on a west front lot 50x160; containing a living-room, dining-room, den, two large bedrooms, maid's room, commodious bathroom, kitchen and screen porch; also an 8-ft. cement porch across the entire front of structure.

The inglenook, which is a distinctive feature, contains an exceptional mantel 15 inches wide, extending to ceiling with paneled and recess effects. Handsome bookcases built into the face of the mantel, form a very novel effect.

The very pretentious buffet has leaded glass doors, beveled plate mirrors, etc. The dining-room opening on a cool and inviting patio (or court) permit an art glass treatment above the buffet.

Beamed ceilings, polished quartered oak floors, wood and heavy paneling form some of the features of the living-room, dining-room and den. The exceptionally large bedrooms have commodious wardrobes, polished floors, and being finished in white enamel make them especially inviting. The fixtures in the bathroom as well as kitchen and screen porch, are the best of their kind and the linen and medicine closets add to the many conveniences.

Beautiful electric fixtures, shades, handsome hardware, unusually good construction and very fine cabinet work, a fence and lawn combine to make this one of the best values on the market.

WILSHIRE LOT UNDER VALUE.

These things happen occasionally—a chance to get a splendidly-located, large lot—at less than value. Here is one of them. This lot fronts on an oil-tamped avenue 70 feet wide. Improvements are the finest and most modern—concrete gutters and curbs, wide walks and tastefully-planted parkings, with handsome electroliers at street intersections. Lot is in the 5c fare district, so located that Hill st. subway service will eventually bring it "close in." And the neighborhood is first-class, with handsome houses in the immediate vicinity. Buy this lot at $1600, on easy terms, or liberal discount for cash, and you will make money. I'll put you up a home on it, if you like, on a favorable basis. Or if you want to move right in, take one of the fine residences I have for sale in this neighborhood. They're built right, and purchaseable on the payment plan.

FOR SALE—
BROADWAY.
There is a great deal of interest being manifested by the investing public on this important thoroughfare between 7th and 10th streets; several very large pieces having been recently sold, and there are a number of important deals now under way.

Our prediction is, that every available lot at any reasonable price, will be bought up in the above-mentioned district by wise investors during the next few months.

We have three pieces of property between 7th and 10th sts., on Broadway, that are the cheapest properties in this district. We would be pleased to give the particulars to any intending purchaser. Don't wait too long. This class of property is too keenly sought after, so you had better act quickly if you are going to participate in the harvest that is going to be reaped on Broadway between 7th and 10th sts., during the next year.

E. J. BALDWIN ESTATE.
E. J. BALDWIN ESTATE.
E. J. BALDWIN ESTATE.

With few exceptions, the entire estate will be sold. This vast estate comprises thousands of acres of the richest farming land in this State. Its merits are so well known that but little comment is necessary.

The Rancho La Puente, in the heart of the great San Gabriel Valley, consisting of thousands of acres of the most fertile soil in Southern California, will be offered for sale and will be sold in tracts of 10 acres up.
Only 14 miles N.E. of the city, between El Monte and Covina, by the S.P.R.R., Pacific Electric and Salt Lake Railroads.
Perhaps you are curious to know what this land is adapted to.
Well, it cannot be beaten for growing
ALFALFA,
WALNUTS,
Fruits, vegetables. Yes, and around Covina, Monrovia and Arcadia, it's first-class
ORANGE LAND.

THE WATER QUESTION.

That is already demonstrated.
There is water under this land.
One plant in operation pumps 200 miner's inches of water. There are numerous small plants, none of which pump less than 150 miner's inches of water.
There is not another tract of land in Los Angeles county or at least that is as close to the city of Los Angeles that can be bought at so reasonable a figure. We are simply besieged with buyers, don't wait until it's too late. Now is the time to buy. If you are looking for a location for a home or for an investment, here is your opportunity.
There is a good home market for all produce, especially for alfalfa.
Go out and see for yourself, that is all that we ask. You will be convinced. One thousand acres sold during past three weeks.
Prices and terms at our offices.

Have you ever heard about the DAMP LAND
just south of EL MONTE, 12 miles from Los Angeles, one mile from the electric car line?
This land requires no irrigation whatever to grow
ALFALFA, VEGETABLES,
CELERY.
Just think of it. No labor or expense for irrigating; just plant your crops, cultivate them and watch them grow. Perhaps you don't believe this to be possible in this land of rainless summers; well, then, just board the Covina line car for El Monte, go out with us to the tract, and let us "show you" where 10 tons of alfalfa, per acre, can be grown each year, without irrigation. Get in on the ground floor and double your money in one or two years.
We have about 2000 acres of this land for sale, but at the rate it's selling it will not last long. Prices and terms at our offices.

FOR SALE— Country Property.

FOR SALE—

COLONIZATION LAND.

12,800 ACRES, $10 PER ACRE.

If you are seeking a tract of high-grade land for colonization purposes you cannot afford to overlook this. It is located in the west side of Fresno county, 6 miles south of Mendota on the Southern Pacific, and is without question the best cheap land in California. The soil is extremely rich and runs to a great depth. Alkali is unknown in this section. The tract is all level. Any of the crops or products grown in the San Joaquin Valley, which means anything grown in the State, can be raised on this land.

With water this land will sell in small sized tracts at from $125 to $175 an acre. The conditions are such that the entire tract can be placed under irrigation at a comparatively small cost per acre. Surface water is obtainable at 40 feet, and wells sunk to a depth of 200 feet, strike a water strata sufficient for irrigation purposes. There are a number of wells close by, which demonstrate the water supply. A project is now on foot to place the West Side lands of Fresno county under a ditch system, and expert irrigation engineers have, after an extensive study of the locality, estimated that water can be put on this land at an outside cost of $5 per acre.

The future development of the county will take place in this section, which is now the most sparsely settled. It can only be a matter of a few years' time until this entire region is transformed into beautiful vineyards and orchards.

Large tracts of good land, suitable for colonization are rapidly growing less in number and they never will be purchased as cheaply as now. We are familiar with all sections of the valley, and know of no bargain comparable to this.

Complete particulars, with maps, government reports and data as to water, will be furnished interested parties at our Los Angeles branch office at 214 Mercantile Place.

ALFALFA—ALFALFA—ALFALFA.

TWO SECTIONS WITH $2500 WATER RIGHT.

TWENTY DOLLARS AN ACRE.

This land is located near Wheatville, in the well-known alfalfa section of Fresno county. The Crescent Canal runs through it, and every acre can be easily irrigated. The water right consists of seventh interest in this canal, which controls a perpetual right to 75,000 inches in the Kings River. Land is level and absolutely free of alkali. A stand of alfalfa is now on 40 acres of the land, and another 40 is already checked. The remaining portion is covered with a heavy growth of natural grasses. 480 acres is fenced. This is the biggest bargain now on the market. We guarantee abundant water and soil of the highest class. We are offering this land at $20 per acre on terms of 1-2 cash, balance in 1, 2 and 3 years, at 7 per cent. interest.

I SELL THE EARTH.

R. S. BASSETT.

A BARGAIN IN SUBDIVISION ACREAGE.

About 6000 acres of good land, lying between Corcoran on the Santa Fe R.R., and Tipton on the Southern Pacific R.R., and being within 1¼ miles of Turnbull Siding on the Santa Fe R.R., and bordering for 4 miles on the township line between Tipton and Turnbull. This land lies in the artesian belt, as is proven by the test well already put down by us, and in addition to this advantage, there are two streams on the property, which flow part of the year. The stream banks are covered with large willow trees and there are many large oak trees scattered over the property. The soil is good and fertile, and is covered with a luxuriant growth of grass. Though the property has been used in the past for grazing purposes, we have had it surveyed into 40-acre tracts, and mapped, and the same has been approved by the Board of Supervisors of the county, and the same is now of record in the county maps. With this much of the preparatory work already done, it would require but little more time and expense to place this property on the market as a first-class subdivision. Lands lying between our tract and Corcoran, sell for from $75 to $100 per acre. We have made our price low enough to allow a handsome profit for the subdivider, by offering it at $25 per acre. Would take 1-3 cash, balance at 7 per cent., and might take a third in Los Angeles city property.

CALIFORNIA FOOTHILL HOME.

Located only 8 miles from Los Angeles, near Glendale; a place we think is one of the prettiest spots in California, and one of the most healthful; elevation is about 1000 feet. Grand view of valley and mountains; first-class for oranges; very little frost; place all set to oranges, lemons and a few grapefruit, but mostly lemons. Income the past year was over $2000, and will increase as place grows older; extra good water right; gravity water from the mountains; also a well and pumping plant; large house of 9 rooms, with 4 large verandas, full length of house; hardwood floors downstairs and cement basement; good barn; not far from an electric railway. This is one of the best places in Southern California, and can be had for several thousand dollars less than surrounding properties.

Say, Reader, if you want a desirable place to live I would be pleased to tell you of this place, and, better still, to show it to you.

FOR SALE—

25 acres exceptionally good orange land at foothills, north of San Dimas, the supply of good well located undeveloped orange or lemon land in Southern California, except small tracts, is entirely exhausted. Many might be surprised at the statement and perhaps doubt the accuracy; if so insert a few ads. and examine what is offered. Second and third grade orange land only will be found in quantity exceeding five to twenty-acre tracts, and this poorer grade of land is very limited. This land being at the foothills with an elevation of more than 1000 feet, is frostless and it is claimed without any contradiction that the equal of this property cannot be obtained anywhere in Southern California. It is located on the main road to Riverside, lays beautifully as to view, or for subdivision or irrigation. The soil is rich and is especially adapted for orange or lemon culture. Price $200 per acre, without water or $350 per acre, with water. Address C. B. HAZEN, Redondo Beach, Cal. 22

FOR SALE—

$35—ALFALFA LAND.

This is for sale in lots of 20 acres up, part of it on very liberal terms, at $35 an acre—some cheaper. Very best silt soil, no hardpan or alkali, and in the great artesian and cheap-pumping-water district of Los Angeles county. Right adjoining are producing alfalfa ranches cutting six crops a year, and total of ten and eleven tons per acre. We guarantee this to be the best of soil and in water belt, and can show you on every point. Near main line railroad. Leave here in morning, see land and return same day. ALDERSON BUILDING & INVESTMENT COMPANY.
424 SOUTH HILL ST.

For the past year or two we have in our different ads covered about all the ideas we could think of to show what we offer and what we can do for you.

Today we will sum it all up by saying that WE KNOW WE CAN COMPETE WITH ANY BUILDER.

WE KNOW WE BUILD GOOD HOUSES.

WE KNOW WE ARE RESPONSIBLE.

WE KNOW WE CAN PLEASE YOU, AND

WE KNOW WE WANT THAT OPPORTUNITY TO PLEASE YOU.

Our plan of work, briefly, is to build as general contractors, or we will furnish the mortgage money to enable you to build on your lot, or in some instances, where the general conditions will warrant it, we will help you to clear up the lot you have purchased on installments during the past few years, and then furnish the money to build with.

Do not allow yourself to be deluded with any idea that there is a big "commission rake-off" or "high prices" to "absorb" the cost the money is to us, for there is no such condition to meet.

We need only to talk with you two minutes to dispel such an erroneous opinion from your mind. Our mortgage money is simply 7 per cent. and every payment on principal reduces the interest. There may be some builders in the city who can offer just as good a proposition and who will do as much for you as we will, but we have our own doubts.

JUST CALL IN AND SEE US ABOUT YOUR BUILDING.

FOR SALE—
Are you looking for a good, large, money making orange grove? One that will pay 15 per cent. net each year. If so, mine may suit you. Best of reasons for selling. Other business requires my attention and money. This grove is situated 30 minutes east of Los Angeles by Pacific Electric. Near line. In a frostless belt, plenty of water. The trees are, and always have been well cared for, well fertilized and fumigated. They are various ages, full and heavy bearing. The soil is excellent and does not require fertilizing to the extent some soil does. Is easily irrigated and worked. I will sell this ranch complete for immediate possession; tools, implements, horses, etc. Not a dollar need be spent on improvements, they are already in. Good house, barn, irrigating system, etc. This is a desirable home place, in an excellent community. My price is $200 less per acre than groves are bringing in the near vicinity. Details and location for inspection will be given only to actual buyers who can handle a large proposition. Address X, box 277, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE. x22

FOR SALE—
For good and justifiable reasons I will offer my grove at a price that will sell it. The grove is a money maker and is growing better. Has been giving me a net income of about $5000. This I can prove. I have been offered nearly my price, all cash. The grove is worth a great deal more than I'm asking. All cash is not attractive. Would prefer anyway, half to remain at low interest as long as buyer desires it. If you buy it you will secure 20 acres of exceptional trees, navels and Valencias, good soil, easily cared for and well cared for. The location is exceptional, east of Los Angeles and close in, not in an obscure community. Frostless belt, plenty cheap water. Good modern house, good barn, etc. Near car line. My reason for selling justifies me in placing the price where it will go quick. For full particulars address Z, box 16, TIMES OFFICE. x22

Orange grove; forty acres; twenty-five acres in 12 to 17-year-old Washington navels and some 17-year-old Late Valencias, balance good soil; this year three tons to acre grain hay; par excellence for oranges, walnuts and alfalfa; hard finished 6-room cottage on most sightly and beautiful building knoll; barn, buildings, horses, tools, implements all go; everything complete; full line cement ditches with tiny gates for furrow system irrigating; everything is so perfectly arranged that a boy can attend to all, requiring no night attention whatever. Partly matured crop on trees. Plenty of water; every acre water stocked and no assessments. A bonanza if you have what I want; may divide to suit trade.
Want Los Angeles city income. Would consider vacant business lot or lots, clear, for all or part. What have you?

$45,000—Mortgage $10,500 (on or before, with subdivision release clause.) 354.84 acres finest orange land in State, lying between Lindsay and Porterville, only one mile from Southern Pacific Railway and 1½ miles from thriving new townsite of Strathmore; store, postoffice, hotel, two schools, etc.; the coming "Riverside" of the northern orange belt, Tulare county, California. Oranges ripen in October and November and bring fancy holiday prices. 100-acre orange grove adjoins land; no scales, and, since oranges ripen early and fully at end of interrupted growing season, there is no puffing; within sight of grove that produced nearly $4000 per acre in 4 years just past. Late Valencias or navels grow to simple perfection here.
Many orange groves, young and old, in this immediate district, and 3500 carloads of oranges shipped from this section this past season at highly satisfactory prices.
Water costs about $3 per acre to develop on this tract, though you can buy gravity water from a large water company whose ditch runs to my corner. Pumping water costs from $2 to $4 per acre per year for oranges (in Southern California it costs as high as $25 per acre per year.)
This tract has cheaper water than either Lindsay or Porterville, and that is a godsend to this property; water stands only 14 feet of surface in 115-ft. well on land today.
54 inches developed at total cost of only $500, including pumping plant, not 200 feet of line. This is marvelous. Ask irrigators.
Vacant orange land in this district increasing in selling price yearly and in big demand.
This tract is the last large level piece of orange land not yet subdivided in this locality; $30 per acre saved in cost of preparing land for planting if you buy this.
Am receiving constant inquiry to sell small holdings to intended orange growers. You can hold for positively increasing value as a whole, as I have, or sell in small tracts. Meantime the tract can raise from $4000 to $6000 worth of wheat or barley grain each year, in addition to $10,000 per year undisputed raise in selling value; every acre has been cultivated.
Things have only fairly started up there. Make inquiries of orange men. It will pay you to go there. Considering only "one-half" its advantages, present value and future, my price will surely double to you inside of 3 years.
State fully in first letter. Send photo if possible; will trade or sell all or one-half, clear for clear, or will assume.

$90,000—Mortgage $18,500 (only;) both above properties, or either. This is one of the cleanest, rock bottom priced and honest propositions ever offered any one, and open to your most thorough investigation.
What I have is first class, so please offer only first class property; my prices are not inflated; be reasonable with your own.
Note—The above two pieces of property have earned me $15,000 per year.
Would add $50,000 to $100,000 cash to this and mortgage balance, to purchase Los Angeles business property, apartments, etc. What have you?
This is addressed to both agents and owners. Please write fully what you have in first letter. Kindly cut this ad out for reference.

TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS:
Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word in the daily issue and 1½c Sunday.

Close calculations, covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words in the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.

Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling it.

The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, rate considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

NEW PENNSYLVANIA PETROLEUM CO.
We consider the stock of this company an exceedingly good purchase at ruling prices. The company controls 160 acres of land in the Santa Maria district. Sixty acres in the oil field adjoining the Newlove and Rice Ranch properties. No. 6 well just brought in, is almost directly opposite Newlove No. 22, which is a good producer. This well No. 6 is considered by oil men to be good for 1000 barrels per day, and all indications point to a long-life well. It is the deepest well in the east extension by 500 feet. The other 80 acres are about 1½ miles southeast of the Palmer big well, and adjoins the Henderson, Associated, and West. On the Associated ground one well is reported in oil, and there is also a well reported in oil on the Henderson ground. The drilling of this well in the new field is proceeding successfully, and the formation is so far regular and in place, with good indications for a producer, and promises to double the value of the holdings. This company has a capitalization of only 500,000 shares of $1 each. It therefore looks as though the company is now earning 15 per cent. on the stock at $2 per share, and if this actually proves to be the case, the stock will rapidly advance. In any event it is selling too low, and we advise its purchase.

CENTRAL OIL is another company that has just brought in a well that is believed to be producing upwards of 1000 barrels of high gravity oil per day. As the Central is selling its oil at the wells at $1.10 per barrel, it will be seen that this will add immensely to their income, and should enable a substantial dividend on the stock at $3 per share. The stock is now selling around $1.10. We also urgently advise its purchase.

AMERICAN CRUDE is now selling at 55 and paying 9 per cent. on par. This company expects in the near future to drill 5 additional wells, all in proven territory, which will undoubtedly enable a larger dividend and means higher prices for the stock. This also is a good investment, and we advise its purchase.

As members of the Los Angeles Stock Exchange we execute orders for the purchase, sale or exchange of securities in Los Angeles, and on the various exchanges in this country and abroad.

Read the following extract from the Banning Record of Aug. 19th:

The mining outfit for the Hartsell mining concern arrived here on Monday and will be freighted to 29 Palms by Jost brothers. The equipment weighs probably 40 tons and is the largest consignment of mining stuff that has been unloaded at Banning at one time in a long while.

The outfit consists of a stamp-mill, horizontal gasoline engine, metal sheets for building a residence, mining hardware and a thousand and one other things.

Mr. Hartsell is a San Francisco gentleman, who leased the MacDermott property. He is mentioned as a practical mining man and is going into the business here with a determination to win.

Those best acquainted with the situation predict a boom for 29 Palms, the coming fall and winter.

This speaks for itself. There are several mistakes, such as "the MacDermott property." Mr. Hartsell has a lease on the Ana Dulce, one of the claims of the Mohawk Herald Co. Mr. Hennebergh, our other lessee, is working a force of men on his lease. I leave for the mines today; will return in few days.

TAKE NOTICE.
We are going to hold the offer of stock in the Western Consolidated Oil Company open at ten cents per share up to and including the 21st of August. TO "LINER" ADVERTISERS:
Dating from June 1, classified advertising in The Times will be charged by the word at the present established rate of 1c per word for the daily issue and 1½c Sunday.
Close calculations covering a period of several months, develop the fact that the average number of words in the line are a fraction over seven. This basis for charge, therefore, will prevail after June 1.
Cash "want" advertising has always been calculated by the word, and this regulation will not change the manner of handling
The present "want" ad. rate has been in effect for many years, though the circulation of the paper, now more than 50,000 daily and 80,000 Sundays, has trebled during this period. No paper in the United States, sale considered, compares with The Times in "want" ad. service.

Hunt [illegible] many favorite [illegible] pleasing de[illegible] is reflected in its de[illegible] building—a [illegible]. The pro[illegible] the [illegible] classic [illegible]ly classic, but the feeling of freedom so desirable in out-of-door architecture is given by the simple "pillow-blocks" over the caps of the columns, and by the pleasantly quaint doors and curious small openings in the outer wall, each framing a tiny vista of the world beyond the patio. This court forms the heart of the building, from the viewpoint of living interest. Near by is a room that is much liked for its broadly-treated fireplace and uniquely paneled doors, as well as for its truly balanced color scheme, varying from shades of brown to buff and cream.

The approach to this fine room is from a reception hall, whose square columns supporting a massive beam mark the dividing line. The entasis, or lessening in size from bottom to top, of these columns gives them grace, which is admirably united to their bold detail.

The Girls' Collegiate School, by the same architects, is likewise the possessor of a fine court. This is the favorite haunt of the young women, where many an intellectual victory is won, by students seated at tables pleasantly flecked with vine shadows and surrounded by picturesque columns of Roman Doric proportions. The transition from the arcade in the outer wall to the post-and-lintel treatment of the inner wall is successfully brought about through square piers supporting the arches and beamed ceiling. The relationship between straight and curved lines is most enjoyable. As the gates suggest, the patio serves for an entrance from the street to the school as well as for a large passageway connecting the two great wings of the building. Thus a walk through its beautiful forms is part of the daily life of the students.

Among the best-loved landmarks of the town is the old City Hall, between Second and Third on Broadway. A plan has been rumored of those whose chief standard would be "the value of a foot front on Broadway." But by those who study and love really good things in architecture, its loss would be sincerely mourned. In the midst of the city streets it lifts its inspiring campanile of beautiful romanesque design. It is such a tower as suggests encircling birds, and ever-sunny skies, and reminds the traveler of the famous campanile of Venice, now forever gone. Overlooking the quiet court, vine mantled, it keeps in the heart of the city a note of aspiration and peace. Although not appropriate to its present uses—that of the administrative work of a city—it is just the scholastic building for the Public Library. With a remodeled interior, it would be admirable for just this purpose.

PERGOLA AND BALCONY.

The amenities of the climate have given rise to a thousand modulations of the pleasant themes of pergola, patio, roof garden and balcony. W. A. O. Munsell, of Hudson & Munsell, refers to these characteristics in combination as "the vernacular." People like this element for its comfort, that for its elegance, the other for its suggestive touch of foreign lands. And when the architect is clever enough to fuse them into a unified design, the effect is satisfying and worthy of study. Illustrating by some of their cottages, the pillared piazza here sketched is one of the kind always filled with restful shadows. In this instance, the projecting second story and the dormer, with corresponding extension of gable, give old-world grace.

When a man builds for himself, he is not so much inclined to follow precedent as to embody a certain feeling he has for a home. Mr. Munsell conceived this for his own special pleasure. One might say it has a trace of the Dutch sentiment, with its sturdy compactness, united with an air of quaint meditative seclusion. Or is it Normandy one thinks of in enjoying that subtle curve of roof, where the grace of line is given place of honor? And the entrance has a most inviting air of solid hospitality, needing no legend, "Welcome."

Business men like to plan houses. They spend some of the most enjoyable evenings of their lives squaring out floor plans and moving rooms around like chess on a board, until they get a result that seems "nothing picayuny, and just about right." Messrs. Martin and Rockwell are of this inventive turn, and have greatly added to the number of pleasant house ideals in Los Angeles. A. W. Boggs assisted them with the architectural part of the handsome residence, whose end gable, terrace and detail of porch appear in the drawing.

The old-English feature is much admired, as evidenced in the half-timbered effects, projecting eaves and gables; while the massive brick columns and great open terrace are generously suggestive of strength and enduring excellence. The interior is one of the most delightfully comfortable ones that could be surmised. The large living-room, which is one of California's best characteristics, rejoices in heavily-beamed ceiling and large fireplace. The dining-room is remarkable for its perfectly-appointed woodwork, great panels of perfect oak, and a large buffet over which extends a window of richly-set art-glass in warm colors and decorative forms. The interior colorings throughout the house are well harmonized, and many novelties in such humble blessings as closets, cupboards, presses and shelves, afford promise of little comforts as well as large.

One of the "new ones" is a sumptuous sort of bungalow at Mt. Washington, overlooking all Los Angeles. It is being built for H. W. Ayres, and has a magnificent outlook as well as admirable construction. The massively-rustic effect is home-like, and makes one rejoice in merely beholdnig the entrance. This has a capacious porch and outdoor reception-room, where, indeed, a whole tea party could be accommodated on the ample brick balustrades.

The great chimney is of a granite-faced clinker brick on the exterior—the glazing forming a component part of the brick. The green roof in dull tint harmonizes kindly with the natural browns of the walls.

This chimney, as it appears inside the living-room, is a most comfort-suggesting affair of "blue brick," built fully twelve feet wide, and reaching to the ceiling, with an arch about five feet long, capable of receiving half a dozen big eucalyptus logs.

In the rear, forming the second story over the declivity of the hillside, and backed and flanked by the rooms of the first floor, is a twenty-five-foot court laid in cement, with a fountain in the center. Above this breezy room is another, yet more airy, a pergola sleeping apartment, where one might dream, surely, of enchanting things—listening to the music of the water and gazing last at the stars.

Following one of the most inviting of drives from the center of Los Angeles past Eastlake Park and along the old El Monte road, at the corner of Fair Oaks avenue, one arrives at a charming architectural caprice — a Japanese villa, which, like a waft of the Orient, might have been borne over on the magic rug. It is more exotic than a lotus flower, and radiates the mystic strangeness of the Far East. Elements Asiatic are its composition—both Japanese and Chinese—and it includes the most decorative lines that the architects, Messrs. Hebert and Lourdou, could discover in all the products of these rich old civilizations. These elements, taken singly, were doubtless created thousands of years ago, and, as a conscious expression of art, still exist in these countries and are most absorbing subjects for study.

The lines of this villa are to the western taste most agreeably odd, with a spicy and curious interest. Crisply curve the many-pointed eaves. The decorations are both beautiful and grotesque. All about the clustering balconies are pillars surmounted with lion-head capitals. The approach to the house presented in the illustration is one of fairy-like beauty, especially at night, when the illuminations of the interior make the whole structure appear like a phantasy in white alabaster. So fraught with meaning and loveliness is every curve of the villa, that the owners, Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Johnson, have avowed their intention of never permitting a vine to touch and obscure the delicate contours.

The opportunities for landscape gardening are most invitin all through this section of the San Gabriel Valley, where gentle hills and wide plateaus offer vantage points for suburban homes. The inventive powers of the architects will be more and more in demand, as the exigencies of chosen locations call for correspondence in the structural styles. Among the men who especially please with happy combinations of usefulness and art is Fernand Parmentier, a group of whose inventions will close the present article. He modestly terms them "of no recognized style," and the beholder is not ungrateful for their winning originality.

The broad, strong, low effects are always adapted to country houses; and the many innovations in the conveniences given to these homes make them as comfortable as could be demanded by the most ease-loving. When from such an interior one looks out through doors that are a multitude of tiny frames for bits of grove and hill, and then wanders out upon a terrace-porch with square em[illegible] ures and pillared nooks, as if [illegible] a play, the house makes a strong [illegible] peal to the esthetic nature. The [illegible] slanting boldly down to the stone [illegible] tresses, is constructed of split sh[illegible] blocked at the lower ends with [illegible] zontal strips. The accent, it wil[illegible] seen, emphasizes the horizontal elements.

The suave and philosophic roo[illegible] which descends in free and [illegible] grace around the above simple [illegible] ney, curving over the porticoed [illegible] trance, and cosily protecting the [illegible] dows, is a typical feature of the [illegible] fornia bungalow. In this respe[illegible] pays tribute to the Indian proto[illegible] whose extending shadow was a [illegible] come coolness around the living-r[illegible] in long, sunny days. This hous[illegible] concrete, with its accentuated [illegible] of massive squareness, makes a st[illegible] contrast with the pleasure garden [illegible] court, whose gateway is sketche[illegible] the wall at the side.

Where an ornamental constru[illegible] of plaster is admired, nothing cou[illegible] more romantic than this follo[illegible] group of buttress, arch and cloi[illegible] like entrance passage. It affords [illegible] portunity for impressive vaul[illegible] plastered ceiling and eaves, and [illegible] designs. This interesting deta[illegible] taken from the residence of Mrs. [illegible] main Pellimes on West Seventh [illegible] near the Country Club. The ro[illegible] red, and the walls of soft gray.

There is something that is de[illegible] human about these low-eaved co[illegible] forms. Now this one, with its p[illegible] tive, heavy piers, plastered eaves [illegible] gables, and open timber work, rem[illegible] ly suggestive of a Norman ma[illegible] house, and its softened roof, shin[illegible] to look like thatch—the little ho[illegible] window snugly neighbored by [illegible] rough-stone chimney—what [illegible] chords are stirred as the tra[illegible] pauses before so beautifully symb[illegible] a home.

So it seems likely that Fill- must take up the question of in- ration. By having a provision in ote for incorporation, that there be issued bonds to pay for these improvements and sidewalks, hole question could be settled at ime. The town needs a better rotection. Fillmore is ready for a first-class commercial hotel. The residents are ambitious to see the town advance as rapidly as possible and the condition of the main street is not to their liking. But what is there to do? There are those who say the town should not be incorporated at the present time. And yet incorporation seems to be the only permanent solution of the problem.

A majority of the residents of Fillmore, and the farmers near by, are interested in having their town just as up-to-date as any, of its size, in California. Those who will be largely instrumental in helping to push Fillmore to the front are F. L. Fairbanks, W. G. Leopold, W. W. Tighe, Richard Stephens O. J. Stowe, George N. King, W. E. Foster, F. Udall, Herbert Mills.

FILLMORE IS GROWING.

During the past two years the growth of Fillmore has been more rapid and greater than for the ten years previous. As an illustration, in one addition to the townsite, on the south side, which was laid out only about eighteen months ago, nearly every one of the two hundred lots have been sold at prices starting at $50 each and now $200 each, and more than twenty-five dwellings have been built and more are projected. The following is a partial list of the improvements completed during the past year or now under way: G. W. Tighe, brick store building, $8000; addition to packing-house of California Citrus Union, $2000; addition to packing-house of Sparr Packing Company, $2000; addition to packing-house of Fillmore Citrus Fruit Association, $2000; E. McElhaney, store, $1500; E. L. Booth, store, $2000; Wilcox sisters, store building, $2000; B. Thorpe, cement plant and lumber yards, $1000; E. B. Hubbard, two residences, $1800; improvements to water system, $20,000. This makes a total of nearly $170,000.

Richard Stephens is intending to soon erect a concrete store building to cost about $8000. A new grammer school building is to be erected to cost $10,000, and a high school building costing $35,000. The site of the high school is a tract of eleven acres, and here will be baseball grounds and a public playground, as well as grounds for a park. The coming year promises to be an active one in Fillmore. A brick garage 22x40 feet is to be built for F. A. Stroud. G. N. King has contracted for a $2000 residence.

THE OIL FIELDS.

The old fields tributary to Fillmore consist of the "Sespe" and "Hopper Creek" to the north, the "Bardsdale" and "Torrey" to the south. The Sespe district, which is just being developed, is producing in the deep wells a very high grade of oil. In one of these wells, which produces 150 barrels a day, the oil has a paraffine base, being the only well on the Coast producing a crude oil that will run 68 per cent. in gasoline. Across the Santa Clara River is the Bardsdale oil district, where the wells are from 800 to 1000 feet deep. The Torrey district, in the same direction, about four miles east of the Bardsdale, has twenty-five or thirty wells producing 17 gravity oil. The Hopper Creek district joins on to the east of the Sespe, and, being a new district, the deep-well idea, which has proven so successful, will be carried out. The value of the product of the seventy or more producing wells in the four districts near Fillomre will aggregate about $180,000 a year. The number of new wells now being drilled, and old ones being made deeper, is about twenty-five, at an average cost of $10,000 each. The area of what is called "proven" territory, but not yet having been drilled, is very large, not less than 50,000 acres. These oil lands are located from three to twelve miles from Fillmore, and are being more rapidly developed now than ever before, on account of being more accessible. A movement is now on foot to build a six-inch pipe line to bring in the oil from the most distant wells to the railroad at Fillmore, and there be shipped either by rail or by pipe line to the seaboard. There are two small pipe lines already installed, one from the White Star Oil Company, and the other from the Brownstone Oil and Refining Company. The greatest activity now is in the Sespe field, about ten miles north of Fillmore, where this high gravity oil has been struck, which is worth about $1.50 a barrel at the well. This oil is being shipped in tank cars to the refinery in Los Angeles. In this Sespe district the White Star Oil Company, which has five producing wells, is preparing to spend $20,000 in deeping the wells for higher grade oil and a greater production. The present greatest production of any one well is 150 barrels a day. The Cosmopolitan Oil Company is deepening a well to 1800 feet, which has been producing forty-five barrels, expecting a production of 150 barrels in the lower sands. This same company has already started, on the Udall lease, to drill one of the deepest wells in this territory, at a cost of from $10,000 to $15,000. The Producers' Oil Company, composed of Michigan people, is drilling on Doe Flats a deep well for high-grade oil. The Big Sespe Company is cleaning out its five wells, and will be the ones who will put in the new pipe line a distance of twelve miles, costing about $100,000. The Brownstone Oil Company, with four producing wells, is drilling on their No. 5, now down about 800 feet, and expects to finish at 2000 feet. On Los Angeles Flats a new company is putting down a well, the chances being that they will get plenty of oil, as it is in the proven territory.

The Bardsdale Oil Company, with five producing wells, is deepening the old wells and sinking a new one, intending to go down 1500 feet.

In the Hopper district the Harris Oil Company is drilling a deep well for high-grade oil.

The pumping of heavy oil in these districts has been going on steadily for the past twenty years, with no indication of exhausting the supply. The higher grades were only discovered about two years ago, by going down into the lower sands. This discovery has given a great impetus to the development work, although the cost of drilling a deep well is much more than the old ones, but the production is larger and the oil sells for about three times the price. "As an example," said Mr. Stowe, "some of these wells, which produced forty barrels a day of 26 gravity oil, worth $1 a barrel, after being deepened 1000 feet, secured 150 barrels a day of 36 gravity oil, worth $1.50 a barrel. The monthly income of the first mentioned well was about $1200, while the deepened well brings an income of $6750 a month. The additional cost of the deeper well was probably $2000, yet the additional income per month is $5250. With the increase in the production of high grade oil there will surely be a refinery located at Fillmore."

IMMENSE GYPSUM DEPOSIT.

About five miles south of Fillmore is one of the largest gypsum deposits of any place in California, so I was told. It is entirely undeveloped. "I rode over it on horseback," said my informant, "and the horse's hoofs brought forth a hollow sound, as though there might be caves beneath. This gypsum is of value for a fertilizer and also for what is called Alpine plaster. Now that we are to have a bridge across the Santa Clara River it will be possible to haul this gypsum to the railroad and supply whatever the demand there may be. Adjoining this deposit is one of red and white paint rock, which has been tested and has a commercial value. It is there in almost unlimited quantities. If persons who are familiar with these minerals should open up the deposits they would give employment to men, who would in turn benefit the trade of the local merchants of Fillmore."

BROWN SANDSTONE QUARRIES.

About seven miles up the Sespe River is a brown sandstone quarry, the rock being very hard, of its kind, and as a building stone presents a fine appearance. It has been used in the construction of several buildings in Los Angeles, and the local bank here in Fillmore is partially built of it. Water power for developing electric power can be had from the Sespe River, and a branch railroad could be built the seven miles from Fillmore, so that it could be quarried cheaply. There is the opportunity for the development of a fine business, which would give employment to a large number of men, and add to the commercial activity of Fillmore.

PRODUCTIONS OF FILLMORE.

The principal productions of Fillmore are 400 carloads of oranges, valued at $280,000; 300 carloads of lemons, valued at $240,000; walnuts valued at $20,000; apricots, valued at $35,000; beans, valued at $65,000; hay, valued at $10,000; honey, valued at $20,000, and other products of less value, the total being about $850,000, to which add the value of the oil fields, productive of $180,000, makes a grand total of over $1,000,000. Fillmore is located about fifteen miles west of the Los Angeles county line.

MORE MAILS NEEDED.

Although Fillmore has two trains each day in the morning and the same in the afternoon, there is only the one mail from Los Angeles in the morning, and none in the afternoon. It would seem that this might be remedied if the proper efforts were to be made.

CEMENT DEPOSIT.

About three miles from Fillmore there is a large deposit of cement rock, and this might be the supply of a local cement plant. Oil for cheap fuel is close at hand.

SULPHUR SPRINGS.

About thirty miles up the Sespe River is said to be one of the largest hot sulphur springs in this section. The water is so warm that it is impossible to bathe in it until cooled. It could be made a popular resort.

BORAX DEPOSIT.

One of the sources of supply of the noted "Twenty-team borax" is on the head waters of the Sespe River, about fifty miles from Fillmore. A railroad up the Sespe would bring this to Fillmore for shipment. There are at present three companies working there, but the product is sent out to the railroad on the Mohave desert by team. A part of the supplies are sent in from Fillmore.

HUNTING AND FISHING.

About 30,000 trout have been planted in the Sespe River, from the government hatchery at Sisson, and they are thriving. Trout twenty inches in length have often been caught. There is also good hunting in the mountains.

HOTEL WANTED.

The Board of Trade, I understand, has a standing offer of a hotel site free to the person who will erect a brick building for a hotel of about thirty rooms, and will conduct a first-class hotel. There are rooming-houses and restaurants in Fillmore, but no commercial hotel on the American plan. The town is growing and there is an opening for the right person to make a success of this enterprise.

PLENTY OF WATER.

The water supply of Fillmore is abundant and cheap, being owned by the farmers adjacent to Fillmore and going with the land. It is taken out of Sespe River, about seven miles above the town, and is brought a part of the way in open ditches and then in steel pipes, the pipe line crossing the river on a suspension bridge which cost several thousand dollars. This water supply is more than sufficient for the present needs of the land in the vicinity of Fillmore. There is also available quite a water power which could be developed.

GETTING ON IN THE WORLD.

W. E. Foster, secretary of the local Board of Trade, is a painter by occupation. He bought eleven acres of land near Fillmore and intended to set it out to oranges. He did not have capital enough to buy his orange trees so grew them himself. He now has enough trees budded for his land and will sell this year $1600 worth of young trees. He is developing his orange grove from his earnings as a painter, and making money besides. Mr. Foster also makes a specialty of breeding chickens and Parlor Tumbler pigeons. From the latter he has received silver cups and very many premiums in exhibits he has made. These pigeons cannot fly, but turn over backwards when placed on the ground. He has been working on the perfection of his breeds for more than twenty-five years.

THE LABOR QUESTION.

A gentleman who is in touch with the labor situation in Fillmore told me that if they could secure white help they would gladly pay better wages than they are paying the Japanese. They pay a Jap $1.75 a day, and for the same grade of work would pay a white man $2. "If desirable men with families will come to Fillmore we will give them an option to purchase a lot, will put up a tent house for them and their family, and they can occupy it a whole year and make the first payment at the end of the year. The women and children can work in the packing houses, and help earn the cost of the home. We want white people to do all our work."

OPPORTUNITY FOR RAILROAD.

A branch line of railroad, from the Southern Pacific at Fillmore, would follow up the Sespe River for a distance of seven miles and reach the brown sandstone quarries. A few miles further up and there are forests of pine timber, which at present are entirely inaccessible, and this would furnish a valuable freight for a railroad. About thirty miles above Fillmore, still on the same route, are hot sulphur springs. These could be made the site of a resort. Still further up are deposits of borax, which could be brought out by rail. If this road were continued far enough it would reach the San Joaquin Valley and form a branch line to Bakersfield. There is certainly an opening for the investment of some capital, which would develop a number of now dormant resources of great value. In this same territory are oil lands that will some day be very productive.

HOW TREES GROW.

On the farm of William Shiells, near Fillmore, I was shown eucalyptus trees three years old which are forty feet high and thirty-six inches in circumference at the trunk. These are being grown as a division between two fields, and have had but little attention.

LAND VALUES.

"There is room for at least one hundred families near Fillmore on twenty acres of land each," said W. E. McCampbell. "The prices of land range from $10 an acre for pasture land up to $150 to $500 for fruit and bean lands with a supply of water. The bearing orchards are worth from $700 to $1500 an acre if set to oranges and lemons; $300 to $750 if set to apricots or peaches; $500 to $1000 an acre if set to walnuts, and $100 to $250 if set out to alfalfa. They raise seven crops of alfalfa a year, an aggregate of ten tons to the acre. Mr. Allison, who raises alfalfa and beans near Fillmore, had ninety acres last year, from which his returns were $6000, or half what he paid for the land."

THE OIL INDUSTRY.

KENNETT OIL BOOM FIZZLES.

DRIPPINGS OF TANK CAR THE SUPPOSED SEEPAGE.

Drilling Outfit Ordered Before Some One Who Knew Oil Business Told Promoters of Mistake—No Oil Yet Found in North and Lot of Money Has Been Spent.

The oil excitement at Kennett has terminated in ignominious failure, as was forecasted by The Times when the first discovery was reported. It has now developed that the supposed "seepage" was in reality leakage from an oil tank car that had stood for several weeks on the railroad track. The men behind the venture have quit in disgust and the order for an oil boring outfit has been countermanded.

Efforts are being made to interest capitalists in supposed oil wells in the vicinity of Marysville, although it is reasonably safe to believe that generally petroleum exists in the North only in the fertile brains of a few wily promoters. People residing in Southern California should consider the proposition very carefully before yielding up any money to the promoters of such "enterprises," as the chances usually seem to be much in favor of dismal failure. The deep shafts sunk in the gold mines, in many cases running from 2000 to 3500 feet in depth, have never given the slightest sign of oil, while deep explorations with diamond drills in the copper districts have been barren of results so far as oil is concerned.

As a matter of fact no oil has been found worthy of mention north of Coalinga, except the Watsonville-Sargents district. Until recently the American Duchess Oil Company has reported to be getting an insignificant quantity of high-grade at Half Moon Bay, but it was so small as to be forgotten by every one. A lot of money has already been spent in unsuccessful wild cat work without one cent of returns.

Important, If True.

Important, if true, seems to be the opinion of oil men about the report of paraffin oil signs at Kramer, San Bernardino county. So far, nothing of this kind has been found west of Wyoming. As yet, it must be stated that the Kramer well is uncompleted and what is reported of it is based upon analyses of very small samples of liquid and of oil sands taken from it.

Even if there is a paraffin oil in anything approaching commercial quantities in that region, it remains to be seen whether the present hole will get it. If it does, the importance of the strike is very great.

The results have been such as to start two or three other rigs in that region at distances of ten or fifteen miles from the Kramer's site.

At Poso Creek.

T. B. Crawford of New York and associates have leased 34-27-25, in the Poso Creek country, which, if oil is there, is a northern extension of Kern River, several miles beyond the present limits of production. In the boom days W. S. Tevis and H. L. Packard sunk a well in this region, obtaining a good body of oil sand, it is said, but it was not very prolific and the ground was too isolated to work when oil fell in price.

Miller & Sauber of Los Angeles are seeking a lease on 14 in the same township, which is owned by W. G. Lutz, John and H. H. McPhaul, E. W. McCutcheon, Lemuel and Peter Karns, T. W. Peterson and Jason Smith of Bakersfield.

Standard's New Company.

According to a report from Modesto, the Standard Oil Company has filed articles of incorporation of the Pacific Coast Oil Company with the County Clerk at that place. No explanation is given, though it appears a little strange. The Pacific Coast Oil Company was the name of one of the oldest companies in California, and was bought out by the Standard when it first began business in the fields of this State, its property being at Newhall. For several years all the Standard's field work was done under that name, such as the purchase, production and transportation of crude. A few years ago all business was consolidated in the Standard Oil Company of California.

Some time ago there was a vague rumor going the rounds that the Standard was seeking to buy or lease lands in the neighborhood of Modesto. Possibly a separate corporation is formed to do this, owing to the demand of owners for an interest or some other reason.

RAILROADS.

OUTFITS GATHER NEAR DOUGLAS.

LINE FROM THAT CITY SOUTH TO BE RUSHED.

"Smelter City" Will Be on Main Line of Southern Pacific Between East and Mexico — Los Angeles Pacific Equipping Cars With Fenders Law Requires.

The Southern Pacific has directed Grant Bros. of this city to move their grading outfits from the construction camps in Tepic, Mex., to Douglas, and the work on the line from the "Smelter City" south into Mexico will be rushed. Whether this is merely temporary, pending the end of the rainy season in Mexico, during which it is impossible to work, or whether the line from Douglas down the Yaqui River to Guaymas, will be completed first, is not known.

The line toward the international border has been graded, rails laid and trains operated from Guaymas north as far as Agua Caliente, and it is asserted that the present large force will be retained on the Courtland-Douglas-Guaymas branch until completion. This will put Douglas on the main line of the Southern Pacific between the East and Mexico.

Fifty carloads of grading outfits, 2000 mules and much material have left Tepic for Douglas. At Kelton cars fitted with bunks and tables for living quarters are being assembled. Fifteen are on the ground, and others are daily expected. The Mexican outfits are expected to reach Courtland this week. Work between that town and Douglas and Douglas and Naco, on the border, will be started at once, according to reports.

The line between Douglas and Courtland has been staked to Kelton, the junction from which the Courtland-Gleason branch, just completed, runs.

Naco and Bisbee will probably be connected within a short time.

From Gleason a line is projected down the valley, south of the one to Kelton, joining the main line at a point near Four Bar ranch.

The road has not been staked into Douglas, but starts from a point about half a mile north of the city, indicating that the exact point of entry has not been determined upon.

New Fenders.

The Los Angeles-Pacific shops are equipping its cars with the style of fender required by the Council. This company has been testing an automatic coupler, the invention of a Los Angeles man, which operates successfully, and may be generally adopted for single cars. It will probably be made in larger size and tried on three and four-car trains.

The Los Angeles-Pacific shops are making street cars for a Phoenix company.

Street Indicator.

The street and station indicator invented by a Los Angeles man, E. L. Kellum, is to be tried by the Pacific Electric on the Long Beach line. This device is electrically or automatically operated by means of a contrivance attached to the forward trucks of cars or engines, that passes over lugs fastened to cross ties on suburban lines and sunk in the street to track level on city lines.

It is designed to hang from the ceiling of the car and has openings on either side to display the street names. The lugs are placed on the near side

"BUILDING NUMBER" OF EAGLE IN SEPTEMBER

Fine Illustrated Building Review of Mt. Washington To Be Published Soon

A special building number of the EAGLE will be issued Sunday, September 12th. This number will contain a resume of all the building operations that have been executed on Mt. Washington up to date, and many of the handsome structures that are to be erected this fall and winter. The issue will be well illustrated and will be an eye opener to those who have been unfortunate enough not to have visited the property as yet. It will prove that although Mt. Washington is just a few months old, it is already a center of fashionable homes, and is attracting more genuine attention than any other subdivision in Southern California.

PLANNING SUNDAY MUSICAL CONCERTS

Big Military Band May Be Engaged For Entertainment of the Thousands of Mt. Washington Week-End Visitors.

GEN. MGR. PERRY of the Los Angeles and Mt. Washington Incline Railway Co. is considering the advisability of engaging one of the finest musical organizations in the West for regular Sunday afternoon concerts on the summit of the mountain. The popularity of the lofty residence district is growing by leaps and bounds, and thousands of week-end visitors ramble through the glens and dales and over the knolls and gracefully contouring thoroughfares of Los Angeles' most picturesque living place.

From the standpoint of natural beauty Mt. Washington furnishes enough enjoyment and diversion in itself—but the railway officials believe that the stately mountain's charms would be further enhanced for residents and visitors by the accompaniment of high class music. If adopted, this will be a decided innovation in residence districts. Many of the property owners on the mountain have expressed themselves as being decidedly favorable to the new idea. The proposition will be decided in a few days and the result announced in next Sunday's EAGLE.

BUY FOR HOMES.

Robert Marsh & Co. report a lively interest in both improved and unimproved residence property, and an active demand which augurs well for a lively fall business. Following are transactions reported: Ida V. Olshausen to Lizzie A. Wheat, an unimproved lot, 75x130 feet, on Wilshire boulevard opposite Van Ness avenue, for a consideration of $4000. Helen Adamson to T. K. Shea, an improved eight-acre ranch at Burbank, on Flower street, near Sonora, the price paid being $4200. The purchase was for a home. F. A. Sanborn and Clara M. Hoguet to John Rolling, the northeast corner of Washington and New England, 87x108 feet, with nominal improvements. The consideration was $10,000. A. L. Parker to Ethel Lansigh, a six-room bungalow at No. 317 Fortieth Place, for $4000. F. E. Hartigan to W. H. Allen, an eight-room house at No. 1671 Oxford street, for $6800, the place being bought for a home. F. M. Small to William Pulsevich, an eight-room house at No. 875 Vermont avenue. The price was $6500, and the purchaser bought for a home. The Arlington Heights Terrace Company to Carrie Hood, 300x150 feet on Eighteenth avenue, just north of Washington, the consideration being $4950. The purchase was for a home. William Pulisevich to F. M. Small, a lot 40x100 feet on Carleton street in Robert Marsh & Co.'s Cottage Home tract, for $750. A. Heineman to George Smith, a six-room bungalow at No. 226 Ardmore avenue, for $3750. Mr. Smith will occupy the property as a home.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Mrs. "Billy" Arlington states that the beautiful Arlington Grand apartment-house pictured in this department two weeks ago is her own separate property, built for her under her personal supervision, and paid for out of her separate funds. The structure was reported at that time as being the project of Mr. Arlington. The plans for the building, which is to be of the pure colonial type and elegantly appointed, were prepared by the C. F. Borton Company. The apartments will be built at No. 2825 South Grand avenue.

S. F. Wuest reports that the Oneonta Park and Ardfert tracts lying adjacent to Huntington Drive, in South Pasadena, which were opened about a year ago, are nearly all sold. He reports that forty houses have been built at costs ranging from $2500 to $5000, and that lot sales have totaled approximately $100,000. Mr. Wuest is now putting on the market the La Marguerita and Sanders tracts. Five lots in these areas are reported sold, and each is to be improved with a residence to cost not less than $3500.

BUILDS AND SELLS.

E. M. McGillen, one of the owners of Windermere Park, reports that in this attractive sixty-acre tract eight houses has been built within the past ninety days. Of these Mr. McGillen has sold three at prices ranging from $4000 to $7500. The same dealer has sold lots 50x150 feet, and ranging in price from $1000 to $1500 to the following buyers: Thomas L. Atkinson, W. S. E. Blizzard, Albert J. Buckley, A. Clubb, W. J. Hess, W. F. Mayhew and Mr. Burgess, all men from the East and Canada. Mr. McGillen is erecting at the corner of Clinton and Heliotrope streets, in the tract, a nine-room plaster-exterior house, which is to contain all modern improvements. The lot is 64x154 feet, and the cost will be about $10,000.

BUILDING PERMITS.

NEW BUSINESS BLOCK.

PLANING MILL IS PLANNED.

BRAWLEY, Aug. 21.—Business activity here is greatly on the increase. Plans are nearly completed for the erection of a business block for Griswold & Armstrong, to cost $7000; also for a planing mill for the Brawley Coöperative Building Company. Bonds are soon to be voted for the construction of a sewer system. Among the buildings completed during the year are the Bungalow Hotel, at a cost of $16,000; the Holt block, $11,000; Oakley block, $9000; Hovley & Cady, $5000; the grammar school, $25,000, and other buildings to the value of $30,00. The Brawley Town and Improvement Company is said to have sold 161 lots valued at $22,000.

PROUD OF HIGH SCHOOL.

MEETS NEEDS OF VICINITY.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Aug. 21.—The Huntington Beach Union High School, completed about the end of the last school term, is one of the best equipped and most modern of the beach schools. It is constructed of concrete and brick on the exterior, the brick extending up to the window sill course of the first story. Located on a piece of rising ground about one mile back from the beach with the background of eucalyptus trees, the building is very imposing as approached from the main part of the town. Being a Union High School, students from all sections of this country are enrolled, provision being made for horses and wagons in the large barn at the rear of the lot.

The building is 120x80 feet on the ground, the plan being practically a rectangle. On the first floor are six class rooms, the principal's suite, and a teachers' room. A thoroughly equipped art room occupies the north side of the building, the light from this direction being most advantageous for work such as is carried on in this section. On the second floor a large auditorium occupies the entire rear portion of the building. Adjoining the auditorium at the rear of the stage is a small science lecture room, which is joined to the physics laboratory by wide rolling doors. When these doors are open the physics laboratory and the lecture room are the same as one room, making an auxiliary auditorium, which will seat about 200 people.

Adjoining the physics laboratory is a thoroughly equipped chemical laboratory, which is fitted up with every modern convenience for the study of chemistry. At the other end of the building is located a commercial room in which are taught all the commercial branches. All the rooms are lighted from one side with immense windows, so that the light comes in over the left shoulder in all cases. This arrangement accounts for the fact that no windows appear in the two wings at the front of the building. In order to relieve the bareness of these two wings the two bronze panels with the name of the school upon them were inserted.

The basement contains the heating apparatus, lunch rooms, toilet rooms and store rooms. A sloyd room has been provided for, but not equipped. The building cost approximately $30,000. Arthur R. Kelly of Los Angeles was the architect.

HOTEL CHANGES HANDS.

MANY BIG DEALS REPORTED.

BEAUMONT, Aug. 21.—Real estate transactions during the past ten days in Beaumont city property and acreage have been quite extensive. O. W. Bell has purchased from Mrs. K. Bassler the Summit Hotel of twenty-five rooms and the new owner already has begun making improvements. P. J. Carter is doing carpenter work and T. O. M. Jones has the contract for putting down sixty feet of cement sidewalk, eight feet wide, on the east side of the house, extending from the porch to the alley on the north. There will be no change in management. The purchase price was not disclosed, but is said to have been $6000.

Mrs. E. A. Fisher has sold to W. L. Perry 180 acres of grain land for $4500. A well has been sunk and windmill erected. Cyrus Walker purchased forty acres north of the townsite from Charles West for $3000. The buyer has arranged to move on the property in October and will make extensive improvements. The McNevin ranch south of Beaumont has been sold by Mrs. Clara Thompson to Mrs. H. E. Irwin of Redlands for a reported consideration of $6000. This ranch includes twenty acres of bearing orchard trees, farmhouse, barn and well, equipped with windmill. William J. Sears this week purchased two lots of George Mayer at Orange and Ninth streets. He will improve the property at once.

The foundation for the home of W. H. Holmes, on Welwod avenue, are in, and the building will soon be constructed. Hackman & Currier is the name of a new firm which opened its doors for Beaumont business this week. The new Fisher block gets the concern, which will handle harness and men's shoes, and will do harness and shoe repairing.

Free of Charge.

Some time since a genial-looking Irish gentleman wanted an empty bottle in which to mix a solution that he wished to prepare, and went in the American drug store to make the purchase.

Selecting one that suited his purpose, he asked Dr. Robinson how much it would be.

"Well," was the reply, "if you just want the empty bottle it will be one centavo, but if you want anything in it you can have the bottle free of charge."

"Sure, that's fair," said the witty Celt. "Put in a cork.—[Philippines Gossip.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

All varieties of fruits and vegetables were pretty well cleaned up at the market yesterday morning. Quite a run was experienced on muscatel grapes, and the price ranged from 60 cents in the early market to $1 toward noon. Most of the fruit was of inferior quality, and when the market first opened it was expected that difficulty would be experienced in disposing of it. Nearly every one wanted muscatels, and by 10 o'clock only a few boxes remained on the street. The shipments Monday will probably be larger than ever, and it is expected that the price will drop considerably.

There were no changes in berry prices yesterday, but the market is getting much firmer. A large demand was made for all varieties, and they were rather scarce.

All kinds of fish are scarce on the wholesale market. The supply is not large enough to meet the demand. Mackerel is beginning to come in a little better, and in another day or two there should be plenty of this variety.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

SINGLE SESSION PROVES LIVELY.

FIVE PETROLEUM AND MINING SECURITIES HANDLED.

Winds Up Week Which, on the Whole, Has Been Fairly Encouraging in Point of Volume and Range of Business Done on the Local Mart.

Five petroleum and a like number of mining securities were handled during yesterday's single lively session on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. Altogether the past week has been a fairly encouraging one in point of volume and range of business done. The week end close was firm, and stocks had a general upward tendency. Bank issues have been much sought after, but most of the trading has been off board. The industrials have been quiet.

The oil list has had two rather phenomenal bulges, Central Oil having gone up from 87 to 1.15, and New Pennsylvania from 60 to 85, both advances being attributed principally to the discovery of important gushers in the petroleum fields of the respective companies.

Union was the leader in yesterday's trading, 180 shares of this issue changing hands at 105.75. The close at 105.75@105.87 1-2 was advanced 1-4 point in the bid. Ten of Associated Oil sold at 34-37 1-2; 1-8 point off from the price of Friday. The stock closed 34.50@35.00, up 1-8 point in the asked.

A thousand of American Crude Oil were transferred at 85 1-2 and 2000 of Central Oil at 1.08@1.09. The latter was a little off at the close, which was 1.09@1.10, down 2 1-2 points in the asked and up 1 1-2 points in the bid.

Ninety of Mexican Petroleum Ltd. common were marketed at 27.75. Off board sales of 30 shares of Mexican Petroleum at 69 were reported.

In the mining section Clark Copper was the leader in activity, 8500 shares being handled at 13 1-2@11 1-4 under the regular delivery contract, and an additional 1000 at 12 1-2, buyer 30 days; 200 of Combination Fraction sold at 71; 1000 of Consolidated Mines at 1 1-8; 5000 of California Hills at 5 3-8 and 4000 of Searchlight Parallel at 2 1-8.

DECIDED RECOVERY FROM THE WEEK'S LOWEST PRICES.

Union Pacific, After Bearing Brunt of Bear Campaign, Moves Up and Southern Pacific, Reading and Rock Island Show Gains—Pressure Directed Toward Steel Shares.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—After five full days of unwonted activity and excitement, the stock market today settled down to a more orderly routine in which very decided recovery from the week's lowest prices was generally recorded. London's exchange was observing a holiday, so little guidance was derivable from that quarter. However, opening prices here showed advances throughout the active list. Union Pacific, which has borne the brunt of the recent bear campaign, opened at from 207 to 208½, against 204¾ at the previous day's close. Another strong issue was American Car & Foundry. Fractional advances were made by Southern Pacific, Reading, Rock Island and many other conspicuous issues, while some pressure seemed to be directed on United States Steel and Amalgamated Copper. After the first few minutes of activity, a realizing movement set in. By the end of the first hour, the upward movement was again in full swing under the lead of Union Pacific, Reading and United States Steel, while such specialties as Pittsburgh Coal, common, and preferred; General Electric; Westinghouse Electric and International Pump were up one to four points. The bank statement, in its daily average, showed a decrease of $6,788,600 in loans, and $15,000,000 decrease in deposits. An increase of over 25 per cent. in the total of bank clearings all over the country for the week was hailed as another indication of reviving business.

Bonds were irregular. Total sales, par value, $1,778,000. There was no change in government bonds throughout the week.

Boston Copper Market.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building, Los Angeles.]

BOSTON, Aug. 21.—North Butte continued reasonably strong today. The copper market did very well, in fact, and has shown an unusual degree of strength for several days, in the face of the sharp break in the New York market. It shows a very healthy condition and that the stocks are in the hands of strong interests who do not care to sell for fear of having to buy back at higher prices. We believe the fundamental conditions are sound, that the increase in all business activity has only just started, and that the copper stocks today offer greater speculative opportunities than any other class of securities. New York Cotton Market.

[By Private Wire to E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 113 West Third street.]

NEW YORK, August 21.—Speculation in cotton has been moderately active at irregular prices. Early in the week there was some tendency toward a higher level of values, but toward the close a recession took place, resulting in a small net loss for the week. This occurred despite the existence of semi- after day the maximum of heat there has been from 100 degrees upward. Fortunately minimum temperatures in Texas have ranged in some instances low at 75 degrees, a fact which has some mitigating effect. In Oklahoma, Mississippi and Alabama temperatures have been high. Some think that the hot wave is slowly going east. But on the whole it is reported that the intense heat has proved very destructive to the boll weevil. Moreover it is contended that the present relatively higher prices will bring out large quantities of cotton during the opening months of the crop year without affecting the actual size of the yield. This has happened more than once in the past when ruling prices were regarded as tempting. Such a movement would not mean necessarily that the crop is not short. Very many believe that it is, but it is conceded that a rush of cotton early in the season to take advantage of prices around 12 cents might easily cause quite a marked recession in value, at least for the time being, then, too, speculation is sluggish. Sharp reminders that the bull campaign was being overdone have not been lost on the public.

J. L. Porter of Logan & Bryan says: "The cotton market during week has been an enigma that defied solution by the closest and best posted in the business. The Government had officially stated that on July 25, the condition of the crop was the lowest on record at that date. Subsequent weather has been trying in the extreme all over the Southwest and the central valley bringing reliable reports from those sections of disaster to the crop, yet the market failed to respond to the bullish news and is today more than $2 per bale cheaper than the day the government report was issued. It is useless to talk now about the size of this crop. It is fixed in quantity below the requirements necessary to keep spindles going or to produce the goods wanted, if they can be had. The question to be determined is, what price will force the shut down of machinery and curtailment of production of manufactured goods to fit the crop. Twelve cents will not do it. It will take some time to convince spinners that the crop will not afford them ample supplies, but the information will finally percolate their cranium."

Weather.—Ft. Worth wires: "In Panhandle, showers extended from Texas line on New Mexico side, southeast along entire route of Ft. Worth and Denver road, varying in length from four to six hours. Along Texas and Pacific lines to west, rains reached as far as Midland." Shreveport, Vicksburg, Greenville, Monroe, Jackson, Memphis, Natchez, clear hot. New Orleans, cloudy, hot.

DUTY OF MERE MAN.

Expounded by Recent Convert to Suffragettism to the Members of the City Club.

The first woman to address the City Club spoke yesterday at the Westminster Hotel on "The Ultimate Consumer and His Duty." The speaker was Mrs. Florence Kelly, of New York, secretary of the National Consumers' League, and a late convert to suffragettism. Before she got through the club understood that the immediate and ultimate "duty" of the "him," mentioned in the title of the address is to bring about woman's suffrage.

Mrs. Kelly was not alone in the masculine assembly, for a dozen women accompanied her. They included Mrs. Charles Farwell Edson, Mrs. Frances Noel, Miss Jessie Anthony and Mrs. F. E. Wheat.

The club received a reply from President Taft, through his secretary, to its invitation to him to be its guest during his visit here in October. The President said the details of his visit are entirely in the hands of the local committee.

MINING NOTES.

The Chamber of Mines has received MINES PART II.. 78903.... the United States Geological Survey's special bulletin on the production of coal in the United States in 1908, as reported by E. W. Parker.

The total production, all short tons, was 415,842,698, valued at $532,314,117; of which 83,268,754 was Pennsylvania anthracite, spot value $158,178,849, and 332,573,944 bituminous and lignite, value $374,135,268.

In 1907, the highest record attained, the total was 480,363,424, valued at $614,798,898; of which 85,604,312, valued at $163,584,056, was Pennsylvania anthracite; 394,759,112, valued at $451,214,842, bituminous and lignite. The decrease in 1908, due to industrial conditions, was 64,520,726, or 13.42 per cent. in quantity, and $82,484,781 or 13.2 per cent. in value.

In 1850 coal production in the United States was 6,445,681 short tons; the population was 23,191,876; per capita consumption 0.278 short tons. In 1908 the per capita consumption was 3.52 short tons, despite the great increase in the use of oil, natural gas and various by-products as fuel, and the fact that while wood-burning is less in proportion to population than in 1850, it is actually as great.

No anthracite is credited to any State but Pennsylvania. Of the bituminous and lignite coal only 24,500,287 short tons were produced in the Pacific and Rocky Mountain States and Territories in 1908, as against 27,417,839 in 1907, a decline of 2,916,552. The value of this in 1907 was $43,580,133, in 1908 $39,284,053, a decline of $4,296,080. This amount was divided as follows:

States—	—Quantity.— —Short tons—		—Values—
California and Alaska	24,089	21,862	91,813	69,450
Colorado	10,790,236	9,634,973	15,079,449	13,586,988
Idaho	*7,188	5,429	31,119	21,832
Montana	2,016,857	1,920,190	2,907,082	2,771,248
New Mexico	2,628,959	2,467,937	3,832,128	3,368,753

Wyoming	6,252,990	5,489,902	9,732,668	8,868,157

*Production of Nevada and Nebraska included.

Between the Rocky Mountains and the Mississippi coal was produced in 1908 as follows: Arkansas, 2,078,357 short tons, value $3,499,470; Iowa, 7,161,310, value $11,706,402; Kansas, 6,245,508, value $9,292,222; Missouri, 3,317,315, value $5,444,907; North Dakota, 320,742, value $522,116; Oklahoma, 2,948,116, value $5,976,504; Texas, 1,895,377, value $3,419,481; total, 23,966,725 short tons, valued at $39,861,102. The balance was in the Middle West, on the Atlantic Coast and South.

In addition to anthracite production larger than the bituminous output of any two States combined, except West Virginia and Illinois, Pennsylvania is credited with 117,179,527 short tons, valued at $118,816,303 in 1908. Illinois is second with 47,659,690, valued at $49,978,247, far less than half; West Virginia is third, with 41,897,843, valued at $40,009,054.

ARCHITECTS AND BUILDERS.

Among the new building enterprises reported by the Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer, are the following:

A. F. Rosenheim has completed plans for a three-story, sixteen-room residence in Westchester Place, for John Howze. The building will be 75x75 feet and figures will be taken on all frame construction and on brick veneer first story, with frame and plastered second story. It will have a slate roof and tile floored open terraces. The interior trim will be in mahogany quarter-sawed oak, and white enamel.

Mayberry & Parker have been commissioned to prepare plans for a two-story and basement reinforced concrete store and office building at Yuma, Ariz., for Paul Moretti and Charles de Corse.

Homer W. Glidden has prepared plans for a two-story, eight-room rustic forest residence, which will be built on Puget Sound, Wash., by Dr. Milbank Johnson of Los Angeles.

A number of building enterprises are already in evidence for Wilmington, among them being a bank building planned by Dennis & Farwell for Third and Canal streets, and a two-story mercantile building for another corner of Third and Canal to be erected by the Banning Company. The plans for the latter structure are being prepared by C. H. Brown. A hotel is also being planned for the business district, and the Banning Company will start building large brick warehouses on Terminal Island in about four months.

Morgan & Walls are preparing plans for a $150,000 theater building to be erected on Broadway between Fifth and Sixth streets, which is not yet ready for further announcement. They have also prepared plans for $10,000 alterations to be made in the lobby and café of the Van Nuys Hotel.

A. J. Borgmeyer is drawing plans for a two-story, eight-room residence to be built for C. G. Anders on Wilton Place near Fourth. It will have concrete foundations, blue brick porch, mantel and chimney, oak floors and will cost about $5000.

NEW COLD STORAGE PLANT IN LOS ANGELES

Now Being Erected, Is of Immense Size and Most Modern in the World.

[Watsonville Pajaronian:] There is now being erected in Los Angeles by the National Ice and Cold Storage Company one of the largest and most modernly equipped cold-storage plants in the world, and it will be finished in plenty of time to accommodate the apple shippers of Pajaro Valley. The manager of the company, Joseph Martin, recently returned from a trip around the world, and while on this tour he made it his business to visit all the principal cold-storage plants in the East and Europe. He took many notes of the various strong points in each place visited, which he has incorporated in the buildings now being erected in Los Angeles.

The structure will be five stories high; of reinforced concrete, steel and brick; equipped with an automatic sprinkling service, making the building absolutely fireproof. It contains 750,000 cubic feet and will hold 250,000 boxes of apples. The building will be ready for the storage of apples late this fall.

Last season most all of our Newtowns and White Pearmains went bad in Los Angeles cold-storage plants, for some unexplainable cause, while keeping in good shape in ice houses in other sections of the country. In the new plant being erected by the National company there will be no likelihood of such bad result to the fruit.

President Martin, who was formerly in the employ of Armour & Co. (having charge of that company's green fruit and cold-storage department,) is one of the oldest hands at the cold-storage business in the West. The company has also a fine cold-storage plant in San Francisco, which is giving excellent satisfaction, but the new Los Angeles plant will greatly excel it, and be only equaled by the great plants in Omaha.

The company proposes to give patrons from this section better service and lower rates than they have ever enjoyed before.—[Adv.

EWS OF THE WEEK IN REAL ESTATE CIRCLES.

Comparative Activity in Lot and Residence Properties Continues Through Third Week in August. The Percentage Buying for Homes is a Large One.

Sales of city and suburban real es- e were quite numerous last week, nsidering the season, and the tone the comment handed in with the ports given to The Times is one of timism. PALATIAL BEACH HOTEL.

Structures to Cost Nearly Million and Embody Best in California Mission Architecture.

In the Parsell aparments, the construction of which is assured by the developments of the last few days, Long Beach will boast one of the most magnificent apartment hotels on the Pacific Coast. The cost of the building will be $550,000. The added cost of site, furnishings and elaborate landscaping will bring the total outlay to approximately $900,000. Construction will be begun about December 1.

The hotel is to be located on East Ocean avenue, between Locust avenue and Collins Place, on the site now occupied by the Long Beach skating rink, and will occupy a ground area of 233 feet by 200 feet. A strip of public land 112 feet wide, between the north front of the hotel and Ocean avenue, will, by permission of the city, be beautifully parked by the owners of the property.

The hotel is to be of reinforced concrete, Class A construction. The height will be six stories. In form the structure will resemble a letter E. The patio front will face the ocean. The first floor will be divided into twenty-six arcade storerooms, together with numerous rest rooms, and about 200 dressing rooms for men and women bathers. The patio itself will be 141 feet wide, exceeding the width of the patio of the Grant Hotel in San Diego by forty-one feet. The living-rooms will be 12x19 feet and 14x18 feet. All kitchens will be 8x10 feet. The lobby will be 165 feet in length by 46 feet in width, and finished in elegant mission style. The entrance will be ornately finished in marble. All the interior trimmings will be metal and hardwood. Four elevators will be installed.

In style the huge structure will be an imposing adaptation of the best in California mission architecture. The roof will be of red tile. Domes, arches, windows and facades will follow pleasing lines in keeping with the massive effect of the building. A. S. Munson of Naples, the designer of the new Union League Club, is the architect. F. L. Spaulding is the contractor.

The hotel will be erected by a corporation, to be known as the Parsell Construction Company, organized under the laws of the State of California, with a capital of $600,000. It will issue $500,000 worth of 6 per cent. twenty-year first mortgage bonds. The Title Insurance and Trust Company will act as trustee for the bondholders. The corporation is headed by J. M. Parsell, a leading stockholder in the Seaside Investment Company, owner of the Hotel Virginia.

The architect's perspective, reproduced on this page, shows the Ocean avenue frontage of the huge hostelry. In Wednesday's Times was published the elevation of the beach or patio frontage.

WEST END BUILDING.

Four of the Recently Built Houses in Rapidly Growing Section Toward Sea.

Continued building activity to the western edge of the city is completely transforming the appearance of that huge section. The class of houses being erected is a pleasing feature of the growth toward the sea in that direction. The four dwellings reproduced in the real estate section today are but samples of this commendable construction activity. They are neither the best of the houses being built, nor the most unpretentious, but may fairly be taken as types.

The two dwellings designed and built by Frank E. Hartigan on Kingsley Drive, south of Wilshire boulevard, each represent an expenditure of $8000. Each is on a lot 50 feet by 135 feet. The interiors are of mission type, with beamed ceilings, oak floors, cut-stone mantels, and hand-rubbed finish. The second stories are finished in white enamel. Stone porches, porte cocheres and pergolas are features of the exterior treatment. Both houses have been sold through the Edwards & Wildey Company; the one at No. 666 Kingsley Drive to W. W. Carruthers, and the one at No. 670 Kingsley Drive to Mrs. May Alice Conlon.

The house just completed for Ella B. Squire at No. 405 Occidental boulevard cost about $7500. The dwelling, which is 59x60 feet, stands on a lot 70x138 feet in size. It is two stories and of frame construction. The porch is of blue brick and concrete, and 50x10 feet. The floors are of hardwood throughout, and the woodwork is slash grain. The living-room, reception hall and dining-room are large and elegantly finished.

The beautiful house just finished at No. 1240 Norton avenue for William McAndree was designed by Frederick Noonan. It is a nine-room frame dwelling. The interior finish is in oak and white enamel, and every modern convenience has been installed. The lot occupied is 60x215 feet. A garage in keeping with the house has also been built.

BUILDS WINTER HOME.

Handsome Residence for Commanding Site in Exclusive Section of Pasadena.

J. Hoyt Smith of Milwaukee will immediately start the erection of a handsome residence on the southwest corner of Orange Grove and Lester avenues, in the Westmoreland tract of Pasadena. The house, which will cost approximately $30,000, will stand on a lot 150 feet on Westmoreland Drive, 380 feet on Lester avenue and 173 feet on Scott Place, and the site will command a magnificent view of Arroyo Seco and the mountains. CHICAGO TEAM WINS HONORS.

Olympic Club Second and New York Third.

Ralph Rose Adds a Foot to Shot-Put Record.

May and Horner Are Stars for the Visitors.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The invitation track and field meet held at the Stadium in Golden Gate Park this afternoon under the auspices of the Olympic Club, in which the representatives from the New York Athletic Club, Chicago Athletic Association, the Winged "O" organization, and several individual entries competed, was won by the Chicago team with a total of 53 points.

Victory in the sprints with May the spectacular performer, and the all-around work of Joe Horner in the field events, was largely responsible for the total number of points scored by the Middle West athletes over the New York and San Francisco competitors.

Although Ralph Rose, the holder of the world's record in the shot-put and winner of twenty-one points at the national championships a week ago, succeeded in adding another foot to his previous mark, the big fellow was not at his best in the discus and javelin. Horner of the Cherry Circle team got away with both of these events with results that are highly creditable in the athletic world.

Joe Ballard of Boston, the interscholastic world's record holder in the mile and two-mile runs, shared the honors on the track with May of Chicago, former intercollegiate conference champion. Ballard won the mile run from Craig and Noble, as was the case in the A.A.U. championship, and displayed a sprint seldom witnessed at the end of a long run when he passed McLean and Bellars in the finish of the three-mile run.

Ollie Snedigar of the Olympic Club, although unplaced in the hundred-yard dash, proved a formidable opponent for Horner in the field events. Snedigar won the broad jump with a leap of 22ft. 8½in., equaled the American record with the javelin, and was second in the hop-step and jump, a total of eleven points. Horner scored thirteen points.

In one of the most sensational finishes witnessed on the stadium track, John O. Miller turned the tables on Harry Gissing of the New York Athletic Club, when he breasted the tape ahead of the easterner in 2:02 2-5, with Ramey of Chicago third. All three ran slower than at Seattle, due to the stiff wind on the back stretch, and an evident desire to allow the race to be settled in the last quarter. Miller was in grand form and would have been hard to pass under any conditions.

Lindberg of Chicago, American champion, and McEntee of New York, ran away from Andrew Glarner in the quarter-mile in 0:51 4-5. McEntee gave the winner a merry chase for a greater part of the distance, but faded away as they approached the tape.

The Chicago trio, Waller, Shaw and May, fairly flew over the ground in their events. May was timed in ten seconds in the hundred-yard dash and 0:21 4-5 in the 220-yard dash.

The finish of the hundred was very close and in view of May's conference record of 9 4-5 seconds on two occasions, his showing yesterday was consistent with his past performances.

Waller won the low hurdles from his team-mate, Shaw, in 24 4-5 seconds, the latter clearing the high hurdles in 15 3-5 seconds.

Jim Mitchell of the New York Athletic Club, many times American, English and Irish champion, won the 56-pound weight from Rose and Plaw with a pitch of 31 feet 9¼ inches.

Over six feet was cleared in the high jump by Dave Martin, the local jumper. Martin won from Miller of Chicago and Leahy, both of whom he deaefted at Seattle.

TERRIBLE DEATH TOLL.

THREE KILLED ON SPEEDWAY AND ANOTHER FATALLY HURT.

Total of Six Die and Half Dozen or More Are Badly Injured at Indianapolis—National Crashes Through Fence, Leaving Death Trail—Big Race Called Off—More Records Fall.

INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two spectators met instant death, another was fatally injured, and the mechanician of a National racing car, that tore its way to destruction, died, as the result of a crash which occurred when a tire burst during the two-hundredth mile of the feature race at 300 miles for the speedway trophy, today, on the motor speedway.

The dead are:

HOMER JOLLIF, 28, of Trafalgar, Ind.

FRANK KELLUM, mechanician.

An unidentified man.

Injured:

Henry H. Tapking, Indianapolis, compound fracture and broken skull and nose. Probably fatally hurt.

The mechanician, Claude Kellum, when taken to the Emergency Hospital, died in a short time.

Charlie Merz, the Indianapolis boy driving the car, escaped by stroke of fate, but Kellum was driven with frightful velocity against the fence bordering the course and was near death when the ambulance reached him.

The National car, in fourth place in the contest, was running at terrific speed on the back stretch a mile from the main grand stand and in full view of 5000 spectators who thronged its bleacher seats, when the right front tire exploded. A crash followed and the big machine battered its way against the fence, striking and instantly killing Logan and Jolleffe.

The bodies of the victims were horribly mutilated, death in each instance being due to fractured skulls and gaping wounds in the body.

Henry H. Tapking, also of this city, sustained injuries that will probably result fatally. Patrolman Merz of the Indianapolis force was prostrated with grief when told that his son had driven the machine which killed the spectators.

APPALLING COUNT.

The death roll of the new speedway now numbers five, Driver William Borque and Mechanician Holcomb having been killed Wednesday and Clifford Littorall dying the same day from an automobile accident which occurred while he was on his way to the track for practice. If the others die, there will be a total of seven dead.

Despite the fatalities, the officials insisted on pushing the race to its completion, but another smashup on the back course, in which the racing crew escaped without serious injury, ended the contest.

Starter Wagner, acting under orders from high officials of the American Automobile Association, compelled the speed fiends to quit the track at 5:30 o'clock. At that time the Jackson, driven by Lynch, led by a close margin, having traveled 240 miles; the Fiat, with Ralph De Palma at the wheel, was second, five miles behind Lynch; and the Marmon, with Stillman driving, was third.

The accident that hastened the end of the death-dealing grind occurred during the two hundred and thirty-eighth mile, when Stillman, handling a Marmon, the third car in the race, skidded and crashed into a fence at the one-and-one-half-mile pole, not far from the scene of the previous casualty. Stillman's car was going like a tornado when he straightened out for the back stretch. His hands slipped from the steering wheel and the machine careened around like a pin wheel, jamming into the fence.

Another ambulance call followed, but surgeons after examining Stillman and his mechanic pronounced both out of danger. Stillman sustained slight injuries to his neck, and it is thought his spine was injured.

Long after the contest was stopped thousands of morbid spectators lingered about the track. In addition to the death toll since the course was opened for trial spins, last Saturday, six have been injured and a number of drivers may lose their eyesight as the result of the terrific heat, dust and strains in the long-distance races.

Brilliant generalship of Herbert Lytle during the heat of the 300-mile Speedway trophy event averted a fatality that might have cost two more lives. Only a miracle spared Lytle and his assistant, Joe Bates, when the tie rod on the Apperson broke while the car was crashing over the speedway and into the first turn at the rate of seventy-eight miles an hour.

It was on the fifty-eighth lap of the contest when Lytle, clinging to second place amidst a field of nineteen cars, discovered to his horror that the steering apparatus was twisted. He was heading for the curve at a hair-raising clip, closely pursued by Burman in a Buick, while a fleet of other time-destroyers were rushing on through the dust, the drivers unmindful of Lytle's plight.

WEEK'S TRAGEDIES OF THE SPEEDWAY.

Six killed.

One fatally hurt.

Six badly injured.

Half dozen drivers with defective eyesight.

Dozen cars more or less badly wrecked.

Several world's records broken at cost of terrible toll.

DAYS' ACCIDENTS.

National car, driven by Merz, crashed through the fence on the south turn, killed three persons and fatally injured another.

Marmon car smashed through and Driver Stillson was severely cut on face and neck.

The Apperson, with Lyttle driving, ran off the course on the south turn and was badly damaged.

Buick car, with Burman at the wheel, cracked a cylinder head.

National, piloted by Atkinson, broke a cylinder.

HURLED FROM SEAT.

The "Jackrabbit" driver, with only one alternative, jammed in the clutch and checked the speed of the red devil, while it swept up the bank and then spun back down the slope, missing Burman by a fraction of a second. On against the soft embankment rushed the car, and in the collision with the barrier the mechanic was hurled from his seat a distance of thirty-five feet into the field along the course. Lytle stuck to his wheel, and escaped injury. His assistant suffered minor injuries. The car was forced from the contest.

Slim fields faced the starter in all save the main event, although the course was faster than on either of the preceding days. Four cars lined up for the fifteen-mile free-for-all handicap, which went to Kincaid, driving a National from the one-minute mark. The winner clocked the route in 13m. 23 5-10s, barely defeating Ralph de Palma in the Fiat, running from scratch. Dewitt sent the Buick into third place from a lead of 2m. 15s.

Barney Oldfield, in the German Benz, flew away from his rivals in the trials for the one-kilometer record, hanging up a track mark of 0:26 2-10. This pace, equivalent to eighty-six miles an hour, proved the speed of the course.

Walter Christie's front drive freak, Cyclone, snorted over the kilometer route in 0:28 7-10, while Len Zengle, in the big Chadwick, marked 0:29 9-10.

Eddie Hearne, driving his Fiat, in one of the most spectacular races of the day, took the ten-mile amateur championship in 9:44 3-10.

Greiner, in his red Thomas, led on the first four miles, until sidetracked by mechanical troubles. Though last to get away, Hearne once in motion put the Italian monster to some terrific speed, passing Ryall, in a Buick, on the last lap.

OLDFIELD'S LUCK.

Bunches of easy coin fell into Barney Oldfield's clutches when the great pilot hurled his Benz to victory in the twenty-five mile free-for-all, for the Remy Grand Brossard. By winning this, Barney comes into the possession of $75 during every week that he defends the trophy awarded by the magneto company. The Benz made a runaway of the contest, going the quarter century in 21:21 7-10, with De Palma's Fiat second, and the Chadwick third. Oldfield put crimps in several other records as follows:

Five miles, 4:11 3-10.
Ten miles, 8:15 9-10.
Fifteen miles, 12:32 4-10.
Twenty miles, 16:53 8-10.
Twenty-five miles, 21:21 7-10.

The immense speedway was thronged with more than 25,000 spectators when the main event of the meet, the 300-mile race for the Wheeler and Schebler trophy was set in motion at 1:30. Eighteen of the speediest cars in America faced the officials which Charles A. Durfee believes will be a grand circuit star some day. Her successes have been achieved at Salinas and other points of the California circuit.

Zulu Belle, Winner of the California Futurity and Princess of Western Turf,

CLOSING DAY.

BIG PACE WON BY MOORTRIX.

Cora Takes First Two Heats, But Weakens.

Judges Become Mixed Up in Rendering Decision.

California Circuit Races at Woodland End.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WOODLAND, Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Yolo county fair and race meet came to a close this afternoon and marked one of the greatest successes ever achieved by a driving club in this part of the c[illegible].

The 2:13 class pace race, [illegible] proved to be the feature event, and was very bitterly contested between Moortrix, Cora and Joe McGregor. As the horses finished, it was easily seen that Chadbourne beat Ward to the wire by a head for second place, but the judges announced Ward second and Chadbourne third, and would not change it.

This brought the drivers to the stand, and bitter words followed. Had the judges been attending to business this affair could have been avoided. The first two heats of the 2:13 pace were very close, Cora, Moortrix and Joe McGregor finishing close together, with Cora in the winning position.

The next three heats were taken by Moortrix, with not much of an effort. Cora and Joe McGregor made numerous attempts to carry Moortrix in the last three heats, but the fast son of Azmore was too much for them.

The last race of the day and meet was the 2:14 trot, and was won by Scotch John, after a struggle. The first two heats Scotch John went into the lead and won easily. The next heat, Silver Hunter took him to the half so fast that he broke and finished fourth, Kinney Rose beating Silver Hunter to the wire in a drive. The third heat, Scotch John went into the lead and was never headed.

INTO THE BLUE.

RUESS CLIMBS BALDY TRAIL.

Pope-Hartford Makes Fast Run to Fenner Mine.

Seyfried in White Steamer Also Tops Grade.

Hanshue and the Apperson Take to Level Going.

"Wild Bill" Rues is confident that he can win this year's Baldy race. He claims to have driven to the mine in his Pope-Hartford in 3h. 20m. This is 18m. better than the record of 3h. 38m. made last year by Harmon D. Ryus in the White.

Frank Siefer accompanied Ruess on the run. He is one of the crack road drivers of Southern California. Siefert recently captured the Santa Barbara record in the Stoddard-Dayton. He made the ride with Ruess on Wednesday in order to study the Baldy course.

Several times this year Ruess has made the run over parts of the road. His drive of Wednesday to the tunnel is the first time he has driven to the top of the hill this year. "Bill" says he can make the run in 3h. 8m. He expects to turn the trick September 19, when the big race is to be pulled off.

Though the road was entirely unknown to him, Ruess took the upper mountain trail at high speed. As the car roared its way around the last turn Ruess found himself swinging into one of the most dangerous curves of the entire grade. He stopped on the brink of a precipice 2000 feet above the San Gabriel Valley.

At 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon Ruess pulled away for the run to Baldy. He drove at moderate speed until the city limits were passed; then the Pope-Hartford was let out and "Wild Bill" drove. After a fast dash over the Newhall grade Ruess flew through the town of Newhall on his run to the mine.

After a particularly swift dash through the Soledad Cañon, Ruess ran into Ravenna in quick time and made the run to Acton swiftly. He says he drove from Ravenna to Acton, a distance of about five miles, in five minutes. Between Acton and Palmdale the Pope-Hartford scorched over the sandy soil.

Railroad men timed the Pope at each station and on good authority it is asserted that Ruess made the fastest time ever negotiated beween several of he stations.

Swinging around th corner to Shoemaker's ranch, "Bill" made the turn at forty miles an hour and the machine showed a speed of thirty-three miles an hour on the approach to the long ten-mile climb to the mine.

From Old Point Comfort to the end of the road the speed varied from twenty-five to eighteen miles an hour. On the bad stretches the car was slowed down, but Ruess made a fast climb up the grade.

According to Ruess the people along the route are taking a keen interest in the race. He says the ranchers are watching each car as it makes the run and are more interested than ever.

Gus Seyfried, who last year drove "Whistling Billy," the White steamer which turned turtle at Ascot Park, sent the White steamer up the hill during the week. Seyfried lost several tires on the run and his time was cut down. It is claimed his running time was 3h. 7m. The White this year is particularly fast.

F. C. Fenner has decided to enter a White. He may do so independently of the White company or may make some arrangement with them to enter the race. Fenner says a White will start. The car he will send has arrived from the factory. It is a stock car which will be fixed up for the run.

Because of the nerve he has exhibited many times, Fenner chose Seyfried to handle the White on the Baldy run. Seyfried will remain in Los Angeles until the race and will drive over the road several times.

Before the race the road will be put into as good shape as possible by Fenner. It will be better than it was last year and the record for the climb should be broken as Seyfried, Ruess and Hanshue will drive at top speed.

There are places on the Baldy grade which are more perilous than on any other road in the West. The trail narrows down to a mere path, but the racing autos will take it at high speed.

The Baldy race course is the most dangerous in the world. It is one of the hardest grades to climb over which an automobile is sent.

The Baldy race has been won three times by the White steamer. There are many who believe that Harris Hanshue in the Apperson "Jackrabbit" will win this year. Hanshue will drive the same car that won the Santa Monica road race. He is now in Santa Barbara with the machine testing it over the roads.

CAREFUL DRIVING NECESSARY.

Autoist Should Always Regard Comfort and Personal Safety of Pedestrian.

In the eyes of the average pedestrian, the automobile is like a runaway locomotive, off the track and tearing about through the dries and boulevards of the city. This conception is not far wrong when an automobile is driven by those who cannot resist the temptation to speed over good roads, those who are careless and those who are reckless.

Apparently there is little danger in running an automobile at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour on a drive in which there is no one to be seen, but there are few places in a city where some one may not unexpectedly come onto the driveway either on foot or in some other vehicle, which makes accidents imminent and frequently results in a machine going at a high rate of speed, in endeavoring to avoid a collision, being driven over the curb and colliding with a lamp post, tree or wall. From the seemingly safe condition of the drives, inviting speeding, have resulted some of the most serious and fatal accidents. Therefore, high speeding is dangerous except in places set apart especially for that purpose.

FOR CHARITY'S SAKE.

The Quaker City Motor Club of Philadelphia expects to raise a large amount for charity through the running of the Fairmount Park race on October 7. Patronesses will be stationed at the grand stands, parking spaces, entrance gates to the park, bridges, and all points of vantage, where they will solicit silver from those who witness the race.

THEIR DAY.

AUTO WOMEN HAVE INNINGS.

EARLE C. ANTHONY DESCRIBES SHOWROOM SCENES.

Manager of Western Motor Car Company Says Women Form Large Per Cent. of Buying Public and Must Be Considered by Up-to-Date Salesmen—Color Counts.

That it takes special fitness for the business of selling motor cars, and that an automobile man is evolved though a slow process, is the statement of Earle C. Anthony, manager of the Western Motor Car Company, who is just commencing the most active sales campaign which his concern has ever undertaken. According to Anthony the industry is to become more strenuous every day, and it is to be a survival of the fittest among the salesmen in all lines.

"Selling automobiles," says Anthony, "is a strange line of work. The man who can successfully sell a Chalmers-Detroit or a Hudson may not have the same success with a Packard. Every salesman must realize that he is selling to a wise public—to people who know motor cars.

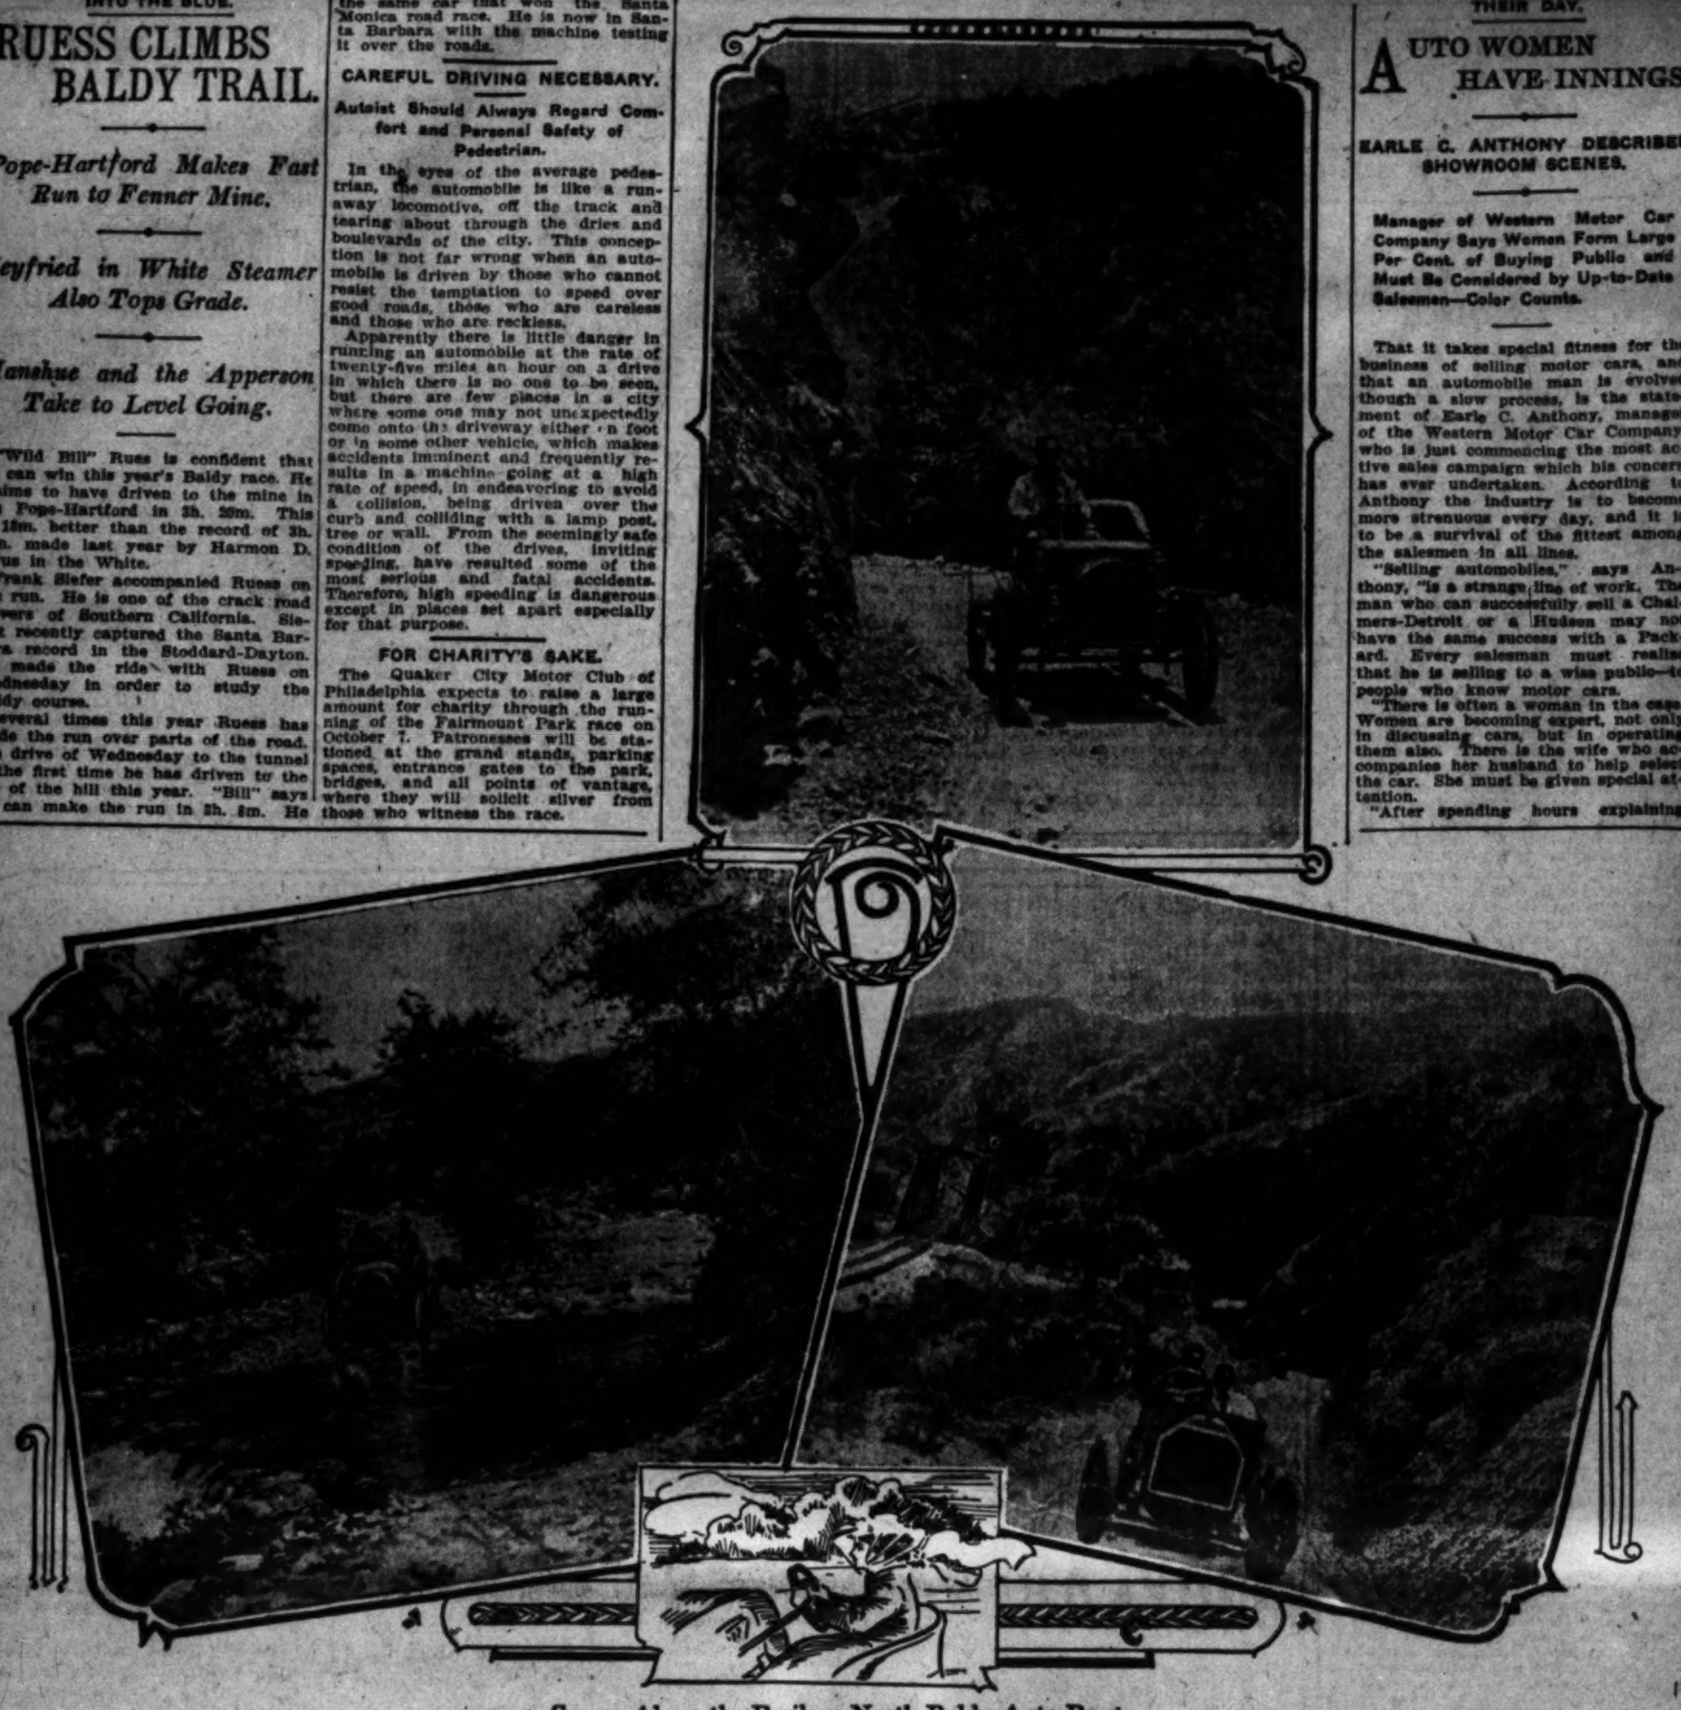
"There is often a woman in the case. Women are becoming expert, not only in discussing cars, but in operating them also. There is the wife who accompanies her husband to help select the car. She must be given special attention.

"After spending hours explaining the points of the machine, and when the salesman is just about to close the deal, the wife may upset all plans and possibly queer the deal.

"One enthusiastic little woman purchased a car because she was particularaly pleased with the seats. She paid no attention to other excellent features of the machine. It was the seats she liked.

"There are women who select automobiles merely with regard to color. The finish of the car attracts them. Perhaps a machine matches the gown they are going to wear. This is a strong point in the car's favor.

"There are at least twice as many women in the showrooms this year as last. They are taking a keener interest in motor cars. They must be considered, as the majority have a technical knowledge of the several makes of machines. It is the women's day, and they will have their way."



Scenes Along the Perilous North Baldy Auto Route.

Above is the sharp rise leading to the Fenner mine, the goal; on the right are the sharp curves in the Soledad canyon, where fast running is dangerous; on the left is the ford near Shoemaker's ranch, through which Ryus and the White tore at almost sixty miles an hour, last year.

ADDED IMPROVEMENT.

BRIDGE AND FINE AUTO ROAD TO PLACE BAY CITY ON MAP.

An automobile bridge from Naples to Bay City will put that little seaside resort on the map as far as the autoist is concerned. The bridge will span the tidewater channel which now cuts off Bay City from communication with the mainland by way of the automobile road to Naples. It will make Bay City nearly ten miles closer to Los Angeles.

The contract for the bridge has been awarded to J. D. Mercereau, and bids have also been advertised for the trestle road which is to complete the highway into Bay City. This will be an automobile highway that should make the run to the sea by way of Naples one of the most pleasant near-city tours.

Residents in the vicinity of Alamitos Bay are looking forward to the proposed improvement with the keenest pleasure, as it will mean much for them in the way of good roads. Bay City is their terminal point. At present they are cut off from direct communication by the long arm of the inland bayou which separates Naples and Bay City.

Oiled roads lined with palms will form the part of the boulevard which leads directly into Bay City. The boulevard will simply be a continuation of these roads, which are already excellent for motoring.

Over a wide turnpike, which has been surfaced with clay, the motorist can ride to Naples in a short time. The extra mile of bridge and good road will prove a boon, as it will take the auto owner into good fishing and hunting ground.

Anaheim Landing, less than half a mile from Bay City affords excellent hunting and fishing at almost any time in the year. There are many beauty spots which can be visited now only by interurban car. With the proposed new road these beach resorts will be opened for all who care to make the drive.

Residents of Bay City are arranging for an automobile day to celebrate the completion of the new bridge and highway. This will come after Bay City has been properly placed on the map, and the motorists will be invited to the little city for a day of entertainment.

VENICE AUTOMOBILE DAY.

City by the Sea Will Entertain Motorists Sunday—Special Prizes Are Offered.

Preparations for the Venice Automobile Day are almost complete. Motorists will be welcomed Sunday with a programme that will be of special interest to drivers and owners of motor cars. Officials of Venice are anxious to make a good showing and everything possible to make the day a success will be done.

There is great interest among the local autoists, and many cars will be driven to the beach on Sunday. One week from today the Venice City Fathers will be the hosts, and the motorists are to be entertained royally.

Careful tab will be taken on the number of cars which make the trip. Every machine which enters the main street of Venice will be tagged. The cars will be parked on the pavement and along the wharf approach to the Ship Hotel.

In the afternoon prizes will be awarded for the best-decorated machines, for the best lady driver, for the handsomest motoring costume, and for the best equipped car.

The ten girls turning in the largest amount of money will be taken on a trip to Niagara Falls, with all the expense paid by the race management.

POPE-HARTFORD AT SEATTLE.

Connecticut Man Reaches the North After Long Drive—Crosses Heavy Grades on the Fly.

G. D. Morse, the Connecticut man, who drove a Pope-Hartford across the country, has completed his run up the Coast to Seattle and after seeing the exposition will start back home.

This will undoubtedly take rank as the longest single tour of the year. Morse, with his wife and family, has bucked mountains, swollen rivers, the worst of desert roads and despite his tales of hardship in forcing a way through an almost impassable country, he will make the return trip in the car which brought him from the Atlantic to the Pacific and then from the southern to the northern boundary of the United States.

Morse is a rather thin man and caused general surprise that he could bring the car over such a long journey. He passed several days in Los Angeles and the car caused considerable comment. Morse says adventuresome motorists who want something new and lots of fun with a few hardships to add to the variety should tackle the transcontinental run.

STODDARDS ARE HERE.

Handsome Models Have More Power and Are Stylish in Finish—Will Enter Race Stunts.

One of the attractive new cars to arrive last week was the Stoddard-Dayton. This stylish car reached this city Friday morning.

The Stoddards have been given more power than last year's models and have several added features.

The Stoddard-Daytons have been figuring in several of the big races in the East. They are among the fastest cars in this country. Frank Siefert, in a small Stoddard, took second place in the small car race at Santa Monica. The Stoddard-Dayton Motor Car Company will enter the machines in stunts hereabouts.

The new model is of the thirty-horse-power type and is attractive in design and finish. The motor is of the regular valve in the head, Stoddard type, and is 3⅞in.x4½in.

The new cars are of the roadster type with the single rumble seat. They have three-quarter elliptic springs and are unusually easy riding. They are larger than the small Stoddards of last year and in finish and construction, are an exact duplicate of the larger models, except in size.

The touring car of this type and the touring car and roadster of the fifty-horse-power model will arrive in September.

FRANKLINS ON OWENS RIVER.

Air-Cooled Fours and Sixes Equipped With Wide Tread for Rough and Sandy Roads.

The four and six-cylinder Franklins which are being used in the Owens River aqueduct work have been equipped with a sixty-inch tread instead of the standard fifty-six. This change was made necessary on account of the width of the desert roads which have been cut out by wagons of the sixty-inch tread. The fifty-six was too narrow to fit down into the ruts and as a result tires were badly worn on the sides. The four-cylinder car was changed over some time ago and the six was driven in last week by Charlie Bente, who is handling the car.

These cars are doing a great service in the aqueduct work, covering hundreds of miles over almost impassable roads. They make on an average of one trip a week between Los Angeles and the Owens River and meanwhile go from camp to camp carrying the engineers and officials who are superintending the big work.

These cars are proving valuable for desert work as there is never any fear of running out of water. There are no radiators to spring a leak on a barren desert or pumps to go bad and leave a car stranded.

NEW NUMBER PLATE.

A British inventor has brought out a stencilled number plate in which the numerals and State or country initials are cut out, leaving openings that are too large to be filled up by dust. Experiments are said to have proved that the number on the new plate remains clear when the number on the ordinary plate is almost entirely hidden by dust.

MOTOR PARTIES.

Week-end motor parties are very fashionable in England, it is said. The plan is to charge $36 for each guest who receives in return an automobile ride to points of interest, and then board and lodgings at the residence of the giver of the party. The plan is said to have proved very profitable for women who possess homes in places where the surroundings are pleasant and the scenery is picturesque.

ANOTHER SCHEME.

MOTOR TRAINS ON STEEL RAILS.

STONE CANYON BROUGHT NEARER TO CIVILIZATION.

Isolated Mining Town Is Reached by Automobile Service—First Plan of the Kind Ever Worked in This Country—Cars to Be Run on Schedule Time.

Six wheels, with cast iron rims, have been rigged to a six-cylinder Premier automobile, which will be used on a railroad track for carrying passengers from Chanslor to Stone Cañon. The motor car should make sixty miles an hour over the smooth rails. It is the first time that a motor train service, running over a rail track, has ever been planned. The novel scheme was designed by Waller Chanslor of the firm of Chanslor & Lyon of this city.

The two towns are situated in Central California. Chanslor is about ten miles from Paso Robles. Stone Cañon is twenty-two miles beyond. It is cut off from railroad communication and no stage. The motor car will come to the aid of its citizens.

Over a bed which has been carefully prepared the six-cylinder car will make regular trips from town to town. Seven passengers can be carried at a trip. This service will place Stone Cañon on the map and its citizens in communication with the outside world by other means than the laboring burro.

When the stage line was proposed by Chanslor, who has large holdings in the town, the residents there enthused over the proposition and a right of way, twenty-two miles long, was speedily granted. Spur tracks will be put in and a freight service will be maintained shortly.

There are coal mines at Stone Cañon. The freight line will be used to bring the coal to the railroad. The little town is growing and this auto line is a boon to the people there

The track is the largest of the kind in this country. There is a dirt track in Merced county on which autos are driven, but this innovation of a motor car on steel rails is the latest in the line of transportation.

Long stretches of deep sand intervene between the two towns. It takes many hours to make the trip by wagon. The motor car will make the journey in an hour or even less.

This means that Stone Cañon people are brought about twelve hours a day closer to civilization by the motor car train service.

The car was rebuilt here by William Mountain at the Mountain Bros. garage.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

C. E. Bireley of the Bireley & Young Company is in the East visiting the Columbia factory. He will be absent about three weeks.

Don Lee of the Lee Motor Car Company is placing his agents throughout Southern California, preparing for the new automobile season.

Robert Maxwell of the Morgan & Wright Rubber Company is spending a few weeks in Los Angeles. He is accompanied by his wife.

Leon T. Shettler passed a portion of the week at Wheeler Springs. He drove there in the Kisselkar "Tabasco II," and had no trouble topping the steep grades.

Richard Collins passed the past week in the mountains back of Old Baldy hunting deer. He drove his Pope-Hartford into the hills to the nearest point on the trail.

H. K. Bradley of Pasadena will start for Seattle this week in his six-cylinder Franklin. He will follow the coast road to San Francisco, and then follow the regular highway out of San Francisco, through the northern part of the State and into Oregon to Portland. The road is mountainous beyond the Golden Gate city, but Bradley contemplates no difficulty, as C. Braly made the trip recently in a small four-cylinder Franklin.

Franklin cars were delivered last week to Charles Ladow, A. G. Hutchins, George Stoll and Dr. Freeman of Fullerton. Stoll secured a six-cylinder Franklin touring car, and will do considerable traveling this summer.

Norman Church of the Stoddard-Dayton Company is attending the races on the Indianapolis speedway. The Stoddard agents from all parts of the country are holding a convention there.

The first 1910 Pope-Hartford will be here and ready for demonstrating this week.

F. C. Fenner of the White Garage is at Shoemaker's Camp with Mrs. Fenner and family. They will remain several weeks.

Mrs. Rene A. Brassey, who has been ill for several weeks, is rapidly recovering.

ELLIPTIC MOTORDROME.

According to the plan prepared for the proposal motordrome at Atlantic City, N. J., the track itself is to be an elliptical one, two miles in length, while the infield is to be prepared for Olympian games, horse shows, football games, etc. It is said $800,000 will be spent in filling in the ground and almost $150,000 in making the track.

Lay in a Big Supply of

GOODYEAR

Over-Size Tires Before the Price Goes Up.

Another advance in the price of rubber goods all along the line is expected to occur about September 1. When the last advance occurred, a few weeks ago, the high water mark price for crude rubber was $1.82 a pound. Since that time the price of crude rubber has advanced to $2.10 a pound, and nobody knows where it will stop. The manufacturers of rubber goods have been obliged to protect themselves by raising the price of manufactured articles.

IN THE GOODYEAR TIRE QUALITY IS NEVER SACRIFICED TO CHEAPNESS. The very best, highest price rubber is used, and the Goodyear process, which has placed the Goodyear Tire always in the lead, puts quality before everything else. You can buy a cheaper tire than the Goodyear, but you cannot buy a better one; you cannot buy one that will render such economical, satisfactory service, dollar for dollar of cost.

This claim is easily demonstrable. Prove it to your own satisfaction. It would be mighty poor business policy to urge you to do this if we were not certain as to the outcome. We are out for business and to make friends for our goods and our policy.

The Goodyear Air Bottle, filled with compressed air—not gas—for tires will save your back and your tires. Free air for two years.

The Twitchell Air Gauge measures instantly and accurately the air pressure in your tires. Carried in the vest pocket and applied in one second. Price $1.50. For sale by all dealers.

CHADWICK
Breaks World's Record
In 10 Mile Free for All Indianapolis Aug. 20, 1909.
8 Min. 23.02 Sec.

The newspapers and other publications have at various times during the past year printed so much concerning the numerous victories attained by the CHADWICK stock cars in speed and hill climbing contests that we will only briefly summarize the more important ones, as follows:

At the great Wilkes-Barre, Pa., hill climb, May 30, 1908, up the famous 6000-ft. (about 11-7 miles) course of Giant's Despair Mountain, a CHADWICK SIX stock car (stripped for racing) startled its competitors and all persons familiar with the tortuous winding grade, averaging 13 to 23½ per cent., by simply smothering the steam racing machine record by a margin of 11 seconds, and establishing a new record of 1 minute 38 2-5 seconds.

This same car was immediately sent to Worcester, Mass., where, a week later, it established the gasoline record of 59 seconds for the steep, rough one-mile run up Dead Horse Hill, defeating the hitherto famous 90 H. P. Mercedes "Flying Dutchman;" also previous record of 1 minute 4 seconds made by 120 H. P. Darracq racing machine, as well as a large field of the representative stock and racing machines of the country.

One week after this victory a CHADWICK stock car won the big Cleveland Hill Climb by negotiating the half-mile grade up Porter Mountain in 36 seconds, defeating by a margin of 9 seconds the hitherto formidable hill-climbing competitors right in their home factory city of Cleveland.

On June 26th a CHADWICK stock car surprised the thousands of spectators who lined the one and one-fifth mile course up Skippack Hill, at Norristown, Pa., by averaging 74.2 miles per hour, defeating a large field of stock cars and racing machines by creating a record of 57 3-5 seconds for the steep grade of 1 1-5 miles and exactly 14 1-5 seconds faster than the nearest competitor, thus demonstrating a speed on this grade which few if any stock cars attain on level ground.

At Wildwood, N. J., July 4th, a CHADWICK SIX, driven by its owner, won the Touring Car Championship event. This same car and driver on the previous day won the consistency and endurance trophy on the run from Philadelphia, Pa., to Wildwood, N. J., defeating a very large field comprising practically all well-known makes of cars. Another CHADWICK SIX smashed the course record previously held by the 120 H. P. Thomas Vanderbilt racing machine by running the one-mile course at Wildwood in 43 2-5 seconds.

On Aug. 6, 1908, an owner driving his CHADWICK SIX Touring Car (fully equipped) established a record in the Ohio Valley climb up the Wheeling, W. Va., mountain, beating the time made by steam cars stripped for racing, as well as all gasoline cars entered.

July 5, 1909, CHADWICK Stock Car smashed all records on the Wildwood, N. J., course, defeating Grand Prize 120 H. P. Fiat, also Stanley steam racer's record of a kilometer in 26 seconds, against strong wind; also made record of a mile in 41 seconds.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 6, 1909, CHADWICK Stock Car won Algonquin Hill Climb, shattering all records, including Big Dick Apperson, Big Six Stearns, Thomas and all others.

..Los Angeles, July 10, 1909, came in second in the Santa Monica Road Race.

GOAT HUNT ON SAN CLEMENTE.

Jack Hendrickson and Party Exterminate Herd.

Wild Adventures on Cliffs Above Roaring Sea.

Rocks Crumple Like Powder Under Daring Hunters.

Twelve mountain goats, ranging in size from small kids to 300-pound bearded sires, were bagged by Jack Hendrickson, Jack Johnson, Frank Hopkins and R. M. Yost, Jr., of this city during an outing at San Clemente Island, the first two weeks of this month.

The killing was the largest that has been made for several years and despite the rare sport the hunters enjoyed, they say they would not again risk their lives in scaling the precipitous cliffs of treacherous disintegrated granite even if they were sure of bagging the biggest herd of goats that ever inhabited the islands.

Party of Goat Hunters at San Clemente.
In the party are Jack Johnson, Bobby Yost, Jack Hendrickson, Jr., and Frank Hopkins. Above are two water nymphs of Mr. and Mrs. Hendrickson's party.

The men were in danger of a fearful death as they edged their way along the narrow goat paths that wound their tortuous way on the steep bluffs. What appeared to be solid rock crumbled to powder at their very touch and several times disaster was narrowly averted. Once they slid down an eight-inch trail that instead of leading to a ridge or cañon came to an end in a cave. There was nothing for the daring hunters to do but to turn around and, inch by inch, work back up the trail that in some places was not more than six inches wide. A fall of several hundred feet would have resulted from a misstep.

The hunters were members of a party of fourteen persons who camped at the ranch house near Gallagher's Landing. They left San Pedro August 1 in the yacht Edith and arrived at the island before dark.

On the following day the four men started down to Goat Harbor, near the center of the island, about ten miles from Gallagher's Landing. An unusually heavy sea was encountered, and in attempting a landing the boat was swamped. The men succeeded in keeping their rifles dry, although everything else in the boat went overboard.

From a low ridge near the beach a herd of twelve goats was spotted emerging from a cave on the side of a mountain about 1000 yards distant. The party immediately opened fire and then started to work along the treacherous paths toward the game. The hunters spread out over the mountains and by closing in from all sides on the goats succeeded in bagging seven.

The water was so rough when the men started to return to camp that it was impossible for all of them to occupy the boat. Yost and Johnson started back on foot. They struck a path along a high ridge, but such a gale was blowing that they had to crawl along on their hands and knees for more than a mile. The men in the boat fared even worse. Their hands were bleeding and the craft was half full of water when they finally reached the harbor.

Two days later they returned in quest of the other five goats that they had seen and after adventures no less perilous than they had experienced before, succeeded in getting the full number. Yost says that the herd his party exterminated was the last on the west end of the island.

The other members of the party fished, hunted small game and excavated in the Indian mounds. Several big yellowtail were caught, the women in the party making strikes as large as those made by the men.

A smoked topaz arrowhead and several club heads and wampum articles were among the relics found in the mounds.

The party included the following-named persons and several others: Capt. and Mrs. J. S. Hendrickson, Misses Adele and Lysle Hendrickson, Helen Kinch, Grace Town, Arthur B. Dodge, Frank Hopkins, Jack Johnson, R. M. Yost, Jr., Jack Hendrickson and Frank Muriyama, the cook.

WILL INVADE NORTH.

The usual amount of practice was indulged in the past week at the Los Angeles Country Club course, for a number of the local golfers are tuning themselves for the Del Monte tournament that is scheduled to start next Saturday and continue one week.

Those who have stated their intention of going north are Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Griffith, Mrs. W. T. Bishop, Mrs. Godfrey Holterhoff, Jr., Mrs. Grace Porter, Sumner P. Hunt, W. Cosby, W. R. Millar, the club professional, Martin, and his brother, Joe Martin, and possibly L. T. Bradford. Others may go if business will permit. This does not include those who will go from the Annandale club, which will include A. McLeigan, T. P. Mumford and others. Almost all of the local players will start north next Thursday.

ON THE OUTSIDE.

YELLOWTAIL GET THE HOOK.

FISHERMEN HAVE GOOD SPORT OFF REDONDO BEACH.

Surf Fishing Is Still in the Depths of Slump and Veteran Anglers Have Poor Luck at Favorite Haunts. Spotfin Croakers Fattening Up for September Fun.

Large catches of yellowtail were made off Redondo last week. The sport is better than it has been for several weeks, and few parties that have gone out with the proper equipment but have numbered among their hauls at least two or three big fellows weighing over twenty pounds.

J. H. Merton, Percy Harris and three other local men went out from Redondo in a launch Wednesday, and in four hours landed nineteen yellowtail, none weighing less than thirteen pounds. The largest fish registered slightly over twenty-seven pounds.

Surf fishing during the week was "on the bum," as expressed by several old-timers, who visited their favorite haunts, to secure only three or four fish as a reward for several hours' patience. Robert Campbell and Harry Slotterbeck, who usually have good luck along the beach south of Huntington Beach, only got five finsters one day early in the week.

Fair catches were made in the Santa Monica Bay and at Bay City and Newport a few anglers fared well. Sea trout furnished considerable sport at the long wharf, where angling was better than it has been for two weeks.

Police Sergt. Harry White, who recently qualified for a bronze button by landing a twenty-four-and-one-half-pound albicore with a No. 9 outfit, intends again to try his hand at the game in the near future.

Spotfin croakers are increasing in size, and within the next two weeks it is expected that this year's crop will attain its full growth. Many good catches were made at Balboa last week.

WHO SHOT THE BUCK?

Two Local Hunters Fire Simultaneously and One Bullet Brings Down the Game.

Bob Fuller and Pete Elliott of this city bagged a five-prong buck in Cactus Cañon, in the Malibu Mountains, Friday. The deer was the largest that has been shot by local nimrods during the last two weeks. It weighed 150 pounds, dressed.

The hunters jumped the animal in the brush on the side of a cañon, and when it came into an opening near the top of a ridge the both shot at it, one of the bullets hitting it in the side and going through its body. Each man maintains that his shot did the business, and as there were no eyewitnesses to the tragedy, each will go on record as having a deer to his credit (except when counting limits.)

The men camped near the coast several miles north of Decker's ranch, and Elliott says the surf fishing from a point close at hand was incredibly good. He caught sixty surf, some of them weighing six pounds, and none being as small as the average catches from the piers in the Santa Monica Bay and on the south coast.

Fred A. Barrett shot a 120-pound deer near Santee, San Diego county, early last week. He went into the mountains alone, and after passing a half-day in tramping over rough country, jumped the buck, and shot it at 100 yards, in his first attempt.

WATLINGTON AT SEATTLE.

Former Champion Swimmer Is to Join Holborrow and Lee in Competing for National Honors.

Ben Watlington, who formerly held the 440-yard swimming championship of Southern California, is in Seattle and advised Les Henry yesterday that he intended to join Frank Holborrow and Marcus Lee in competing in the national swimming championships at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, if they are held this month.

Henry has not heard from the athletic director regarding the postponement of the tournament. It was to have been held Tuesday, but the day after Holborrow and Lee left here, Henry received a telegram saying that the races would not be held on the scheduled date and that a letter had been sent giving the reason. Henry has not received the letter, and believes the northerners have passed him out a "raw deal."

Holborrow and Lee are in Portland. They intend to remain there until definite instructions are received regarding the tourney. If the races are to be held within the next ten days they will proceed to Seattle; otherwise they will return home.

AUTOFESTS AND RACES.

Atlanta, Ga., will be one of the liveliest towns in the country during the week of November 6 to 13. Besides the automobile show, which will be the first big exhibition of motor cars in the South, the new, automobile track, now being constructed, will be opened, and there will be endurance contests through the various counties of Georgia, with prizes for the best stretches of road, and a reliability trip from New York to Atlanta.

GOOD ROADS.

Judge Eve of Augusta, Ga., County Commissioner of Roads and Revenues, has secured prizes aggregating $2000, of which $1000 is offered toward the State good roads automobile contest to be devoted to prize awards for the endurance contest between Augusta and Atlanta, and $1000 toward the movement for a highway between Atlanta and Washington, D. C.

MANY LICENSES.

The Indiana Secretary of State issued 3200 automobile licenses from April 1 to July 9. There were 2951 issued during the three months ended June 30, and 249 were issued during the first eight days of July. In the same length of time last year 1559 licenses were issued, showing that the automobile business in the Hoosier State has nearly doubled during the past year.

SMALL CAR RACE.

The Belgian Automobile Club will conduct a small car race on September 12. The conditions will be practically the same as for the last Coupe des Voiturettes race on the Boulogne circuit. In France's recent car race, calcium chloride instead of oil was used as a dust layer with such success that it will probably displace the other preparations for similar purposes in that country in the future.

HIGHEST ROAD.

French government engineers are planning the construction of a new highway that will be the highest road in Europe that can be used by automobiles. It will start from Thonon, on the Lake of Geneva, and will end at Nice. It will be about three hundred miles long and at its highest point will be 9085 feet above sea level.

DUSTLESS ROADS.

State Highway Commissioner MacDonald of Connecticut has purchased a large quantity of crude oil and distributing apparatus, and will spray sections of the main heavy traveled highway in an endeavor to render the roads of the Nutmeg State dustless.

NAME WINNERS ON THE RANGE.

Shooting at Camp Perry Is Best on Record.

New Marks Set Up Far Ahead of Last Year's

California Men Arrive Late Without a Splash.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CAMP PERRY (O.) Aug. 21.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Preliminary practice work over the ranges was engaged in today by members of the forty-eight service and National Guard rifle teams entered in the national trophy matches, which begin Monday.

To guard against accidents, the range officers are enforcing strictly an order that no aiming of rifles or snapping of triggers be permitted behind the firing line.

Today Lieut.-Col. R. K. Evans of the General Staff, in charge of the national shoot, kept the men busy at the skirmish and 100-yard ranges, preparing them for Monday's start.

Special $20 prizes in events running through the week's work under the Ohio Rifle Association were announced today, as follows:

H. O. Roesch and E. B. Gibson, Naval Academy, rapid fire, tie, at 45.

Lieut. H. Williams, Naval Academy; J. L. Carlson, Fifty-third Iowa; B. Middleton, First Indiana, high skirmish, tied, at 100.

Lieut. J. O. Mauborgue, Third U. S. Infantry, high aggregate slow fire, 92; W. C. Nicholson, Seventh U. S. Cavalry, high long-range aggregate, 99.

The Buckeye match, 1000 yards, went to A. L. Martin, Second Ohio, thirteen bullseyes; all-comers, at 600 yards—Sergt. Hale, Marine Corps, twenty-seven bullseyes; all-comers, at 300 yards—Capt. S. W. Wise, Massachusetts, 97 points; automatic pistol—Musician E. G. Reising, First Connecticut, 40 points; all-comers, long-range, military revolver—Lieut. Hedje, Fourth Cavalry, 140 points; rapid-fire revolver—Col. McGunness, Massachusetts, 132 points.

RECORDS BROKEN.

Several records have gone by the boards in the week's shoot of the forty-nine service and National Guard rifle teams, which competed for the national honors. In the Catrow match which was shot off on Monday the crack shots of the Marine Corps carried off the honors. And one of them, Sergt. J. H. Hingle of New York, broke the world's record for seven shots each at 800, 900 and 1000 yards. Hingle made a perfect score at each range.

Marines captured not only the $500 cup given by Col. H. C. Catrow of the Third Ohio, president of the Ohio State Rifle Association, but also secured second and third cash prizes—$35 and $20. Of the twelve prizes, the Marines got four.

The match for the Ohio adjutants-generals $500 cup was shot for on Tuesday, and Lieut. Townsend Whelan of the Twenty-ninth Infantry, carried off the trophy with ninety-nine out of a possible hundred. Capt. Casey of Pennsylvania was second, with a ninety-seven. Third honors went to a private, Frank Mier of the Third Michigan. Private J. E. Burns of Illinois won the Peter's match with a perfect score.

Again, on Wednesday, the tourney records went by the board, when the Massachusetts team won the Herrick cup match from a field of thirty-seven teams, with a record of 700, which by fifty-three points beat the score made last year. The score fell but twelve points short of the world's record.

Nearly 200 contestants shot for the gold medal in the Governor's match. Midshipman H. O. Roesch of Annapolis cadet team came out victor, with a score of 231. Lieut.-Col. C. B. Winder of Ohio took second prize, with Lieut. J. L. Carlson and Sergt. C. M. King of the Fifty-third Iowa, tied for third.

The California and Hawaiian marksmen did not arrive at the camp until Tuesday, and thus far have failed to land among the leaders in the shooting.

WEEK'S SCHEDULE.

On Monday the greatest national rifle matches this country has ever seen will be in full swing. All week teams and individual riflemen have been pouring into Camp Perry from all directions and the range outside of the firing lines is dotted with their camps.

Friday the range was turned over to Lieut.-Col. R. K. Evans, U.S.A., who took command as executive officer of the matches. He has nearly 100 regular army officers and 1000 men under him who will have charge of all firing, marking and scoring and compilation of statistics during the matches.

It is expected that forty-eight to fifty teams will line up Monday morning for the national team match for which Congress provides the trophy and the cash prizes. Each team is composed of twelve men with three alternates and a complement of officers. The shooting is at 200 yards slow fire, 600 yards, 800 yards, 1000 yards, 200 yards rapid fire and a skirmish run, and it is expected that this match will occupy all of Monday and Tuesday.

The teams present represent the United States infantry and cavalry, navy and Marine Corps, and Naval Academy, and the National Guard of the various States and Territories. They are divided into three classes on the basis of their standing in the match last year, as follows: Class A, U. S. Infantry, U. S. Navy, U. S. Cavalry, U. S. Marine Corps, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, U. S. Naval Academy, Pennsylvania, District of Columbia, Washington, Illinois, Iowa, Oregon, Maine and Ohio; Class B, Oklahoma, New Hampshire, Colorado, California, New York, Maryland, New Jersey, Minnesota, Kansas, Missouri, Hawaii, Indiana, Michigan, West Virginia and Kentucky; Class C, Wyoming, Connecticut, Georgia, Rhode Island, Arizona, Alabama, South Carolina, Tennessee, Nebraska, Delaware, North Dakota, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, Arkansas, New Mexico, Utah, Mississippi, Louisiana and North Carolina.

For Class A the first prize is the national trophy given by Congress with $450 cash; second prize $350; third, $300; fourth, $250. For Class B the first prize is the famous Hilton trophy, with $350 cash; second, $250 cash; third, $225, and fourth, $200. Class C has the Soldier of Marathon for its trophy and $200 cash, with additional prizes of $200, $175 and $150.

Each member of a team winning a trophy will receive an appropriate medal. No team is eligible to win a prize in the class below it, but can win the prize in any class above it. If a team in Class B or C makes a score entitling it to a prize in a higher class it must take that prize. The classification for 1910 will depend on the results in this match.

Wednesday the national individual match will be shot with probably 600 entries. There are thirty-nine medals in this match, each accompanied by a cash prize, and there is no entry fee as Congress furnishes the prize money.

The national revolver match will be shot immediately after the national individual rifle match. It carries seven gold medals, four silver medals and twelve bronze medals with twenty-three cash prizes.

Football Schedules.

All football schedules of colleges and high schools should be ready for announcement at this time, so that preparations can be made for the season without a hitch. When schedules are once made they should be adhered to. Cancellations are too frequent. True sportsmen would rather battle against odds than have an advantage. There is more honor in winning through pure grit and strategy than by sheer strength. Because teams lose strength or are facing probable defeat, athletic authorities are prone to call off scheduled contests, considering themselves justified because of their weakness. This is the wrong spirit to teach the youths of our schools. Only when physical injury threatens should the line be drawn; as, for instance, last season, when the Hollywood High School team was all battered up by teams with older and stronger players. In that case the games were called off because of fears of further injuries, but the spirit of the boys was not humiliated, and they retired knowing they had done their best against odds and were only called off by preemptory orders. Play off your schedule, boys, if you possibly can, or yours is the disgrace.

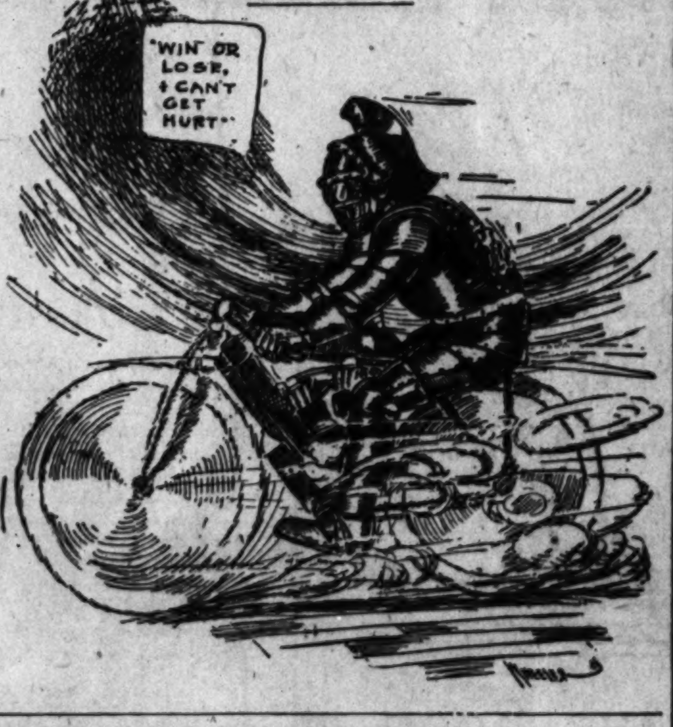
Auto Racing Precautions.

The death of William Bourque and Harry Holcomb at Indianapolis Thursday emphasizes the need of greater precaution in conducting automobile race meets. The track was in no shape for fast racing, and such negligence should be punished by the law. At every dangerous turn of any course a roadway should be built at a tangent so that machines which are beyond control can be steered into them with safety. This short piece of road might be made to reënter the main track further on so that the autos may continue the race with only a loss of time in covering the longer distance. Unless all precautions can be taken, races should be prohibited. There are dangers enough on a "safe" course without running undue risk because of bad roads. The Nevada-street turn at Santa Monica should be greatly improved before another race is held on the course. It is a wonder that there were no accidents there last July. The slightest turn of a wheel or the slipping of a tire would have thrown the big machines against obstructions, which would have caused fatal disaster.

Closing Mountain Trails.

One of the great assets of Southern California is the mountain country, where residents and tourists can walk in the arroyos, cañons and along the tops of high ridges, viewing the country and enjoying the beauties of dell and waterfall. It appears that gradually private interests are gaining control of these beauty spots through leases from the government, and not only are they made sources of profit where once they were free to every one, but in some places permits are required or admission absolutely denied. Mountain climbing is a great sport and should be kept free to the people. Some way should be devised whereby such places as the Arroyo Seco and others of the cañons in the mountains can be kept open without restrictions. The government leases can be secured for a nominal sum and the county authorities should tie them up for use as parks and camping grounds, free of restrictions.

WHY NOT?



"WIN OR LOSE, I CAN'T GET HURT"

Developing Pitchers.

Good baseball pitchers are the principal assets of a club, and the development of youngsters into stars is a source of great revenue to the stockholders. A ball team ought to conduct a pitchers' school every morning, and half a dozen youngsters ought to be on hand for instruction and development. There are many veteran pitchers and catchers who have outlived their active usefulness who could be secured as coachers. Two catchers, old heads, who can steady up the youngsters and give them all sorts of points how to pitch and how to cut the corners, would do the business. All likely youngsters could be signed up and taught the great game, and when a good one is needed he would be ready for call.

Abe Attell Is Crafty.

Abe Attell, the best of America's featherweights, allowed Harry Stone, practically unknown out of his own community, to go to a ten-round draw with him. It is possible that Attell has gone back or was not in condition, but it is very likely that he let Stone stay to a draw to get another paying match. Stone evened things in the last two rounds, which seems to bear out the supposition that Attell purposely slowed up. Fight fans have come to believe Attell invincible against men of his weight and Attell has done such things so many times that they will not believe him beaten until he is knocked out. Attell is a money maker, not a sportsman.

ALL BY AUTO.

It is stated as an instance of the popularity of automobiles at summer resorts that at a well-known White Mountains hotel, in three pages on a hotel register, all arrivals but six came by automobile, while at one hotel alone were registered forty-six cars, the property of permanent guests of the hotel, who have brought their autos for greater enjoyment of New Hampshire's good roads.

AUTO AND MULE.

The Touring Club of France has voted $12,000 toward the construction of a road from St. Christophe to La Bernarde, a little village in the Department of Isere, which so far can only be approached via a mule track.

AMATEUR NOTES.

Now that Fred Thomson has definitely decided not to go to the University of Washington at Seattle, Occidental students are breathing easier, for almost all the athletics of the Highland Park is grouped about the big tackle, hurdler and shot putter.

Coach Rheinschild has a hard task to perform this year in shaping up his St. Vincent's team. The school has been working with the A.A.U., and necessarily the lines must be drawn closer. Then some of the best men will not return. Grindle is a professional, and Ybarrando has been playing in the doubtful class in baseball.

DuBois, who played quarterback on the Santa Ana High School eleven last year, is slated for Occidental College this year. He and "Young Prexie" Baer probably will be the leading candidates for the quarterback position on the 'varsity.

Owen Bird, the Occidental sprinter, is thinking about joining the local Y. M.C.A. and organizing a track team.

Tom Clay, student manager of athletics at U.S.C., has been "on the job" all summer, arranging the schedules for the intercollegiate games this year and getting the equipment in condition.

Dean Cromwell of U.S.C. is expected to return from Seattle before the end of this month. He has been away several weeks.

MEN AND WOMEN TO WRESTLE.

Two Shows at Chutes Park This Afternoon in Which Eugene Traveller Is to Star.

Eugene Traveller has a big job on his hands today when he meets five of the best wrestlers in the city. The middleweight has barred none and some dark horse may appear this afternoon who will make the Canadian hustle.

Tony Munkers tried out a number of candidates last night. Munkers himself will go on and Chief Middleski will be another opponent. Then there are Dan O'Leary, Fred Ryan, Jack Lee, Jack Hogan, and several others to draw from, in addition to any others who may appear.

Jack Johnson has been invited to attend the bout and to visit the park. Manager Lehigh was busy last night trying to locate the big champion with an offer to do a little work before the big crowd. He may be induced this morning to come out.

The Chutes Park Athletic Club, in addition to staging Traveller at 4:30 o'clock after the ball game, is to put on some more women wrestlers. The feaaure will be between Olson, who claims to be the champion woman wrestler of the world, and Jennis McFenn. Jennis Wilson and Anna Meller are to wrestle in the preliminary event.

ENDURANCE TEST.

A three days' endurance contest to be held early in September, is being planned by the Council Bluffs, Iowa, Automobile Club. Motorists of Des Moines, Sioux City and a number of other places may participate.

ANGELS HAVE BIG INNING.

ozer Blanks Acorns Until Seventh Period.

Los Angeles, 4; Oakland, 2.

Dillon handed out Tozer yesterday the Acorns to hit at, and that was out all they did, for aside from one ing they never had a chance to ke any trouble. It might also be as a matter of history that if lson could have kept from blowing in the sixth there is no telling how game would have ended.

large crowd of fans saw the con- t and what they had in the way of ctacular catches by the outfielders s all to the flossy. Daley seemed be trying to make a reputation, for re was nothing he did not go after he got everything. His best stunt s the grabbing of Hogan's long fly deep center in the eighth inning er a hard sprint of a couple of hun- d feet, and this wonderful catch vented the score from being tied, Hogan's hit would certainly have anded over the fence for a home run not Daley stopped it.

IcKune showed some brilliant hes in his assists from short, and mas also did some great fielding n he was not juggling the ball, but tunately none of his juggles did great damage.

seems strange to the average fan such a good heaver as Nelson can e such an awful experience as he in the sixth, for both before and r that inning he pitched shut-out , but three men getting to second e. He was wild in the eighth and had two men, but the one that fol- ed retired the side. Leaving out seventh inning, in which the visit- made their two runs, only one man ched second base, and he got there a bad throw by Delmas in trying complete a double play.

e sixth was the big scream for the s, and had it not been for a bad by Kelly, they would have made two runs. Daley started the show striking out. Nelson then soaked with the ball, and the little fel- stole second. Wheeler flew to y, who made a fine running catch eft field, and Ross scored on hits Beall and Howard.

d Smith hit to center, and when y ran up on the ball he allowed it et between his feet to the center e, Beall and Howard scoring on hit and error and Smith going to . This calamity was too much for on, and he showed it with a wild that scored Smith. Delmas finally d the performance by flying to field and after that only one of locals landed on second base in innings.

ere was nothing for the Acorns the seventh, which Cameron ed with a double to right. He ran ird on Kelly's dinky hit to right stayed there while McKune was at first. Johnson's high bounding d out at first scored Cameron and Kelly on third, and he tallied when eler made a wild throw to Tozer rst of Thomas's bounce.

Four came in the third. Hitt grew wild and walked Baum and Shinn, pitching but one strike. Doyle dumped the ball and beat it out, filling the bases. Gandil bounced the sphere over Hitt and into center field for a single, scoring Baum. Miers went to the bench for trying to bunt the third strike. Raymer drove the ball on the ground over the third sack, and it sped almost to the fence, Martinke being unable to head it off. The bases were cleared, Shinn, Doyle and Gandil coming home.

In the fourth Hogan's crew cut down the lead by taking advantage of Miers' and Shinn's errors. Haley opened with a single and stole second when Brashear struck out. Martinke was an easy out, and with two down, Haley occupied third. Coy sent the ball to Miers, who failed to pick it up, and Haley scored. Mott singled to right and went to second when an attempt was made to nail Martinke at third. Shinn threw Brown's grounder wild to Miers, and two more men scored.

Clean stick work gave the visitors their only earned run in the seventh. Brown, Hitt and Devereaux singled successively. "Brick's" liner to left doing the scoring.

Sacramento reclaimed the lost run in the second half of the lucky inning. Doyle drove the ball through short, and Gandil hit a three-base hit between right and center field. Vernon rallied in the final inning, but easy outs were made after two hits had been registered. The score:

VAUGHNS CASE PUZZLING.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—It would appear that the case of Pitcher James Vaughn, which has aroused considerable feeling between the two major league clubs, has not reached an end. The New York American League club, which maintained that it has a legal claim to Vaughn's services, will resist any attempt to take the player away.

It is said that President Ban Johnson will soon receive an affidavit signed by Vaughn to the effect that he was told that the National Commission would award him to the Louisville American Association club, which would then turn him over to Cincinnati. But the New York American League club has documentary proof, meanwhile, it is said, that Vaughn was never released to the Macon club, which sold him to Louisville and to Brooklyn.

It is further contended by the New York club that Garry Herrman, owner of the Cincinnati club, according to baseball precedent, should have voluntarily declined to vote on Vaughn's case, and should have left the matter entirely to the judgment of President Johnson and President Heydler.

in this contest to decide the possession of the silver prize which is eight and one-half feet high and is valued at $5000.

The starters lined up in three tiers. Following are the list of starters and drivers given in the order in which they passed the stand at the end of the first lap:

National (Aitken,) Apperson (McCullough,) Apperson (Lytle,) Buick (Strang,) Fiat (De Palma,) National (Reed,) Stoddard-Dayton (De Hymel,) Jackson (Ellis,) Stoddard-Dayton (Clements,) Buick (Burman,) Jackson (Lynch,) Buick (Chevrolet,) Marmon (Stillman,) Marmon (Harroun,) Stoddard-Dayton (Miller,) Marmon (Keene,) National (Oldfield,) Marion (Stutz.) The American car, driven by Darasch, was withdrawn.

Aitken, in the National, led for the first 100 miles, covering that distance at the rate of 65.4 miles an hour. Just before he completed the 105th mile, a cylinder head cracked and he was forced to drop out when he was leading the Buick (Burman,) by more than four minutes. This put Burman, winner of the 250-mile race, in the lead, but he was closely pressed by De Palma, in the Fiat.

Chevrolet, the Frenchman, dropped out after completing 100 miles, because of ignition trouble.

Burman, in his Buick, who was leading by a large margin, withdrew when he had completed nearly 150 miles, because of a cracked cylinder head. Reed, in a National, then took the lead but soon dropped out.

The standing at the end of 150 miles: Jackson (Lynch,) first, time 2h. 39m. 34 1-10s.

MINOR CONTESTS.

Kincaid, in a National, won the opening event, a fifteen-mile free-for-all handicap, of the third day of the inaugural automobile racing meet at the new Indianapolis Motor Speedway today. The winner had a handicap of one minute, but had a hard battle to defeat Ralph de Palma in a Fiat, who started from scratch. The Fiat was second, and a Marmon, with Stillman at the wheel, finished third.

Before the first regular event, Oldfield, Christie and Zengel made their onslaughts on the record for a kilometer, but nothing sensational resulted.

Ed Hearne, a Chicago Board of Trade man, won the amateur championship of America, in the ten-mile race. Ryall, in a Buick, gave Hearne a battle royal in the first five miles, but dropped back toward the finish. The time was 9m. 44 3-10s.

Results:

Ten miles, amateur championship of America: Fiat (Hearne,) won; Buick (Riall,) second; time 9m. 44 3-10s. Thomas (Greiner,) and Stearns (Cameran,) also started, but did not finish.

Fifteen miles, free-for-all handicap: National (Kincaid,) handicap 1m., won; Fiat (De Palma,) scratch, second; Marmon (Stillman,) 1m. 15s., third; time 14m. 23 5-10s. Buick (De Witt,) 2m. 15s., also started.

Twenty-mile free-for-all: Benz (Oldfield,) won; Fiat (De Palma,) second; Chadwick (Zengel,) third; time 21m. 27 1-10s. Only three starters.

STATEMENT OF MERZ.

Claud Kellum, the mechanic, had been riding with Merz only the last few miles of the race, as he had been placed in the car to replace Lyons, the original mechanic.

The following statement was made by Merz, who escaped with hardly a scratch:

"Our outer front tire burst and hurled the car through the fence into a group of spectators. I fell under the car, but received hardly a scratch. Kellum was hurled from the car into the crowd. I feel I have run my last automobile race."

Referee S. B. Stevens of New York declared the 300-mile race off tonight and announced that it will be run over. The race was called off after four people had been killed during the terrific speed battle. The Jackson had a lead at the end of the two hundred and fortieth lap. The Fiat was second, and the Marmon third.

Sutton to Be Free.

SPOKANE (Wash.) Aug. 21.—Willie Hoppe, the world's 18.2 billiard champion, announced today that George Sutton, the famous player, may soon be a free lance. Arrangements are being made, says Hoppe, for Sutton's desertion of the so-called "billiard trust."

THE GLIDDEN TOUR

An Account of the 64 Goodrich Tires in the Sixth Annual Glidden Contest As Told By the People Who Used Them

A SEARCHLIGHT THROWN ON THE "INSIDE" HISTORY OF THE 1909 GLIDDEN TOUR, BRINGING OUT CLEARLY AND SIGNIFICANTLY THESE FACTS:

AS USUAL, GOODRICH TIRES EQUIPPED ALL THE GLIDDEN AND HOWER TROPHY WINNING CARS.

Pierce Car No. 9—Winner of Glidden Trophy ....Goodrich Tire Equipment
Pierce Car No. 8—Winner of Second Honors ....Goodrich Tire Equipment
Pierce Car No. 108—Winner of Hower Trophy ....Goodrich Tire Equipment
Moline Car No. 100—Winner of Second Honors ......Goodrich Tire Equipment

SIX OF THE EIGHT CLEAN ROAD SCORE CARS EQUIPPED WITH GOODRICH TIRES. THE ABOVE IS ALL A MATTER OF PUBLIC RECORD.
TEN OF THE TWELVE CONTESTING CARS EQUIPPED WITH GOODRICH TIRES REACHED KANSAS CITY WITHOUT TIRE CHANGE.

Did the frictional heat on top of this tremendous sun heat soften the white tough treads of the Goodrich Tires? Did the treads peel or separate from the body of the integrally constructed tires? Did punctures and blow-outs rule the day? —Not so you could notice it.

Bill Reidy, once pitcher—now pessimist.

BY GREY OLIVER.

"UESS he doesn't know what he's doin' in givin' 'em two runs to start with." (This means at he thinks about an umpire.)

"I'd sell any ball player that ever d if I had him, for you can pick t as good ones off the bushes any ." (Concerning his idea of ball yers.)

"Whata these bums and pass mooch- know about a ball game anyway." hese are not the rambling mouth- s of a disgruntled pitcher who had hits made off him in one inning er he had been hit in the head by wild pitch as he went to bat the t time, but the daily thoughts of Reidy, the care-free, independent, ermed pitcher who has temporarily aken the glare and the dust of the l field for the shady side of the ach in the efforts to fulfill his duties a manager of the hard-luck team the Coast League, which is known the Oakland club.

ans of various kinds call this team various names, but they know hing of the club unless they know Reidy. He is the one man in the gue that cares for nothing but the sibility of winning games for his ner, and ball players, fans and um- es look about as big to him as a r of fours after the draw when the other fellow has shoved in three cks of blues.

ill has his faults like the rest of but it is safe to say that he would pay Bill Taft 30 cents a month to ch for Oakland, or stand for Roose- t on first if these big stickers could make good. Bill has about as ch reverence for people in general a cat has for soft soap, and he s this from a sixteen-year associa- with ball players, umpires and eball fans. If any one could love thing after such a trial he de- ves all that's coming to him.

he first town that Bill saw in his ole life was Cleveland and this was ut thirty-six years ago. He picked the baseball business as a career ause he felt that he had been called to it by the lure of easy money, and like all other good players he began life as a pitcher, but unlike every other one he stuck to it. Just imagine a man flinging the ball for sixteen years in front of bum umpires and for a thousand different fielders to boot around the field! Is it any wonder that he would not put a bet down on the human race even if he knew that all the starters were in the can but the "caucus nominee?"

Bill began life as a pitcher for the Saginaw team of the Ohio and Michigan League in 1893. The next year he went to Finlay, O., and the three following years he was with the New York Nationals. From 1898 to 1901 he was with the Milwaukee team and from 1902 to 1904 pitched for the St. Louis Americans. In 1905 he was with Brooklyn in the National League and since then has been with the Oakland team and became manager when George Van Haltren was deposed some months ago.

Look at him on the bench. He knows what each one of his players tried to do after he did not do it, and he can tell you after every game what each one of his men did in it. This is the kind of a manager that must succeed, and he has succeeded in a remarkable degree, for when he took the team it was far down at the bottom of the percentage column and only won a game by luck. Now it wins from the league leaders as easily as it does from Vernon and Sacramento. Bill has the best bunch of heavers in the league and yet loses three-fourths of his games because some dub on the other team, who makes but one hit a month, always gets it with the bases full.

What's the use? Who cares? There are just as many bum ball players in the world as there are on any team and just as many good ones. Bill buys some every week, ties the can to others and would sell anything he has for anything else that he is shy of. He is the only real devil-may-care manager on the Coast. If you don't believe it, watch him on the bench or when he coaches. He really looks the part.

THAT WOULD BE FINE.

AY BUILD TENNIS COURTS IN PARKS FOR PUBLIC USE.

UBLIC tennis courts in the city parks, which will be open continuously to all comers, probably will established in this city within the few months. The Southern Cali- ia Tennis Association is actively en- ed in a campaign for the construc- of courts in at least one park, and playground department has ged its support to the movement. arles B. Raitt, Superintendent of ygrounds, believes the innovation ld stimulate general interest in out- sports as much as has everything has been done here for several s.

e matter is to be brought formally he attention of the Park Commis- in the near future. Stoddard Jess, -president of the commission, says scheme is a good one and that he be pleased to give it attention at proper time. C. H. Randall says s willing to do anything to encour- young people to engage in outdoor es.

e members of the tennis associa- are unanimously in favor of the ect. They believe that the number devotees of the game would be tly increased and that more cham- ship material would be developed re were courts upon which people play without having to become m of a club.

The on of the people behind the move to have one or more courts constr at Sycamore Grove n Highland Park the purpose of sing whether the ement meets ith popular favor. , if it is nd to be a success, the Park Commission will be asked to provide courts in other city parks.

A. C. Way of the tennis association, who is very enthusiastic over the scheme, says that cement courts can be constructed at a very reasonable cost and that they require practically no attention to keep them in good order and they last for many years. The courts are not subjected to hard usage, as the players wear rubber-soled shoes and the balls are too light to produce any wear upon the courts.

"If public tennis courts are installed in the city parks I believe Southern California will produce national champions in all classes," sad Mr. Way yesterday. "In this climate, where it is possible to play the game nearly every day in the year, there will be many young people who will pass all their spare time on the courts, and consequently will develop into strong players. It is simply a question of constant practice."

Maurice McLoughlin, who was a member of the doubles team that was the challenger for the national championship, and who is the holder of the national interscholastic championship, learned the game and became proficent in it on the public courts in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco. Several other strong players around the bay made their start on the same courts. The parks of many eastern cities are equipped with tennis courts.

"We believe the Park Commission will readily see the advantage to the public that will be gained by installing courts in at least two or three city parks and will recommend that the work be done," sal Mr. Way.

Dear Sir: As you know, I have been driving Packard cars for over three years' time, and aside from this have had considerable experience with other high-class cars. I am pleased to tell you that I like the simplicity and power and general running of the valveless "American Simplex" better than any other car on the market. I would not have purchased it unless I knew for myself that it had been thoroughly tried and tested and was in no way an experiment. I have been on the road with it constantly, making several trips down in Maine and climbing some of the worst hills and mountains in this part of the country, and have yet to be passed by any other car on the road.

You may refer any doubting prospective customer to me and I will assure him that the car is right, and that you understand the treatment of customers. You have a wonderful success in store for you on this car. With best wishes,

Yours very truly,

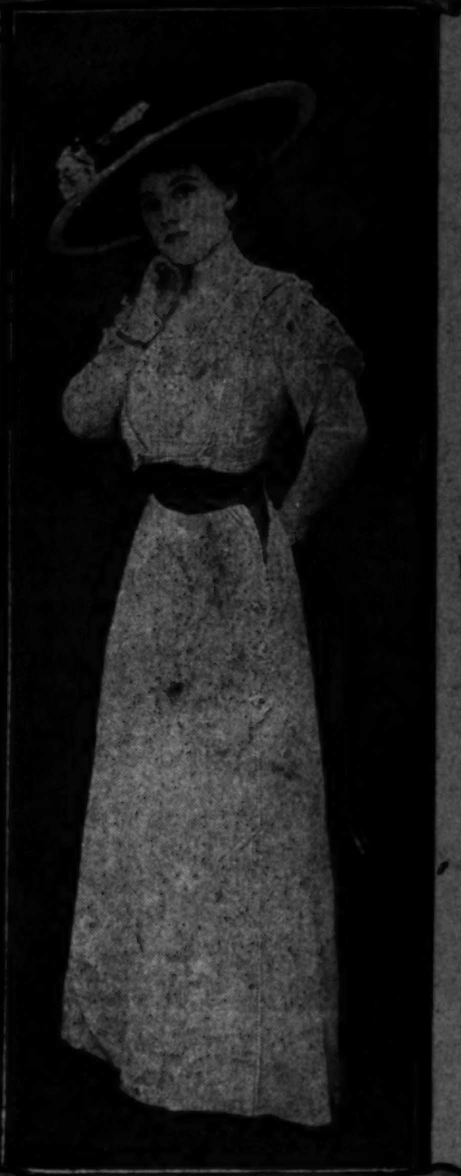
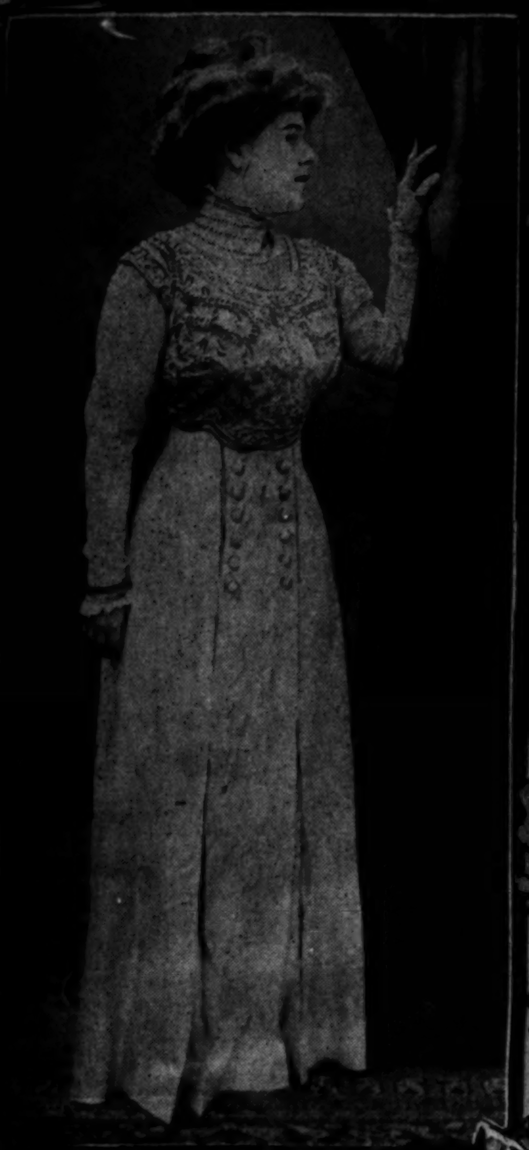
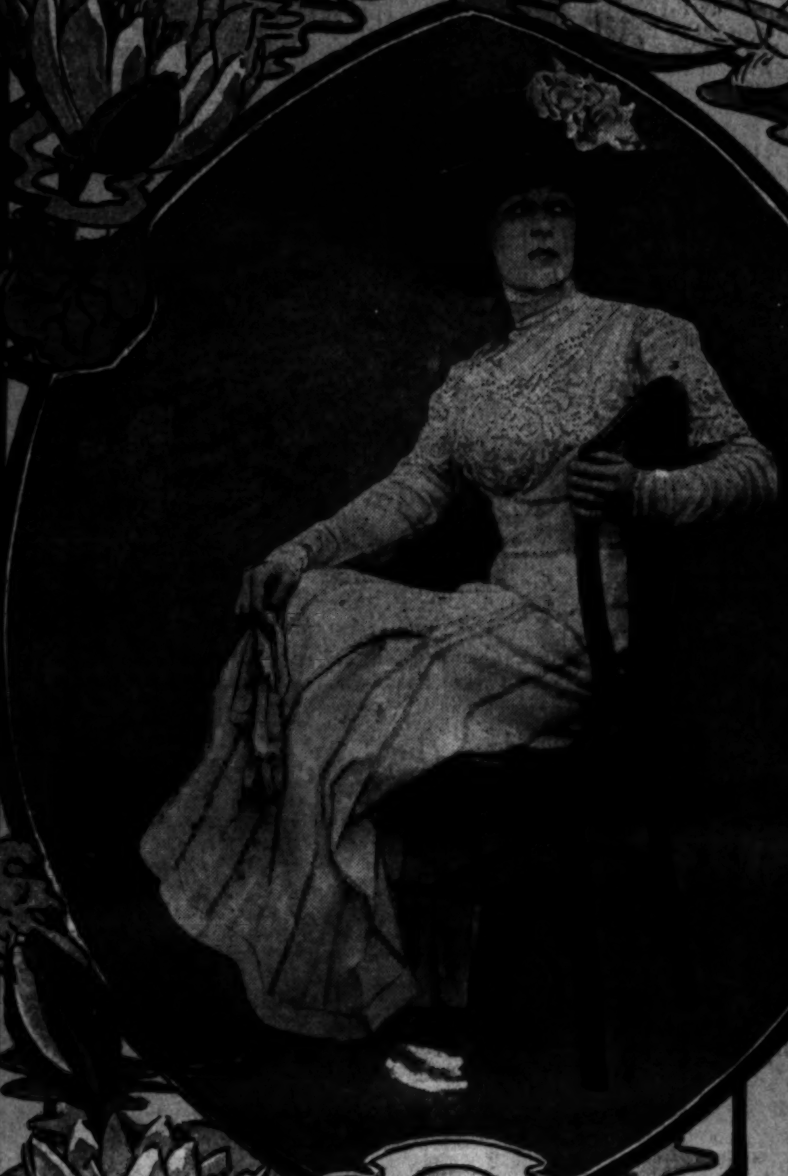
Linen Gowns for Late Summer Days



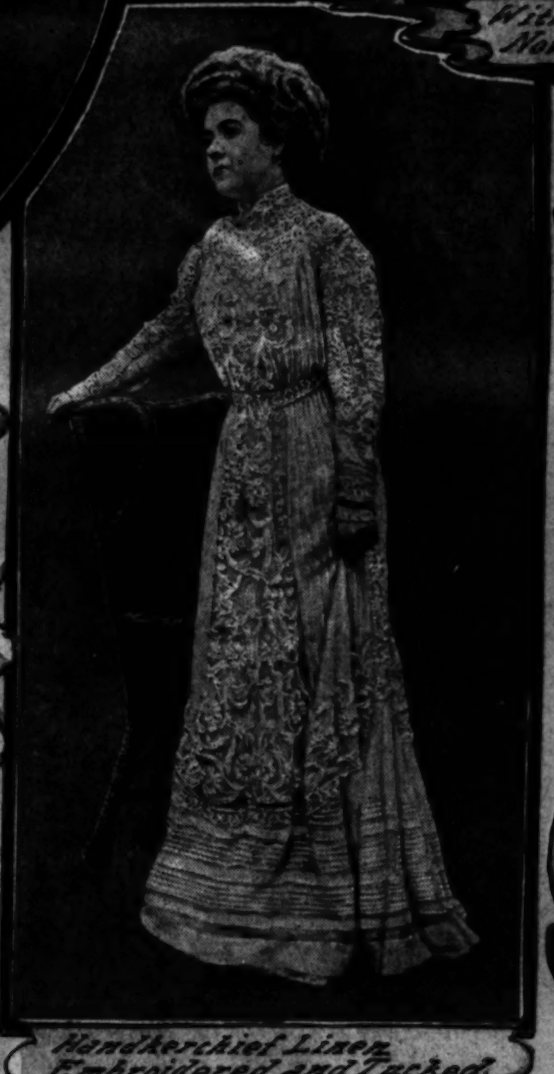
With a Sash of Novel Type.



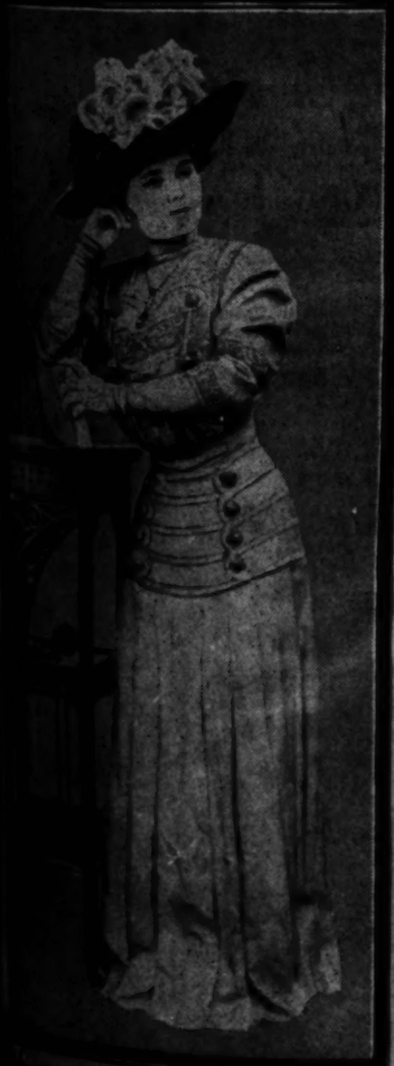
A Pretty Gown for the Afternoon.



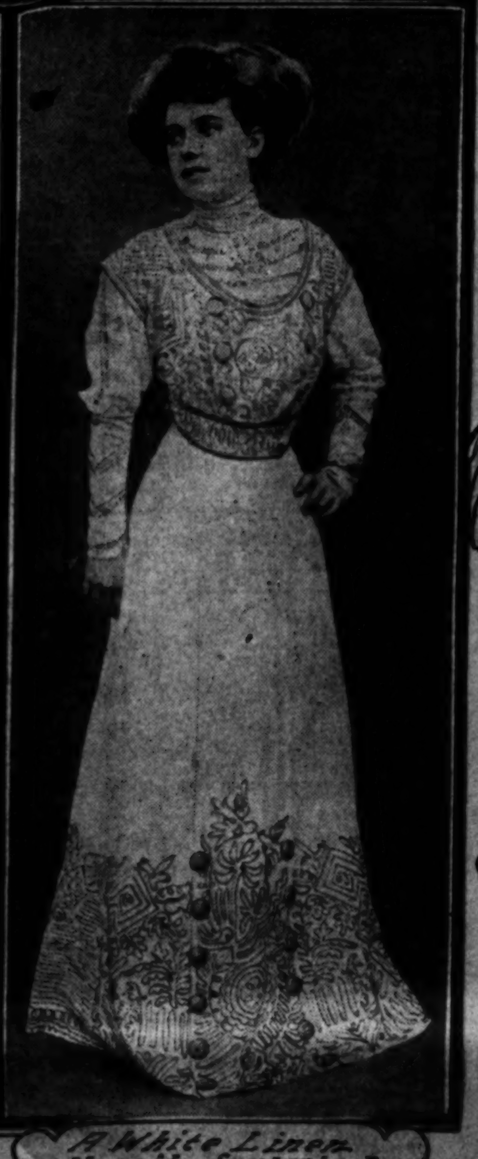
Of Striped Linen and Lace



Handkerchief Linen Embroidered and Tucked.



Cut on Moyen-Age Lines.



A White Linen Heavily Soutached.

EVEN the most carefully stocked wardrobe may need an addition before the end of summer. Nor is there anything unreasonable about it, for if summer clothes are not as expensive, neither are they as durable as winter ones; so, without extravagance, madame may add a dainty costume or two without being accused by even the most strict of consciences. It is well, however, to select for these midseason makeshifts frocks of not too great elaboration, for they need not be chosen with a view to their lasting over until the summer of 1910. Linen dresses are a very good choice, and they may be procured at this season at comparatively little cost. Besides this, they are somewhat heavy and may often be worn quite into the autumn.

A very good gown of striped linen is made with a high-waisted skirt and a lace bodice. It is becoming, and it may be worn on all ordinary occasions. The one pictured is of white with a diagonal stripe of brown, while the bodice is of net trimmed with cluny lace.

Another gown, not too severe for afternoon wear, is a white linen heavily soutached with light blue. Even the buttons, which appear upon bodice and skirt, are covered with white and prettily braided with blue. This gown is made in such a way that it may be worn over a blouse.

A frock which might serve for warm evenings is of handkerchief linen tucked and embroidered with white. The handwork is very elaborate, and even the manifold tucks have been done with needle and thread, indicating at a glance that the frock was made by one of the great lingerie workers.

A pretty gown for the afternoon is also soutached, but this time with white. Unlike the white and blue gown, this one has no belt, and the braiding decorates not the skirt, but the bodice. The skirt is more ample than has been usual during the past year.

A white linen with a sash of novel type is becoming in the extreme, for the line of black around the waist makes the wearer appear both slender and graceful. The sash is a bias band of black satin, and it is fastened over the skirt in front and back, although at the left side it slips under it. The bodice of this frock is quite on the order of the bolero, once so familiar and again in the ascendency, while a little touch of braiding relieves the plainness.

Perhaps the newest gown, but not the most becoming, is cut on moyen-age lines. This is of old rose linen trimmed with braid of the same color, and with bands of the material held in place by braided buttons. The yoke and the undersleeves are of the rose chiffon over white tulle, a combination which is becoming and somewhat new.

These models are all varied as to cut, so some one must appeal to each woman. We have here the high-waisted skirt and bodice, the bolero style, the adapted jumper, the long hip yoke and linens embroidered both with cotton and soutache braid.

The AMATEUR NURSE

THE trained nurse is a nineteenth century product; at least, in the United States. And, despite the beneficent change she has ought in the sickroom, we cannot dis- ise from ourselves the truth that re still lingers in the minds of ne sane and broad-minded people a tain prejudice against her and her thods. So strong is the disfavor with ne that the nurse is occasionally iged to lay aside her uniform and n to be a neighbor who has "just ped in to lend a hand with the sing." It is maintained, and not hout reason, that the very sight of cap and apron is a danger signal to ervous patient. She must be very or a trained nurse would not be en- ed.

he is an expensive luxury, urge other testants, to say nothing of the tyr- y some of the guild exercise over whole household that is so unfortu- e as to need her services. I could this and twenty more pages with au- tic anecdotes in support of this ob- ion to the sisterhood and not ex- st the stock at command of memory. hese and what may be cataloged as ntimental reasons" incline many ilies to dispense with the salaried istrations of the trained nurse and epend in illness upon relative, friend eighbor, who nurses for the love of calling or for the patient and those whom the sufferer is dear.

A CRITICAL PATIENT

nce I began this paper, what I on as a happy coincidence brought my study a young kinsman recently vered from a somewhat serious at- of illness. Knowing that he had nursed by a favorite maid of his her, who had begged for the privi- by virtue of her long residence in family and natural aptitude for ing, combined with experience, I chised him upon the subject in

"I have had trained nurses in several previous illnesses," he testifies. "Two were methodical and perfunctorily attentive. I recognized myself as a part of the machinery of which they were the motive power. They were quietly despotic, taking absolute obedience on my part as a matter of course. If I were cross, it mattered nothing to them personally. After representing professionally that excitement would raise my temperature and retard recovery, they disregarded ebullitions of temper and lowness of mind. It was like being in a refrigerator. No. 3 of the becapped and beaproned sisterhood was tart to acidity if I ventured to demur to any of her measures. She dragooned my poor mother and scolded the servants and raised a tempest in a teapot generally in the well-ordered household. I got well as fast as possible to get rid of her.

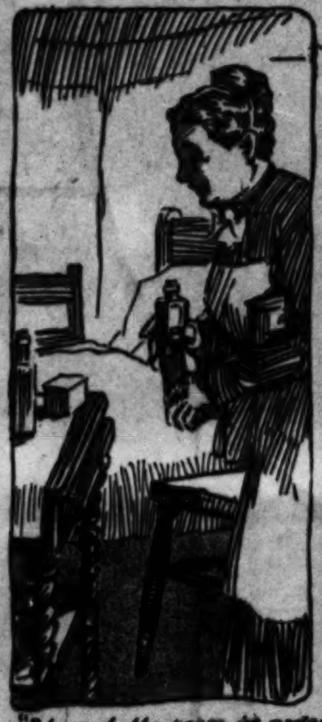
METHODS OF HER OWN

"Recollections of her reign were my chief reason for seconding Mary's petition to be allowed to take care of me in this last attack. She is a watchful and tender nurse, and it sounds horribly ungrateful to criticise her methods—bless her old soul! But you want the truth, you say.

"In the first place, she set the room in order for a siege by arranging the medicine bottles and boxes, etc., upon a table not far from the bed, and in full sight. The table was spread with a clean napkin, renewed daily, and the bottles and boxes were in straight lines, the biggest in the middle and graded down to each end. I used to lie and stare at them and wonder which was which and wish they had not a sort of fascination that forced me to look at them. My professional nurses kept all the paraphernalia of medicines, plasters and the like out of my sight and, I think, out of the room. Mary poured out each dose at my bedside, counting the drops audibly. I never knew how much I had to take or anything else about the stuff until the trained nurse had spoon or glass at my elbow. It was administered silently, the glass of water that was to take out the taste was held to my lips and the thing was over. Mary 'wondered if 'twasn't about time to take that next dose,' or that 'bothering alcohol bath,' or 'wasn't I hungry and couldn't I think of something I should like to eat?' or 'was the room too light?' or 'didn't I think that I could sleep if she read the evening paper to me?' There was a story of a murder that might interest me. Or, 'Wouldn't I like to have her read the report of the big football game?'

"I couldn't hurt her feelings by saying that she reads badly and that I should certainly jump out of the window if she tried to 'render' the sporting page. So I pretended to be sleepy, and she darkened the room until I could just make out the outlines of the awful array of bottles and boxes on the stand (she never threw one away!), and I could hear her 'sh-sh-sh-ing' the family out in the hall for the next hour, and croaking under her breath that 'poor dear Mr. Philip has dropped off to sleep and mustn't be disturbed upon no account whatsumever.'

"She asked the doctor in my hearing one day 'if he didn't think that sleeping so much was a bad symptom?' and I burst out laughing in her face. That was another difference between her and the trained nurse. She either retailed the account of symptoms, temperature and other features of the case audibly to him in my presence, or, what was worse, she took him to the far side of the room and imparted them in a sepulchral whisper that made my blood run cold. The trained nurse passed over her chart silently and out of my sight, and, while the doctor read it, busied herself quietly and naturally about my bed that I might not notice what he was doing.



"She set the room in order for a siege."

"I used to wish I could beg Mary not to lean upon the footrail of my bed while she talked to me or watched me eat and drink. She always took her stand there and crossed her arms upon the rail, her eyes fixed solicitously upon me, and chattered in an undertone, as in a death chamber, after she had made my bed or given my medicine or brought in my meals.

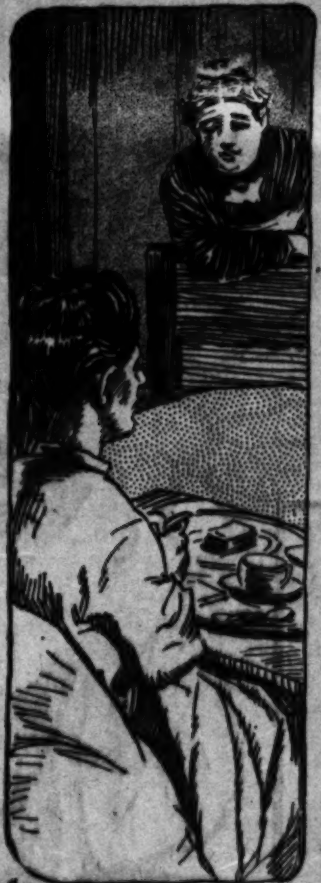
"Don't forget to speak of these meals. She cooked every mouthful I ate with her own hands. She is a capital cook, and her entreaties that the doctor would allow 'the poor young gentleman nourishing and tasty food' were heartrending. I detest that word 'tasty' as violently as you do, and she was positively addicted to it. When she had wrung from the worried practitioner permission to broil an oyster or roast a squab or toss up an omelet or stew a sweetbread or some other 'tasty' treat for me, she made hot haste to get it ready, and would let nobody else bring it to me. For luncheon the first day I was permitted to touch meat after the fever went off she brought a big tray and placed it right beside me, cooing over me as a robin who brings a particularly fat slug to her nest.

"The sweetbread was the piece de resistance, but in case 'the poor dear young gentleman might not relish it,' she flanked it by a poached egg—'poached in cream, dear, to make it real tasty'—a plate of creamed toast, one of thin graham bread and butter and one of dry toast, for my choice. Then there was a cup of tea and a crisp stalk of celery, 'just to chew and put a taste into your mouth.'

"I had had the grip, you know, and maybe you know, too, that it is accompanied by dumb nausea, indescribably distressing. I did my best to eat a bit of the sweetbread, and tried not to see that loathly poached egg! It almost broke her heart, I am sure, but she thanked me for saying it was 'nice' and hoped my appetite 'would come up soon.'

KITH AND KIN

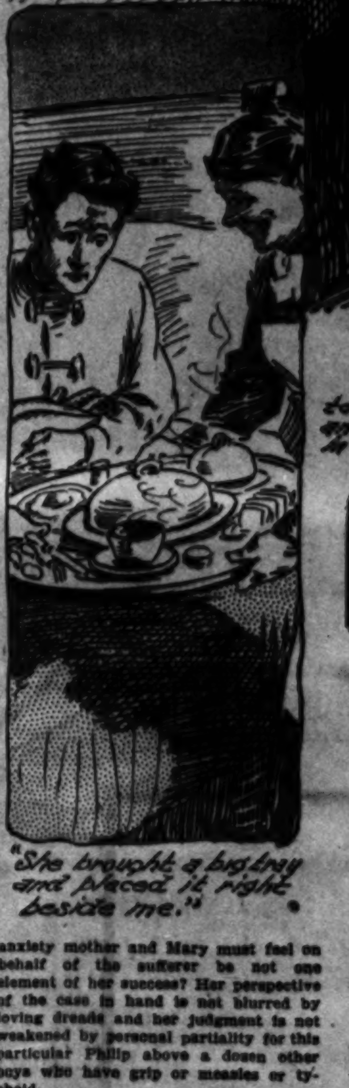
"She asked me forty-eight times in one day, 'How are you feeling by now?' and twenty-seven times, 'What would you like to have me do for you, Mr. Philip, dear?' I counted them all. Somehow, I couldn't help doing it. The nervous fret brought up my temperature and she assured the doctor that I had been kept perfectly quiet all day and had not been allowed to speak a word.



"I used to wish I could beg Mary not to lean upon the footrail of my bed."

"I feel like a cad in telling you all this, auntie, although you say it may be pro bono publico. My own blessed mother could not have nursed me more tenderly. I suppose it is not to be expected of human nature that a professional nurse could engraft tenderness upon skill and tact. The kindest-hearted woman alive has not tenderness enough to go around a circle of 'cases.' It is inevitable that the skilled services they render at so much 'per' must be more or less perfunctory. I wonder if it is an impossibility for the mothers and the Maries who love us too much to resign the care of us in sickness to hirelings, to study the methods by which they supplement the physician's efforts in our behalf?"

I give the tale as it is told to me. If I might add anything to the true narrative of the stalwart six-footer, whose present condition may be in part owing to the faithful nursing of the devoted amateur, and is undoubtedly due in a large measure to subsequent toil in garden and field, in what one of my boys once pined for when ill in the city, as "a whole skyful of fresh air"—if, I might, I say, supplement his graphic report, it would be to substantiate the claims of the trained nurse upon our confidence by asking if her very freedom from the anxiety mother and Mary must feel on behalf of the sufferer be not one element of her success? Her perspective of the case in hand is not blurred by loving dreads and her judgment is not weakened by personal partiality for this particular Philip above a dozen other boys who have grip or measles or typhoid.



"She brought a big tray and placed it right beside me."

The cool common sense that withholds the surgeon from operating upon wife or child or mother indisposes the amateur from taking the sole responsibility of nursing one of her own kith and kin, or one in whom her professional interest may be colored by affection.

All the same, mothers and Maries may learn much from watching the ways and means of the professional nurse.

(3) Is there danger that the stuff may spoil after one has gone to the labor and expense of preparing it?

G. E. M. (Red Lion, Pa.).

This letter was answered by mail some time ago. Several other correspondents having written to the like effect with "G. E. M." I take this as the readiest method of satisfying all.

To begin with: the oils you name may be obtained in any large city. I have purchased them repeatedly. May I suggest that you substitute other fragrant essential oils more readily procurable? The main thing is to have an agreeably perfumed mixture of which the rose petals are the base and vehicle.

(1) Keep the jar closely covered during the daily addition of fresh petals and salt to the contents.

(2) Leave the water at the bottom of the jar alone until you are ready to add the spices and essential oils. Drain, then, in a colander and spread the petals upon a paper, tossing and turning them to loosen and to dry them from superfluous moisture. That the petals are damp does not injure the whole potpourri.

(3) I have potpourri, put up after this recipe, which has remained fragrant and unmoulded for ten years. I keep it in a china jar with a top of the same material—what is known as a "rose jar."

Thus ripened and sweet, the compound makes nice gifts at holidays and birthdays. Once I had a jar hand-painted with dropping rose leaves falling upon the inscription, "Sweets to the sweet."

Will correspondents who have written lately on this subject accept this as a reply to their queries?

Tried and True

Will you accept a few tried and never-failing recipes which may do somebody some good?

(1) A cloth wet with kerosene will clean the wringer.

(2) Chloride of lime will clean a white enameled sink. Wet the lime with cold water and let it stand for a few minutes before pouring into the sink. You may use the same cleanser and disinfectant in the bathroom.

(3) Try this way of pickling cucumbers:

Dissolve half a pint of rock salt in one gallon of strong, pure cider vinegar. Put in the cucumbers and cover with horseradish or with grapevine leaves. Keep the cucumbers and leaves under the vinegar. Do not scald the vinegar. The pickle will keep for a year in a common stone jar.

(4) For gapes in chickens: Roll a tiny pinch of fine-cut tobacco into a bit about the size of a grain of wheat and push it down the chicken's throat. It will give instant relief.

(4) For bloat in cattle, horses, etc.: Dissolve three tablespoonfuls of baking soda in a quart of warm sweet milk. A sure cure.

The Exchange is most interesting, and although I am more than threescore and ten years old, I am not too old to learn many things.

S. E. W. (Battle Creek, Mich.).

No human being to whom God continues the gift of unclouded reason is ever too old to learn. The reason so many are of a contrary opinion is that with the advance of age we are disposed to give over the habit of learning, and the mental muscles grow stiff with disuse. If one never walked, one would be lame within a week.

An Englishwoman's Recipe

There appeared in the Exchange some time ago directions for making cheese. The paper containing the article has been lost. Dare I ask for another copy?

I am one of your scholars in cookery, and very proud am I of my "Marion Harland Cook Book," compiled from your interesting columns.

B. B. (Stuttgard, Ark.).

I have scruples as to the propriety of taking the space from other matters that will be consumed by the cheese recipe. (Which, by the way, I do not recollect as having had a previous appearance in the Exchange.) But I condense from "Common Sense in the Household" rules for making cheese in small quantities, which were given to me by an Englishwoman forty years ago. I know the recipe to be good, inasmuch as it has been tried once and again by competent housewives and pronounced upon favorably. And I am honestly anxious to oblige you.

Homemade Cheese.

Stir two tablespoonfuls of rennet into a gallon of milk warm from the cow. Cover, and set in a warm place to form. In forty-five minutes it should be a solid curd. Drain off the whey; put the dry curd into a linen bag and hang up to drip. Press now and then to get out the moisture. When no more will come, chop the dry curd fine and turn into a clean bag of finer texture than the first. Have ready a small round box with holes bored close together in the bottom. Put bag and contents into this and press down hard. The top of the box should slip into the inside and fit down upon the cheese. Lay heavy weights upon the top and leave it for an hour. The bag should be of the same shape and size as the box, and be dipped in cold water before the curd goes in.

When the hour is up, turn out the cheese and chop again very fine, salting to taste. Have ready a clean, fresh cloth; wet it and pack in the curd. Baste a round piece of cloth upon the top of the bag, fitting it smoothly, and refill the box and cover before fitting this bag and contents into it. Put the cheese under a still heavier weight and leave it for twelve hours. Then take it out, strip off the cloth and rub the cake over with salt. Fit on a clean wet cover and put it again under press, now for sixteen hours. You have now a cake that looks like the real thing. Trim off rough edges and put back under press in a clean cloth. Do not remove the weight now for twenty-four hours. Strip off the last cloth then and rub the cake well with butter. Put into a wire safe in a cool place. Rub daily with butter for a week, wiping clean each time before applying the butter and turning every morning. When the week is up omit the buttering and wipe daily with a coarse cloth for a month.

Your cheese will then be eatable, and very good. It will be far better in six months if kept in a box and turned once a week, wiping it off each time.

If this process seem intolerably tedious, please note that very little time is consumed in the actual work. A few minutes each morning will be enough.

The richer the milk the better the cheese. "Skim milk cheese" is proverbially tough and insipid.

Housekeeping Helps

A GOOD furniture polish may be made of paraffine, oil and turpentine. Kerosene, too, is very good, while crude oil may be used to darken wood that has not been varnished.

If you overboil potatoes, you can drain off the water and dry them out over the fire. Afterward they can be mashed and beaten in the usual way.

Brasses take a most beautiful polish if washed in a mixture made of one ounce of alum and a pint of lye, boiled together and used while still warm.

Worn brooms or whisks may be dipped into hot water and uneven edges trimmed with shears. This makes the straws harder, and the trimming makes the broom almost as good as new.

Possibilities of the Breadbox

THE breadbox is one of the ever-present problems with the housekeeper. While the average woman knows that waste accompanies the purchase of too much bread, she realizes the necessity for a constant fresh supply if those dependent upon her are to be kept cheerful at mealtime. Most women do not, however, understand the "possibilities" of the breadbox as an "emergency shelf." There may be made from half-hardened bread many substantial dishes and an equal number of delicacies.

"Given some stale bread, a rolling pin and an oven," said one expert housekeeper and cook, "and I can spread you a table full of dainties."

The rapid cook who is always ready for the fray will keep her stale pieces of bread in a clean bag made of heavy linen. The breadbox is not their proper place, because they interfere with the pleasant taste of the fresher loaves and because the same bread kept in a closed receptacle will invariably mould. This habit of rolling the stale bread into crumbs ready to use at least once a week is only a decent precaution against the hurried meal and the unexpected guest. These crumbs should be kept in a closed fruit jar, and should be turned out into an open pan at least every two weeks and dried in the oven, or they will collect a dampness.

The cakebox comes under the same head, and is just as insistent in its demand for frequent recognition. Cake crumbs, too, are a valuable addition to the emergency store. They may be made into many delicious boiled and steamed puddings.

Bread Croustades.

Cut stale bread into circles, squares, ovals and triangles. Remove carefully the centers and fry the cups a delicate brown. Fill them with creamed sweetbreads, oysters, veal or peas.

Chocolate Pudding.

Soak one cup of stale bread and one of stale cake crumbs in four cups of scalded milk for thirty minutes. Melt two squares of chocolate in a saucepan over boiling water, add one-quarter of a cup of sugar, and squeeze into this a little of the milk from the crumbs and milk, so that this chocolate mixture will pour. Add it to the bread mixture, with an additional quarter cup of sugar. Then add one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, one-half cup salted, blanched and shredded almonds, one teaspoonful of vanilla and lastly two beaten eggs. Pour into a buttered dish and bake in a moderate oven one hour. To be served with cream or hard sauce.

A Refrigerator Box

A DELIGHTFUL delusion is the rustic window box when used as a fall and winter refrigerator for the invalid's room. There is no difficulty when the room boasts a back window overlooking some courtyard, for it offers ample opportunity for a "game box," if one has not already been hung from the outside windowsill; but the front window, overlooking the street, presents a problem to the nurse, who would, if she dared, stand a continual milk bottle in view of the opposite neighbors. Unfortunately, she too often dares, and it might be well if she were converted to the use of the rustic box. It is placed below the windowsill or on it, and, to all appearances, it is but an unused window-box. A lid may even be hinged to the box, and it will be found serviceable except during the hottest weather.

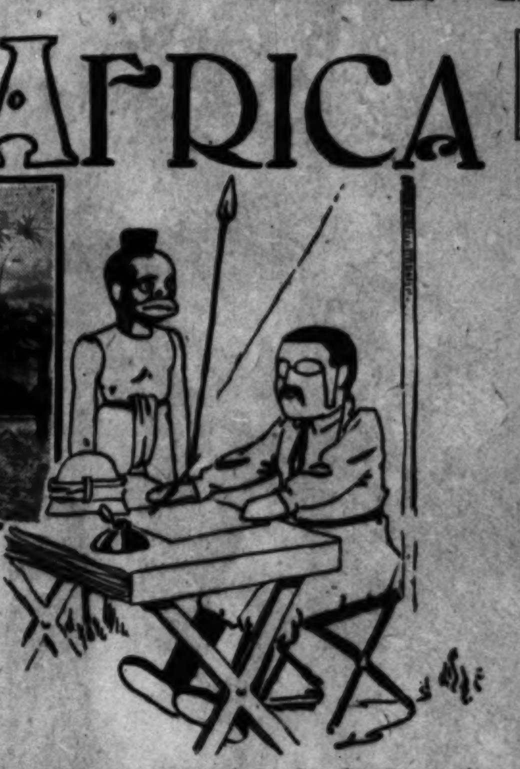
BWANA HUMPTO in AFRICA

"ALL WAS QUIET IN BWANA HUMPTO'S CAMP AT KAPETI PLAINS"



By Raber Mundorf

ONE of the native porters fell and was very nearly squashed under the heavy case he bore. Then Photo Humpto took a snapshot. A Chacma baboon, untrue to the instinctive shyness of his kind, screamed insults in monkey language, as he perched amid the fronds of a palm tree. Photo Humpto took another snapshot. Otherwise all was quiet in Bwana Humpto's camp at Kapeti Plains.

Carriers unpacked kegs, boxes, sacks and woven reed baskets. Mules, thus relieved of burdens, cropped the long, lush grass contentedly. In front of the tent, over which an American flag waved, sat Bwana Humpto, sorting his hunting kit and cleaning his rifle. Elephant Hunter chatted with him, while the slumbering Trappo cheerfully contributed snores to their conversation.

"Speaking of snores," said Dr. Pillo to Photo, "here is a clever verse for you to memorize:

"No doubt you've heard some people say,
'He like a lion roars';
But Trappo has a better way,
He like a lion snores."

"Shall I copy this verse for you?" asked the Doctor.

"Oh, Doctor; I would not put you to such trouble for all the world," the boy replied, gratefully. Then Photo Humpto took a snapshot. Trappo's snores made a beautiful picture.

There now loped into camp a native hunter whom Gooboo, headman of the porters, had sent out to look for game. Malu, the hunter, reported that many herds of antelope were browsing nearby. Doctor Pillo and Taxidermo peered through field glasses in the direction pointed out by Malu. Skirting the edge of the forest, they sighted past a clump of teak trees toward the hills beyond. Countless numbers of antelope they observed. Then Photo Humpto took a look.

A long time Photo gazed, enraptured with this spectacle. His eye caught a small herd of roan antelopes. Big, brown fellows they were, with massive horns sweeping back like scimiters.

"Wouldn't Santa Claus be pleased to have a team of them to draw his sleigh! They beat reindeer all to hollow!" exclaimed the lad.

VERY CAREFULLY THE HUNTING PARTY STALKED THEIR ANTELOPE

(Photographs posed by figures of Humpty Dumpty Circus.)

Dashing up to Bwana Humpto, he cried:

"Father, won't you please have the men capture that herd of antelope yonder? I want to tame them and teach them to pull a little cart, so I can travel as a Santa Claus to where Gooboo's tribe lives and give to the little children lots of presents with which I shall fill the wagon. I might even have a Christmas tree upon which to hang the mirrors, beads, pieces of colored glass, fragments of pretty calico and other such gimcracks. It would be a splendid treat!"

Bwana Humpto considered the matter, and finally agreed to do as his son had asked. A hunting party of expert marksmen was formed. Very carefully the hunters stalked their game. Taking advantage of every rock, every bush, they crept forward against the wind. No scent frightened the animals; no sound warned them of the enemy's approach.

Suddenly the sound of six rifle shots rang out, and Photo Humpto took a snapshot. Six roan antelopes pitched to the ground. But they were not killed. Obedient to Bwana Humpto's instructions, the hunters had aimed so that the bullets merely grazed the heads of the animals at the base of their horns; therefore, the antelopes were only stunned.

Photo rushed forward, commanding the natives to securely bind the legs of the antelopes with cords. There Bwana Humpto left him and made his way back to camp, in the hope that other game might be bagged. But giraffe, wildebeest, waterbuck, hartbeest, zebra, duikerbok and the other creatures they had seen were now in full flight. Bwana Humpto was fortunate in shooting a single Grant's gazelle, a graceful little fellow with large horns.

Meanwhile, Photo set the natives to work upon the construction of a cart. The antelopes appeared so gentle when they opened their eyes and looked about them, that the boy was determined to drive them that very day.

When the tiny wagon was completed, he harnessed the animals with stout strips of rhinoceros hide, seized the reins and climbed into the cart. All the people of the camp assembled to witness his departure.

"Get up!" yelled Photo, as he cracked a whip. The antelopes "got up." They madly tore over rocks; they dashed over the uneven plateau at breakneck speed. Santa Claus' reindeer never went half so fast.

But was Photo happy? He was not. He hadn't time to think about it, except to wonder whether he were in the cart or out of it; but he was certain that he wasn't enjoying himself. On toward the jungle flew the Santa Claus team.

Unnumbered horrors! Directly in the path of the wagon loomed a great rhinoceros, who had come forth to see what all the fun was about. Three of the antelopes strained to go to the left; three tugged frantically toward the right. Traces parted, the antelopes went their desired ways, but Photo was thrown high in the air.

Photo Humpto continued his journey, now, however, on the back of the rhino. The huge fellow coughed angrily for a moment, and then feeling that matters were wrong somehow, lumbered over the plain.

"Oh, I think it is really preposterous
For a rider to ride a rhinoceros;
He might topple off
If the creature should cough—
Yes, it's safer to swim in the Bosphorus!"

But Photo Humpto forgot the little verse. He also forgot to thank the doctor.

The rhino's course led him through the camp. This would not have benefited Photo, however, had not the beast passed close to the palm tree to which a Chacma baboon still clung. Taking pity upon the unfortunate boy, the baboon stretched forth a long arm and swept Photo from the back of the rhinoceros. Photo heartily thanked the kind Chacma; then, in answer to the queries of those who asked if he was hurt, he said:

"No; there's no harm done save to my Santa Claus plan."

And he cried, reproachfully:

"But why did no one take a snapshot of me during my thrilling ride!"

(The third Bwana Humpto story will appear next week.)

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS.

TO CONRAD BURGESS, a member of a boys' secret society which at each weekly meeting appoints to one of its members some task, falls the duty of making a journey to and from San Francisco within six months. Refusal to act or failure to perform means expulsion from the circle as a coward. Taking the sentence seriously, the lad steals away at midnight, spends the night in a wood and sets out at daylight in company with Bugs, a tramp, whom he meets and who shares his food. They cross a river on a raft, and after a day's tramping obtain a good meal and night's lodging from a kind farmer. After breakfast the two board a freight. Bugs is able to give valuable advice on the best methods of freight riding. When their destination is reached, they elude the trainmen and make for a nearby house. This, Bugs explains, is a haven provided especially for hobos. Inside are gathered a number of men, who, after a hearty supper, spend the evening in exchanging stories of tramp life. Conrad passed a sleepless night, but in the morning is ready to start again for the railroad. A glance at the engineer of a freight locomotive strangely excites Bugs, who mutters of vengeance for some previous wrong, and then springs into the cab, shouting to Conrad to follow. Another moment and they are speeding away from the wondering engineer.

Overtaken by a fast passenger locomotive, the twain leave the cab and elude the railroad detectives who are on their trail by crossing a lake to a pleasure park. Here they are discovered, but Bugs overpowers the detectives, binding them upon wooden animals of an unused carrousel. Conrad and his companion are offered a ride on a railway handcar. They drop off near a town and adopt disguises. Entering the town from different directions, they endeavor to secure food. Conrad is shown a woodpile and invited to work for his meal.

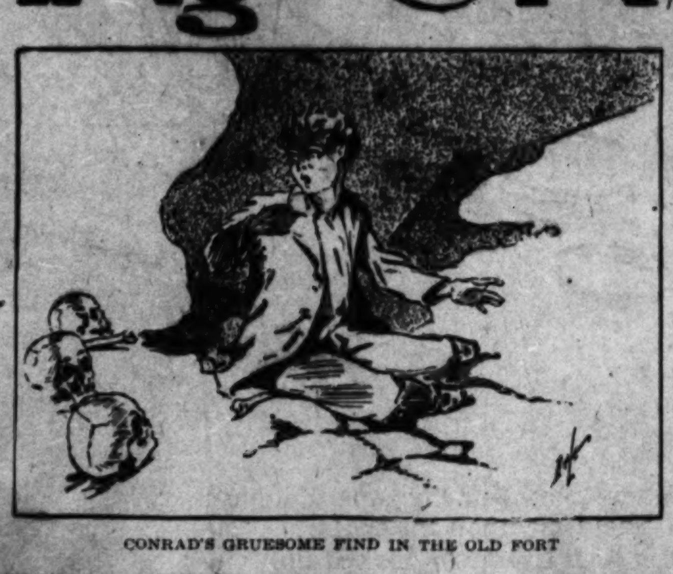
CHAPTER V.

A DASH FOR THE WEST.

CONRAD looked at the huge woodpile in dismay.

"Wonder if the lady expects me to chop and saw all this before she gives me anything to eat," he muttered.

"Sure she does," replied a voice, and Conrad turned to find standing at his elbow a sandy-haired, freckled-faced boy of his own age.



CONRAD'S GRUESOME FIND IN THE OLD FORT

"An' you might as well do it, 'cause if you don't I'll hev to myself," continued the lad. "I'm going over to t'other end o' town to the railroad shops with pa's lunch. It's too far to come home for dinner, but ma's packed him a bucket. Betcher anything yuh want that he'll be eatin' before you do."

No longer could Conrad endure the tantalizing smile of the other lad. And, fearing he would starve if he had to wait for food as long a time as the boy promised, he made a desperate grab for the dinner pail, wrested it from its owner and dashed full tilt out the gate.

The sandy-haired chap gave chase immediately, but, driven by fear of the consequences should he be captured, Conrad bent and doubled through streets and alleyways of the town until he lost his pursuer. Then gaining the open country, he made his way toward the big tree which was the trysting place for Bugs and himself.

Soon the tramp made his appearance. He was covered from head to foot with black dust.

"What in the world have you been doing?" asked the boy.

Bugs wearily lighted a pipe as he responded:

"Confounded mean people wouldn't give any handouts free, so I had to work in a coalyard for 50 cents. Shoveling coal on to coal carts ain't easy work, an' I guess I earnt muh money, all righty. But, say, bo, did you git anything?"

The other produced the pail, from which he had not yet taken anything, because he had wished to share it with his companion. Bugs, however, urged him to eat, saying that he had already spent 25 cents for a meal and that he had saved the other twenty-five for Conrad, in case the lad failed to obtain victuals.

"An' swaller in a hurry, too," warned Bugs. "I was afraid them there detectives might be still starvin' there on the merry-go-roun', they're so durned stoopid; an' not wishin' to be hung, I jus' dropped a hint at the coalyard an' then bolted. Some one'll likely set 'em loose now, an' we'll have to make ourselves purty scarce."

Acting upon the hint, Conrad swallowed most of the contents of the pail, carefully tucking the little that remained into his pockets. Together they made for the other side of the town, taking a circuitous route in order to escape attention.

In the railroad yards beyond they had the good fortune to discover an open box car. Into it they clambered without detection and stowed themselves in the far end. There being nothing better to do, both fell asleep.

When the boy awoke it was pitch dark within the car, which was jolting heavily over the rails. Bugs still slept, however, so Conrad remained quiet, wondering where he was going now. After a time he, too, passed into dreamland. He was wakened by his companion roughly shaking him and crying, huskily:

"Say, little pardner, we're in a mighty bad hole. They've locked this box car on us, an' no one knows when it'll be opened. It might be a month. You kin see what we're up ag'inst."

The sliding doors were securely fastened; there was no question about that. Daylight could be seen through chinks, but no one was in hearing distance. The two shouted and pounded on the sides of the car without avail.

The greater part of the day was spent in this cheerless fashion. Between them were shared the few morsels Conrad had saved from the preceding day. But the lad suffered intensely from thirst, as never before had he endured such a hardship. The tramp was tougher and therefore minded the privation less, but he also was desperate indeed when there was a bump and the box car, which, ever since dawn, had been on a siding, was coupled with an engine.

This seemed encouraging. Yet the trainmen did not hear the cries of the prisoners. For several hours the car traveled. It came to a standstill finally, to the great joy of Bugs and Conrad, and the doors were unlocked. They forgot caution in their desire to gain freedom, and as a result were very nearly arrested.

But they managed to escape, forthwith making for the nearest eating house, where they consumed the most that 25 cents would buy.

"This is Chicago," explained Bugs, while they gulped down the food with keenest relish; "do you wanter stop off 'ere for a little bit?"

"No, I'd rather not," replied the boy. "You see, I've got to make San Francisco and return just as soon as I can, and I don't want to risk any delay."

This was true enough. Yet the most important reason was that Conrad was heartily sick of the rough life of tramping, and wished to complete his trip as soon as possible, in order to reach home and comfort.

Bugs good-naturedly listened to the lad's request, and graciously complied with it. That very evening they were en route for Denver. The journey was not to be made without incident. Riding upon the rods of a freight, they desired to snatch a moment's rest at one of the stopping places, and so left their positions. When the train was again ready to move, Bugs suggested that they crawl into a gondola car, where he was sure they would not be molested at this stage of the route. Unfortunately for their plans, the brakeman was conscientious. Starting upon a tour of investigation, he found the adventurers. Bugs refused to "get off," and there was a pitched battle. Finally, at the next station the tramp and Conrad were forced to beat a hasty retreat.

"It's fierce the way people don't go mindin' their own business," grumbled Bugs. "But, anyhow, I know an' old tumbledown fort that ain't in use now. It'll be a dandy place for a snooze. We can foot it to town tomorrow."

He led the way to their sleeping quarters and Conrad followed. The ruins of the fort were found without trouble. In a sheltered nook they settled themselves for slumber. But Conrad was restless. He tossed about until he thought it well to examine some curious hard-feeling objects that formed his bed.

"Do you mind giving me a light, Bugs?" asked he. "I'm curious to know what these things are."

The match sputtered, then flamed up, and the lad gazed upon what was in his hands.

"Christopher Columbus! Human bones!" he exclaimed, in horror.

Most prone to ridicule
Was poor old stupid Lancelot,
An antiquated mule.
To calculate how old he was
No person would attempt;

That she loved him he was aware,
That he loved her she knew.
Like "Mary's lamb" he followed her

But Nurse objected so.

But Ezra swelled his chest
And said no bears would bother her

Or even make me run."

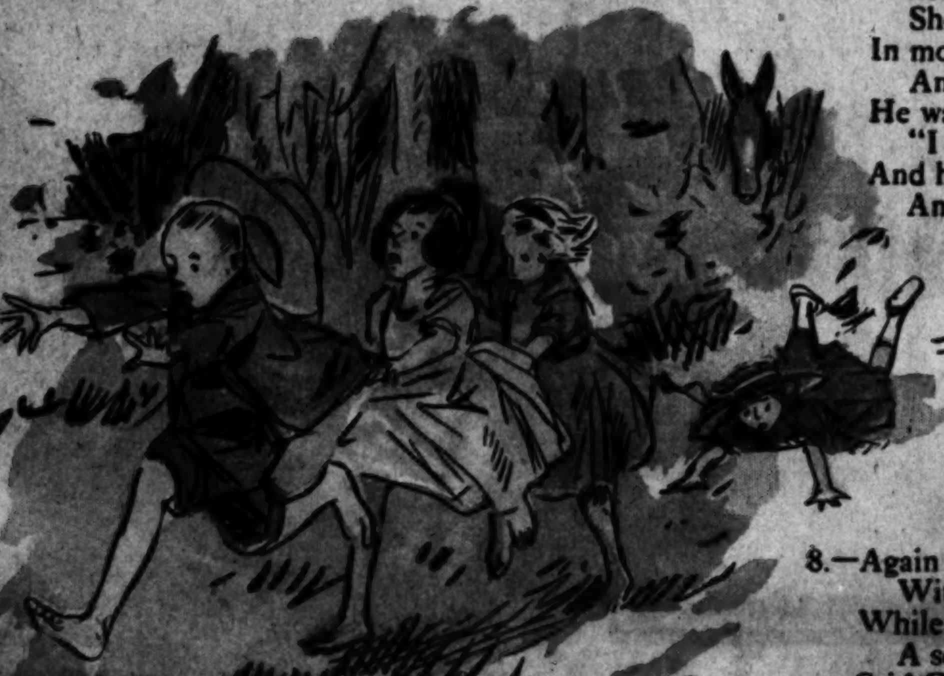
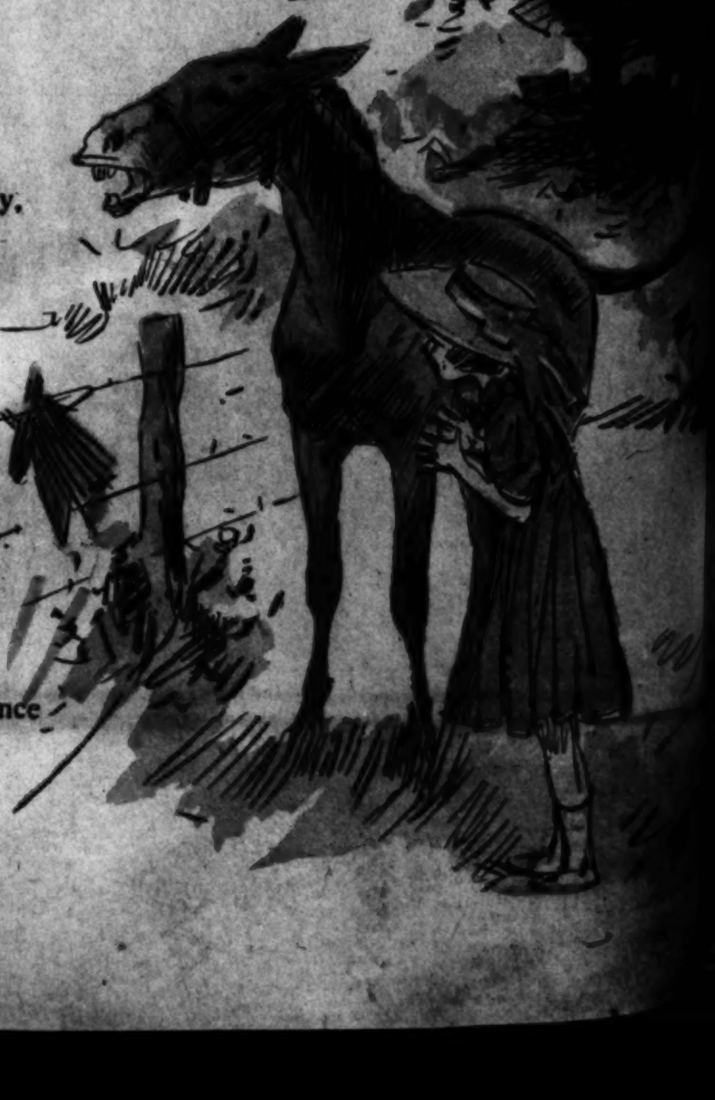
With picnic sundries left behind,
In volatile stampede,
The shrieking children rushed away,
With Ezra in the lead.





7.—When Cynthianna fell she thought
She'd die upon the spot;
In mortal terror she looked up
And saw old Lancelot.
He wagged his ears and seemed to say,
"I thought you'd all rejoice
And have no fear when I was near,
And recognize my voice."

8.—Again he raised his fearsome voice
With shrill, derisive note
While nibbling from a barbed wire fence
A scrap of Ezra's coat.
Said Cynthia, "No living beast

I guess our poor old 'Lancy' here
Is one that he forgot."

In America fully embraced the new order, and taught as Christ had taught His disciples to bedience to the governor of their country, in their duties as citizens, and there found their limit in politics as churches. The duties of the citizens were to be performed as citizens, not as members of a church.

This is the natural order of things. Worldly governments are human institutions, organized by men for the safety of society. Their laws are human laws, and the violation of them is a crime. The state appeals to the intellect, not to the conscience. The state is not careful as to whether a person is conscientious or not, and does not seek deeply as to motives generally. The question is, Does a person understand the requirements made by the law, and is he capable of realizing that he is responsible to society for his acts? He may entertain any opinions or views he sees fit to harbor. The state will not proceed against him until he puts his creed into concrete form, or acts. Then if the act violates a statute law, the man is punished. States, even in Christian times, have made laws which it would be a sin for a Christian man to obey. States have left things free to do by law which by the moral code of the Christian church are sins of the most deadly kind. As the state appeals to the intellect, the church appeals to the conscience. Human laws are human conventions. A man may be morally blunt. He may be unable to see that an act is wrong from any moral standpoint. He may have no conscience at all. He may think the statutes protecting private rights in property are bad laws, unjust and harmful. So long as he only thinks so, the state will not move to molest him. But no matter how deep-seated his conviction may be, let him take his neighbor's horse and use it as his own, or put his hand in his neighbor's pocket and take his money, and the state will punish him for violating the statute. He may take a bottle of liquor home and get drunk; until recently he might beat his wife, and can still do so in some places, and the state will not proceed against him. He has violated no law of that community.

The state has little compassion for the criminal. It is usually a cold matter of law. A man may commit a crime when he is drunk. Justices usually will not allow that plea to shield the lawbreaker. He is usually told he should not have been drunk. But drunk or sober, he must obey the law and take the consequences.

The church deals with divine laws, which are supposed to embody immutable and eternal justice. They are not right because God imposes them; He imposes them because they are right. They are not changeable, but are the same to us that they were to the first man on the earth. The church appeals to a man's conscience, to his heart and affections, rather than to his intellect. Sin is merely error. It leads men in the wrong directions, interferes with their spiritual development, leads to spiritual degeneracy and makes the man not unsafe to society as the criminal in the eyes of the state is, but unfit for the citizenship which is in heaven, and for companionship with those who are God-like, holy, righteous in mind and soul. The woman taken in the act of unchastity broke a Jewish law, and one of those in the Decalogue, but the Christ was not severe in judgment. He thought of the weakness of human will, the strength of passion. By the Jewish law she would have been stoned to death. The Founder of the new religion said gently to her: "Go and sin no more." For the very respectable, law-abiding, but selfish, self-conceited Pharisee there was held out no hope of forgiveness.

We have the American Constitution which separates the church from the state, and seeks to confine each to its own sphere. We believe this is a return to the conditions meant to prevail in the institution of the church by its Founder. But it is hard to keep things on this wise basis. Politicians are constantly confusing crime with sin, and seeking to make the state supplementary to the church in its work, or to draw the church into an unholy alliance with the state that the party in power may use the church as a political asset. And the preacher is not infrequently tripped into restoring that bad connection, which Christ severed, which Constantine restored, and which the founders of our republic again severed. It is bad for the state and worse for the church. It is a degradation to the politician and works practical destruction to the preacher. The statesman never so sets the ages backward and the pastor never makes such an unholy alliance. The true prophet, the faithful pastor, clings closely to the Word of God, which he seeks to interpret so as to lead sinners to the foot of the cross where they find pardon and peace and new life. The true statesman knows that human government is for the protection of society, and that this sphere is bounded by the lines which inclose what individuals have given up to the government in order that society may be safe. The rest the individual has reserved as his own right, and it is tyranny to go into that field, no matter whether the invasion be by a majority of millions or a minority of one.

What Is Education?

There is a great discussion on popular education going on just now. The question at issue seems to be whether education is a process to develop the growing mind or one to hammer in youthful brains a curriculum passing the sardine system of packing. To the lay mind the question is a simple one, but to the educational expert the lay attitude is a rank mixture of ignorance, Philistinism and heresy. To the expert mind the only simple thing in the question is the lay duty in the matter—to pay the freight.—[Baltimore American.

Sermons in Song.

"Ye shall have a song, as in the night, when a holy solemnity is kept.—[The Prophecy of Isaiah xxx, 29.

Night has her song, when day's voice has been stilled,
When toil's last bugle call has forth been shrilled;
Night sends her song on breezes faint with musk
Along the blurring avenues of dusk.

Then die the strident chords of forge and mill,
And softer strains float downward from the hill;
Soft shadows hush the tumult of the streets,
A whisper comes that echoes and repeats.

The dark drifts in with slow and stately sweep
And croons the low-toned harmony of sleep,
And spreads about us all its velvet bars
Until we may but look up at the stars.

And then the stars chant in a hundred keys
The wondrous song of all the centuries,
The blended song, eternal and sublime
That pulses with the mystery of time.

It is the song whence spring our sweetest strains,
The song that blessed the breadth of Eden's plains,
The song great solus on a lonely height
Have heard some falling, falling through the night.

And no man knows it, neither note nor word,
And no man knows when its great strains he heard,
But into each man's heart sometime it steals
And all its marvel-music then reveals.

Night has her song—across the depths of space
It leaps from some vast, holy, hidden place,
A song of angel sweetness in its tone,
A song of silence, mighty and unknown.

Exaggeration.

[Mrs. Pankhurst has written to the papers to say that the imprisoned Suffragettes have never bitten the Holloway wardresses. It appears that they have only kicked them.]

What taradiddles people tell!
What lies the Press delights in writing!
No Suffragettes, condemned to dwell
In Holloway's most noisome cell,
Have ever made a wardress yell
By biting.
Believe me, this is not the case.
They only kicked her in the face.

It fires my wrath, it stirs my gall,
To note how lies are manufactured!
'Twas not by Suffragettes at all
That, during their most recent brawl,
The office windows in Whitehall
Were fractured.
They threw the bricks—but let that pass—
It was the bricks that broke the glass.

How people do exaggerate!
One fable soon begets another!
For instance, I have heard folks state
That they had seen me throw a plate,
Two dumbbells and a paper weight,
At Mother!
The story is, of course, untrue.
It was a teapot that I threw.

'Tis also false, I do declare,
That (as the papers said on Monday)
I seized my hostess by the hair,
At luncheon in Cadogan Square,
And hurled her headlong down the stair,
Last Sunday.
(I dragged her down one flight, I own,
She fell the other five, alone.)

O fellow-Pressmen, pray confine Yourselves to Facts, sincere, convincing,
Before the public takes that line
Which makes the Lan[s]downers decline
To swallow things without a sign
Of "wincing!"

A single letter you transpose,
And Winston into "Minced 'Un" grows!

Uncle Sam in Manchuria. By Frank G. Carpenter.

THE TRADE DOOR OPEN.

AMERICAN COTTON, KEROSENE AND TOBACCO ARE SELLING.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SHAN-HAI-KWAN, 1909.—Has Uncle Sam an open door to Manchuria? I have asked this question of our American consuls at every city during my trip through the country, and the answers are that he has. The Japanese have tried to push their trade in every possible way, and they are doing some things contrary to the best business ethics. Nevertheless, there is no discrimination as to the admission of goods. The Chinese are allowed to buy and sell as they please, and if there are railroad rebates for Japanese goods they have been so far kept secret. I understand that the Japanese cotton exporters have recently adopted a lottery scheme for the sale of their sheetings. In every so many packages of goods they are putting notes for small sums of money which will be cashed on demand, with a view to inducing the Manchurian merchants to buy the goods on the strength of these prizes. This has also been done in Shanghair. It is being denounced by the chambers of commerce.

Another questionable transaction is the shipping in of America flour under Japanese trade-marks, and in packages made in Japan. The flour is brought across the Pacific to Yokohama; it is there repacked and shipped to the north and sold as Japanese. The trade-marks are the same as those to be adopted by a new flouring mill which the Japanese are constructing on the railroad north of Mukden; our flour is thus being used to build up a trade for that mill. The Manchus and Chinese are noted for their faith in trade-marks. If they find an article all right they will stick to it, and the trade-mark does much to sell the goods. For this reason there are old store signs in China which bring a hundred and sometimes a thousand dollars apiece.

American Flour in Manchuria.

American flour is popular here, but it will be long before a great market can be created. There are about 16,000,000 people in Manchuria, but the majority of men are too poor to eat wheat or rice. They live upon sorghum seed and other varieties of millet, and wheat is not one of the regular grains sold in the market. Prof. E. C. Parker, one of our agricultural experts, who has just been traveling over Northern Manchuria, tells me that the farmers raise wheat here and there, but only enough for their own consumption. If they have a surplus they will load a half-ton upon a Chinese cart and carry it to the mill. It usually takes them several days to get to the nearest one, and the wheat barely pays the freight.

At present some wheat is raised about Harbin, but the business of the mills there is falling off, and it cannot go on profitably with their present capitalization. Prof. Parker says that the flour business of Harbin is in a bad way. It had a mushroom growth through the war, when the mills were running day and night to supply the Russian army, and got big prices for all they could grind. They were backed by the government and were operated at enormous cost. There were twelve of them, all equipped with the finest of modern machinery, much of which came from America. They then ground something like 16,000 barrels per day and had no trouble in disposing of their product. As a result the stock went sky-high and the Siberian Jews who owned the mills sold out at a big profit. Since then, the demand for flour has declined, seven of the mills have stopped working, and the five now in operation are producing altogether less than 1000 barrels per day. The mills, which are heavily mortgaged, have now gone into the hands of the Russo-Chinese Bank, which is not able to manage them at a profit under the present conditions. A thorough reorganization will have to be made before they can compete with our flour.

Manchurian Wheat Lands.

In the meantime the Japanese will soon have a new mill at Tiehling, and they will build other mills along their railroad. The grain possibilities are enormous; and, as the country develops, Manchuria is bound to raise all the flour she can use, and a great deal for export to China. As it is now, the valley of the Liao River exports $10,000,000 worth of food products per year. The country drained by that river is about as big as the State of Missouri, and almost every acre can be cultivated. Along the railroad between Mukden and Dalny there are farms all the way. Today the principal crops are beans and millet, but the soil will raise wheat.

The Sungari River, the Mississippi of Northern Manchuria, drains a district twice as large as the Liao watershed, and the whole of it is adapted to wheat. Three varieties are already grown in a small way, and the production in the best districts is about thirty bushels per acre. The grain is sown in April and harvested in September and October. It is tied up in bundles and stacked near the villages. The grain is thrashed upon a thrashing floor with stone rollers, by donkeys led by children. It is win

Colonization a Failure.

s I can learn, the attempted Japanese coloni- Manchuria has been a failure. Mr. Okabe, the Consul at Mukden, tells me his people are fast k home and that they do not find Manchuria hem. Said he:

iderable criticism of the Japanese meth- d in Manchuria. The natives claim that the re exploiting them, and that they are ery turn. One instance of this was as to lighting of Mukden. The railway station from the city and the city itself has its plant erected by the capital of the Man- ese. The Japanese Railway Company has plant at the depot, and, according to its it cannot extend its wires beyond its own or supply the current to the general public. the Japanese recently began to erect poles to Mukden. It was pushing its wires right n when the Chinese objected. After a great sion the work was stopped, but the Japa- d that the Chinese pay them something like what they had done or for erecting less than of poles. The Chinese had to submit.

e military occupation of Mukden a large apanese swarmed into the city and took pos- ses they found vacant, and in some cases the Chinese tenants. Many forced the y them to move, and among others the l had to pay $500 to get the occupants of ple to vacate in order that the building d for the consulate. d Telegraphs.

e say that the Japanese are monopolizing gh business. During the war they con- itary lines in every direction. They connected all the important cities and villages, and when peace was declared they had inclosed Southern Manchuria in a network of wires which was controlled by the Japanese government. The Chinese claim that as the war is now over, all lines except those necessary for the railroads should be done away with. To this Japan has at last agreed, but it insists that China pay $25,000 for the lines, and at the same time a Japanese telegraph messenger shall be in each of the city offices in order to be able to telegraph in Japanese. This makes the Chinese pay for the lines, and at the same time practically keeps them in the hands of the Japanese.

Another story of Japanese encroachment is told in connection with the railroad proposed from the South Manchurian line to Kirin. The latter is a city of about 100,000, situated on the Sungari River about eighty miles from the Dalny-Harbin Railroad. A line of railway connecting the two would be valuable. There is already an enormous trade, but the goods go in carts and the freight rate is something like $16 a ton.

The Chinese proposed to build that road, and had their civil engineers go over the line, and by their report it would cost $4,000,000 to build. They were ready to begin work when the Japanese blocked the construction by means of their objection to the Fakuman road, saying they would release that objection if they were given a half-interest in the road to Kirin. The Japanese sent their engineers over the road, and from them got a report that it would cost $9,000,000 to build it. This was more than double the estimate of the Chinese engineers, and as it was a part of the agreement that most of the money was to be borrowed from Japan, if it had gone through the Japanese would have secured a loan of over $4,000,000 and would have had the most of the money above the cost of construction as per the Chinese estimate. The figures of the Chinese engineers had, however, been forwarded to Peking, and the officials there insisted on the estimates being cut down until they approximated $5,000,000. It has been decided to build the road on these estimates, and the Japanese will have a share in the control until the money is paid. In the meantime the Fakuman road will be built.

American Goods in Manchuria.

The time has come when the United States should push its trade in Manchuria. The people are just beginning to know foreign goods and buy them, and from now on there will be a great increase in the native consumption. All sorts of farming implements will be needed for the development of this great agricultural empire, and our plows should be in great demand. The Germans are already selling cheap imitations of American tools around Harbin. They get $25 for a plow which could be easily landed on the ground and sold at a profit at $10 or $12.

As the wheat lands are developed reapers will be needed, and for the large government farms thrashers and steam engines. A British firm recently sold four large Howard steam plows, shipping them north from Newchwang; the board of agriculture at Mukden has on its experimental farm American reapers, harrows, harvesters and plows.

A large part of the flour-milling machinery already in use is of American make, and the rolling stock of most of the railways is American. When the South Manchurian Railroad was reconstructed, the Japanese gave us one order which amounted to about 60,000 tons. It was for steel rails and bridging material. At the same time, over 2000 of our freight cars, 200 locomotives and something like 200 other cars were imported.

The new Pullmans, which are now being used on the southern end of the Trans-Siberian Railroad are by far the finest sleeping-cars of all Asia, and there will be a demand for similar material on the new roads which will soon be constructed. One of these will be the line to Kirin, and another, the rebuilding of the military road which now goes from Mukden to the Yalu River and connects with the Korean system at Antung.

The latter road will undoubtedly pay well, but it will necessitate a bridge across the Yalu, which will probably be made of American materials. The present road is a narrow gauge less than a yard wide, which carries little cars eight feet in length. There are no passenger accommodations whatever, and the freight rates prohibit any large traffic. When this new road has been constructed, the greater part of the travel over the Trans-Siberian to Japan will pass over it, and one will be able to go from Paris to Tokio by rail, with the exception of one night on the ferry from Fusan to Mogi.

American Cotton and Tobacco.

Today our chief exports to Manchuria, outside of railway materials, are cotton, kerosene and tobacco. The Manchurians use about $6,000,000 worth of cotton sheetings every year, and the greater part of these come from the United States. The Japanese, Germans and English are studying the market, but so far we have the lead.

As to tobacco, the American tobacco trust has branches at all the important points along the railroad, and it has just erected a big factory at Mukden, which will make cigarettes and cigars for the Manchurian market. The building covers, perhaps, a quarter of an acre. It is three stories in height, and it hums with American tobacco-making machinery. I understand that experiments in native and American tobaccoes will be attempted, and also that farms will be opened up where American seed will be used. Our experts claim that the soil here is as good as that of Virginia for tobacco raising.

HARRY F, BOWLING.

THE KAISER INTERVIEWED.

A BRITISH REPORTER'S STRATEGY AND WHAT CAME FROM IT.

[John Bull:] How should I approach the august presence of the potential Dictator of Europe? I asked myself the question, and paused for a reply. Folly whispered: "Disguise yourself as a German sausage." That is the wurst of a constitutional leaning toward the absud. "Practice the kow-tow and appear in the garb of a Chinese prince," was the next thought that crept into my mind. But habitual prudence and a proper sense of the fitness of things prevailed. I decided to adopt the semblance of an officer in the British Army. How could I more easily creep into the confidence of the German Emperor?

Making my way to Potsdam, I crawled into the awful presence of the Kaiser.

"Hoch!" he roared, lifting his mailed fist in greeting.

"I don't mind if I do," I replied; "sparkling, for choice. There's a lot of dust in the air between Germany and England. It has given me a proper thirst for hock."

"You mistag me," said His Majesty, hastily; "I did nod say 'hog.' I said 'hoch!'"

"I beg yours," I returned, with due humility; "Können Sie Deutsch sprechen?"

"Ja!" responded the Kaiser.

"Boo!" I replied, bowing. Whereupon the Emperor was gracious enough to extend his hand, which I grasped warmly, and forthwith proceeded to ask a few questions of public interest.

"I have called to interview you on behalf of the only section of the British people worth considering—the readers of John Bull. I have no connection with the Daily Telegraph. You may speak to me without reserve."

"I speag to everybody midout reserve," said the Kaiser emphatically. "I dread nought."

"That reminds me," I proceeded. "What's all this fuss about your naval programme? Why have you decided to build a big fleet?"

"Vhat I mean ish dis," began the Kaiser, brushing the end of his off-side mustache out of his eye; "you Breetish beoble fancy ve are building againsd you. Ve are nod! Ve are simpbly brebaring for der European armageddon, vheech must gome. Darefore, she vill build Dreadnoughts as an additional bregaution."

"So you have no definite designs against England?"

"Zerdainly nod!" was the emphatic reply. "Off gourse, ve mighd find it expedient to invade you ad some future dade; bud you can rely ubon our doing id ass gendly und gonsiderately ass bossible. Der time ish goming vhen all der gondinental bowers vill find demselfs in der melding bot off var! Den, self-breservation mighd gombel Shermany to seize der Breetish Isles. Ja!"

"But the same consideration might compel the British Isles to resist," I hazarded.

"Dat vas so," admitted the Kaiser; "und if she resist sugcessfully, Bridannia vill find herself once more in der bosition off virst vorld bower, as at der glose off der Nabopeonic vars. If she fail, it vill be a gase off 'Goot-by, leedle gurl, goot-by!'"

"We are sure to resist successfully," I declared, warmly.

"Dond be too gonfident," admonished the Kaiser. "Dare a sbirit abroad in your goundry vhich fills me mit joy vhen I dink off mine faderland. Ja! Der voice of der 'leetle Englander' ish heard in your land. Your 'two-bower standard' ish being tinkered mit in a manner very encouraging to mine beople."

"We have ample resources," I declared.

"You may haf—now," responded the Kaiser; "bud you haf gommenced to tags gapital—you haf begun to drain der chief source off your national greadness."

At that moment the German Chancellor hurried into the apartment, and rushing across to the Kaiser, deftly gagged him. Then, turning to me, he made a significant movement with his head and said in a menacing tone: "Voetsack!"

"One moment," I said. "When are you likely to invade us?"

"His Majesty will send you a telegram," replied the Chancellor.

A Boomerang.

"Were you ever in prison?" demanded the prosecuting attorney insinuatingly.

"Yes, sir," admitted the gray-headed witness for the defense.

"Aha! I thought so. And what for, may I ask?"

"Assault and battery with intent to kill."

"And how long were you in prison?"

"Until I escaped, sir."

The prosecutor turned triumphantly to the gentlemen of the jury.

"So, gentlemen," he said, "we have here, as the chief witness for the defense, an ex-convict and fugitive from justice by his own confession!"

He turned again to the witness. "When and where were you in prison, sir?" he sneered.

The old man straightened up and spoke in a strong, clear voice:

"I was captured, sir, at the battle of Fort Harrison on the 29th of September, 1864, and sent to Libby Prison, Richmond. I effected my escape while being transferred to Salisbury, N. C. As to——"

But that was already more than the prosecutor wanted to know.—[Everybody's Magazine.

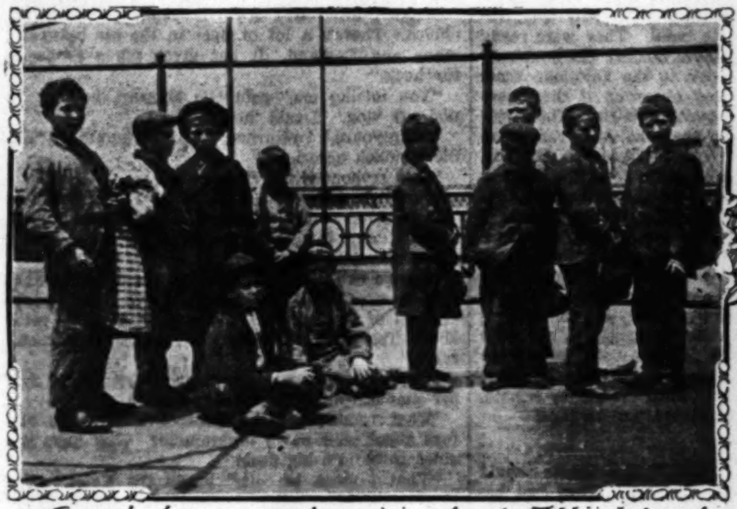
Slavery of the Children.

GIRLS AND BOYS IMPORTED AND HELD IN BONDAGE.

BUREAU OF IMMIGRATION TRYING TO PUT A STOP TO THE BUSINESS—MOST OF THE BOY SLAVES ARE BOOTBLACKS—GIRL SLAVES WHO LABOR IN THE COTTON MILLS OF NEW ENGLAND.

By a Special Contributor.

THE United States Bureau of Immigration has started in to fight the traffic in children of both sexes, who are imported by thousands into the United States to work under conditions of practical enslavement. Large numbers of them labor in the mills of New England. Others, especially in the State of Illinois, are kept in bondage by peddlers who starve and maltreat them. But the places where they are most commonly to be seen are the bootblack shops in our cities, in which the boys employed are Greeks, from the province of Messinia.



Greek boys newly arrived at Ellis Island.

A typical Greek bootblack parlor.

This province of Greece might be called the Bootblack District, most of the boys born there being brought up to the bootblacking trade. A tourist conversing with youths of the craft, who are called "loustroi," in any of the cities of Greece, or in any Turkish city where the population is largely Greek, will find that all of them come from Messinia. It is only within the last few years, however, that the "bosses" who deal in their labor have imported them into the United States.

About ten years ago, certain enterprising Greeks, with a little capital to invest, took a notion to look over the bootblacking field in this country. They saw that it was great and profitable, and that it was occupied almost exclusively by Italians, who maintained booths or chair stands outside of saloons and in other such public places. Possessing a superior shrewdness, together with a highly expert knowledge of the fundamental principles of the "shine" business, the Greeks decided that they would drive the sons of sunny Italy out, and control for themselves this lucrative form of enterprise.

Which they promptly proceeded to do. And, to begin with, they undertook to elevate the business by setting up expensively furnished shops exclusively for bootblacking purposes, choosing locations where rents were high. Customers found it more comfortable and agreeable to have their shoes shined in such places than on the sidewalks, especially in the winter time, and before long, the system being steadily expanded and extended from city to city, the Italians found themselves unable to maintain themselves in competition. Today the latter have been practically displaced by the Greeks, who—that is to say, the slave boys—polish the boots of nearly all town-dwelling Americans.

The success of the Greeks was a foregone conclusion from the outset. Not only had they superior knowledge of the business, but they were able to employ the requisite labor on such terms as to render competition out of the question. The boys who toil in the bootblack "parlors" receive only a nominal wage, and their condition is practically one of slavery. They are half-starved, and are worked almost to death.

Invariably they are lodged and boarded by the "boss," the quarters they occupy being usually filthy and unsanitary. So absolute is the restriction of their liberty that many of these youngsters who have been in the United States three or four years possess no knowledge whatever of the city in which they reside, save as regards the shop in which they labor, their living quarters, and the streets they traverse in going and coming from their work. They have no chance whatever to learn to speak English or to become Americanized. The bosses teach them that if they talk they are liable to be sent back to their native country—that the government is seeking to deport them, but that if they refuse to talk, nobody can interfere with them in any way.

The boys' wages, usually from $120 to $175 a year, are not received by them, but by the parents, or other relatives, in their native country, who have sold their services. Incidentally, they are bound by agreement to turn over to the "boss" all money they get in the way of tips, which goes toward the payment of their board and lodging. Some bosses post notices in their shops at Christmas time and at New Year's, stating that all receipts will go to the boys as a holiday bonus. On this account, customers tip the boys with exceptional liberality, little realizing that every penny of the money will find its way into the yawning pockets of the slave driver.

Now, in order to understand why, even under such conditions, the boys are anxious above all things not to be sent back to their own country, it is necessary that one should comprehend something of the circumstances of life among the peasantry in the Greek province from which they come.

In that country the peasants are living all the time close to the hunger line, and the question whether an expected baby will turn out to be a boy or a girl is one of no little anxiety. A boy is an asset, and his coming into the world is a proper occasion for much merry-making. As soon as he reaches 10 years of age, he is hired out to a roving bootblack boss, or to a peddler. The youngsters farmed out in this fashion are frightfully overworked, and, as a rule, most brutally treated. America, as those of them who are fetched across the water find it, is vastly better than Greece or Turkey.

Nine out of ten of these little slaves are brought hither in violation of the alien contract-labor laws. Formerly large numbers of them were turned back by the immigration authorities. But the "bosses" are shrewd, and have learned how to evade the regulations. Furthermore, they employ clever attorneys to advise them in such matters. The boys, before they leave their native land, are carefully instructed by letter as to what they must say in response to questions on arrival, in order that they may not be sent back—the thing of which, naturally, they have the greatest dread.

The "bosses" obtain fresh supplies of boys sometimes by communicating with relatives of the youngsters already in their employ. Of course they make the necessary arrangements by writing to relatives of their own in Greece, furnishing money and instructions for the shipment of the little fellows. Another method they adopt is to advertise in the newspapers of the Greek provinces, offering "light work" and exceptional wages.

Once in a while the "boss" himself makes a trip to his native province, where during a short stay he goes through certain inexpensive formalities by which he becomes "godfather" to a large number of children in many families. Thus he acquires a footing of pseudo-relationship, which enables him later on to have the first bid in securing the services of the boys. It is a very ingenious scheme, and has the additional advantage of giving him a sort of guardianship right over the youngsters after their arrival in this country—a right which they recognize, at all events, and which augments the surety of his grip upon them.

Meanwhile, the business of importing Greek children of both sexes and of tender age for mills of New England has assumed proportions. These girls and boys brought into the country with the vits in regard to relationship—they to be the sons, daughters, brothers, nieces of the men who bring them their labor—are greatly in demand where they are able to earn almost because their hands are small and quick and dexterous in connecting the weaving-rooms. This is a task performed by grown persons.

Anybody who stands in front of Lowell (Mass.) at 6 o'clock on a week who takes the opportunity thus affor the employés of the cotton mills as they help noticing a great many girls and viously under 12 years of age. Most young children are Greeks and Maced laboring in the mills in defiance of the thanks to fraudulent affidavites in In backing this kind of fraud, steam been extremely active, while a well made a regular business of furnishing of birth certificates, at $5 or $10 end in view.

With such excellent wages obtain that a great deal of money can be lently importing young children to the mills. There are not a few spend their days in saloons, drinking while subsisting on the earnings nephews, or cousins of tender age, their youth and health in the cotton Bureau of Immigration has found to procure the requisite evidence children themselves, if approached, mation, and even run away.

Many Greek boys in this country assistants by peddlers—venders of that is to say—who pay them from them in filthy places usually, and After a breakfast of bread and coffee, usually have nothing to eat all day in the evening, when they are all for themselves. Under these con are cheap; and they are also very going into flats and houses, and by pearance so winning the sympathy induce them to buy.

An Irish Mount Sinai.

WITH THE JULY PILGRIMS ON THE HEIGHTS OF CROAGH PATRICK.

From Manchester Chronicle.

WHO wants to see the religious enthusiasm of medieval days in all its unquestioning faith should witness the annual pilgrimage to Croagh Patrick, the Sinai of Ireland.

Here on the summit of one of Connemara's giant mountain tops, where the clouds stoop to touch the heather, a great concourse of people annually assemble on the last Sunday of July.

From cabin and mansion, from the dingiest of Dublin's dingy back streets as well as from the lawn-fronted and terraced homes where wealth abides and Society dames foregather, from north, sound, east, and west, are come a heterogeneous assemblage all equal in their devotion, all simple in the faith that carries them to the feast of prayer.

Even from the far western States of America from Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and almost every land into which Irish men and women have projected themselves and their faith, representatives are present to take part in the sacred festival.

It was on the summit of Croagh Patrick, a great hoary cone that raises its rugged head more than 2500 feet above Clew Bay, that St. Patrick received the angels who brought him blessing on his work and promised him its success. Here, footsore and fatigued, he rested during Lent, praying and fasting and holding intercourse with the heavens that seem ever to rest on the shoulders of that towering mountain.

Gazing up at the summit from where the town of Westport stands one can almost understand how easy it was for the saint to hold converse with the angels, for surely that mountaintop seems to pierce beyond the clouds. The Book of Armagh says that all the sins of the people, past, present, and future, passed before the eyes of the saint while he rested on his breezy couch—a fact by which the irreverent account for the saint's long stay on that bleak and distinctly uncomfortable perch. Such jests, however, cannot be passed above a whisper in the hallowed precincts of Croagh Patrick, from which, according to authorities, the saint sent the first message of Irish loyalty to Rome.

In the dim and distant long ago a little chapel stood where St. Patrick had rested, and to this sacred shrine more than a thousand years ago the Irish people made pilgrimages as they do today. History recordeth that on the night of March 7, 1113, during a terrible storm, thirty pilgrims perished on the summit—a very natural ending, it will be considered, to an expedition that depended too much upon St. Patrick and too little upon wise weather signs.

It is rather an unfortunate fact that the saint did not always sufficiently protect the interest of his faithful followers, for while O'Rourke Prince of Breffni was absent on a pilgrimage to Croagh Patrick in 1152 his wife eloped with Dermott M'Murrough, the King of Leinster. Moore, the poet, tells us how the Prince felt about it when:

> I looked for the lamp which she told me
> Should shine when her pilgrim returned;
> But though darkness began to enfold me,
> No lamp from the battlement burned.

History tells how the Prince when he discovered that the faithless Devorgilla had made off with the ferocious McMurrough, his sworn enemy, followed the pair, and after duly chastising the co-respondent, so to speak, brought back the woman. Finally McMurrough had to flee to England, but he went back again with the English invaders, and there and then began the connection of the Sassenach with the distressful country. Nobody has ever charged St. Patrick with being a Unionist, but there is no controverting the fact that he was directly responsible for the end of Home Rule in Ireland.

There is ample evidence of the very ancient character of this pilgrimage to Croagh Patrick. In the annals of the Vatican there is testimony of two priests who in 1485 "visited in devout pilgrimage the holy mountain on which St. Patrick fasted forty days and forty nights without earthly food," and there is also the record of Pope Eugene IV, who in 1432 granted "a relaxation of two years and two quarantines" of the purgatorial sufferings of pilgrims who would ascend the mountain on the last Sunday of July and make offerings toward the repair of the little chapel.

This was a chapel apparently built by St. Patrick himself, and in which he celebrated mass. For several centuries two neighboring bishops fought for its possession, as good Christians ought, until finally the Pope granted it to the Archbishop of Tuam. In the penal days, however, the edifice came to grief.

It was only about four years ago that the pilgrimage to Croagh Patrick was revived in a national sense. The lame and the halt, the blind and the deaf, the consumptive, the decrepit, and the deformed had always kept up the custom of praying on the summit for the saint's intercession, and dragging their sores and their afflictions over the place hallowed by his footsteps, and finally returning home full of the faith that is more powerful than youth or medicine. But it was with the coming of Dr. Healy to the Archbishopric of Tuam that the national pilgrimage was introduced. A new chapel was built on the summit, and a new call issued to the people; and now from all parts of the world the pilgrims flock to pay homage at the shrine of the saint.

Not all of the thousands who today climb the torn sides of the mountain know its history or its claims. But none may want for information, for where history and even tradition fail the wonderful Celtic imagination, full of mysticism and superstition, comes in with details that might make the saint blush if he had not himself come to believe in the tales so often repeated and so interestingly varied.

If you express the opinion that St. Patrick smoked cigars, there will be one ready to show you the very ledge of rock with which he flipped off the ashes; if you doubt the visit of the angels they will at once procure the ridge over which they dangled their legs while they gossiped; you can have the print of St. Patrick's foot for the asking, and have a chip off the stone pillow where he laid his head if you want it.

There is, of course, a lake with sacred trout, and the things those fish have done would make their fortune at an exhibition.

But everything is hallowed, every miraculous achievement is the outpouring of an abiding faith that has no limits in time nor distance nor mere conventionality. Amid the rugged, simple grandeur of Connemara there are no impossibilities and no laws of science. Thought is not harnessed to solid facts; imagination is no nag that ambles, but a wild, untamed steed that bears the rider away beyond the horizon of things that are.

One has need of an imagination at this annual pilgrimage, for the scene is not one merely of acts, and words, and materialistic elements. There is a solemn grandeur in it all, in the thousands toiling up the mountainside over wearying roads and pathways from the town of Westport, in the great shaggy form of the mountain cone—a giant among Connemara giants—in the hundred thousand people or more that crowd around the little chapel among the clouds, all tense and silent, full of the solemn emotion of the mountain-top mass over which the spirit of Ireland's patron saint presides.

Though about twenty masses are celebrated in the place on Pilgrimage Day, each service sees thousands kneeling around the chapel outside. These people have no eyes for the grandeur around them, no admiration for the great Atlantic waters stretching far below, with the island gems of Clew Bay set to catch all the glories of a morning sun. But they have the imagination which the casual tourist lacks, they have the traditions that gild everything in colors which paint and pigment cannot catch.

Excursion trains arrive from all parts during the night and morning of the pilgrimage. Many of the pilgrims, declining the comforts of a bed at Westport, make their way to the mountain top on Saturday evening, and there spend the night in prayer and devotion. Custom has prescribed certain forms of devotion for the pilgrims, and during the whole of the night, rosaries and pious ejaculations rise unceasingly to the stars. During the day, the same fervid devotions continue in the same faith that animated the pilgrims more than a thousand years ago.

The masses are celebrated from 9 in the morning until noon, and there are two sermons, one in English and one in Irish, which Gaelic Leaguers will tell you was the language of St. Patrick, and the only tongue he will accept as a full credential at heaven's gate.

When the pilgrimage is over, and the orisons cease, and the thousands go back to their homes, St. Patrick has a multitudinous number of requests to comply with, for be the pilgrim afflicted with broken limbs or broken heart, pimples or polypus, he wants to lay them at the feet of the saint and leave them there.

Dim fades the page of nature's scroll
And muffled is the time drum's roll.
The mountains stand in silent rows
Vast, gentle statues of repose.

The moon in priestly calm bedight
Mounts to the pulpit of the night,
And whispers of the evening breeze
Echo a sermon to the trees.

Each river in a filmy sheath
Hath cased its gleaming blade. With breath
So faint that still its bosom seems,
It croons the story of its dreams.

In ghostly legions wanders by
With flickering tapers in their hands

My heart like webs of gossamer wrought
Doth softly tremble to my thought,
And with fair spirits roaming free
Holds low, ecstatic colloquy.

Hushed is the strident speech of man,
Hushed is the war of tribe and clan;
From guarding pole to guarding pole
Stretches the kingdom of the soul.

Donald had returned from a visit to the country, and was full of reminiscences of persons and things that had interested him.

"I met a boy, Mamma," he said, "that had the queerest name I ever heard. He said his folks found it in the Old Testament. It was—it was—let me see—yes, it was Father William, or William Father; I've forgotten just now which. But it was one or the other."

"But, Donald," said his mother, "there is no such name as Father William or William Father in the Old Testament."

"Are you sure, Mamma?"

"I certainly am, dear. I have read it through several times. William is a comparatively modern name. It isn't anywhere in the Bible."

"Well, but oh, I remember now!" exclaimed Donald. "It was Bildad!"—[Detroit News Tribune.

York's Greatest Pageant.

BRILLIANT HISTORICAL PARADE AS SEEN BY LOS ANGELES WOMAN.

From a Special Correspondent.

YORK, July 26.—No one who once has felt the beauty of York Minster can pass through Yorkshire without longing to revisit its glorious cathedral.

Standing within the great southern portal, one looks up and up and still up into those soaring arches, until one feels as if lifted off one's feet—freed by some miraculous spiritual revelation from the burden of mortal flesh. Gradually, after this first bewildering, breathless sense of assumption, there comes a more definite consciousness of pure delight in the vast harmony of carven lines and the deep glow of transparent color. This, possibly, some poet might put into words, but neither poem nor picture—nothing except actual experience—can afford any adequate realization of the marvelous uplift York gives to even the most prosaic soul. It is like a solemn and joyous call to prayer and thanksgiving, for York cathedral, evolved though the centuries by the handiwork of reverent men, is a consummate manifestation of creative power.

We Americans cannot build a cathedral like this, because we never have learned how to combine work with worship. Nor could the people living in York today build such a minster, because they no longer have the same community of civic and religious feeling which animated their forbears.

And yet, just now, York is giving a splendid demonstration of its civic spirit. Probably this week's great pageant will be regarded as the most brilliant and impressive historical summary ever given in England. No other city in all Britain affords such inspiring and richly diversified material for pageantry; for old York—the Eboracum of the Romans—looked still backward into the thick mists of antiquarian tradition to find traces of its origin. All the subsequent stages of York's growth—British, Roman, Saxon, Danish, Norman, and English—have been recorded, graphically, in ancient chronicles, local traditions and authentic history. The chief difficulty in preparing this pageant has been the selection, out of enormous abundance, of the episodes best adapted for effective presentation.

Mr. Louis N. Parker, an experienced pageant master, faced the tremendous undertaking cheerfully, relying confidently upon the coöperation of the community, which was indispensable to the success of such a review. The people of Yorkshire ever have been noted for the quality of their brains, the strength of their bodies, and the tenacity of their determination, and the manner in which this stupendous civic pageant has been conceived, organized and produced gives proof of the vitality of the York of today.

More than 2000 townspeople—men, women and children of every social rank, lineal descendants of the makers of York's history—are taking an active part in the production. Distinctions of class and differences of creed seem to have been forgotetn. The organist of York Minster has composed most of the music; the choirs of various churches and the local singing societies have united to form the chorus which carries the thread of narration connecting the dramatic episodes. Scarf dances and Morris dances, which add so much to the charm of the living pictures, are executed by York's young girls and children. Members of local Jewish families are assisting in the episode, which so grimly commemorates the shameful massacre of the hapless inhabitants of York's Jewry, at the time of the Red Terror of 1190. The small son of the rector of old St. Olave's Church impersonates James, the child Duke of York, whose investiture with the Order of the Garter makes a very pretty scene; and even the assumes a role having condemned himsel headed during the course of the pageant. a local solicitor plays Queen Henrietta a real success of the broken English. weeks past, whether in shop or hotel, ble home, the pageant has been the topi ing interest in York, for this is actually the people. Not a Sinecure.

MISAPPREHENSION OF WORK OF SENATORS AND CONGRESSMEN.

By a Special Contributor.

IN this country there are many prevailing errors concerning the national government at Washington. It is a popular fallacy that the Senators and Representatives who comprise the membership of the Congress receive excessive remuneration for services which are neither irksome nor onerous. Pessimists and iconoclasts are prone to exclaim: "They get big pay for little work."

It is true that the Congress meets at noon, about the hour our workingmen are going to dinner after having done half of a day's work. It is also true that it is customary for the Senate and for the House to adjourn not later than 5 o'clock each afternoon. It is also true that out of the 398 Representatives and Delegates comprising the membership of the House Representatives, not more than about 100 on an average remain in their seats. Moreover, of the ninety-two Senators not more than fifteen or twenty are usually in their places while the body is in session. It is exceedingly rare to see any one of those statesmen in a hurry or perturbed about anything. They seem to be gentlemen of ample leisure.

Their salaries are $7500 per annum. They are in actual session not more than seven months in one year, and not more than three months the following year. Each Congress lasts for a term of two years. During those two years, the Congress is not in session more than twelve months; usually about ten months out of the twenty-four. Thus their salaries really amount to $15,000 per annum, each, for one year of actual sessions at the Capitol, in Washington. That seems like "big pay for little work."

But let us look behind the scenes of this great legislative drama. Do you know any lawyer who could successfully investigate and properly understand 20,000 cases of importance, in one year. If such a feat were possible, and if the lawyer were to charge the small fee of $100 for each case, he would receive an income of $2,000,000 for the year's work. That looks lots bigger than $15,000 per annum, doesn't it?

Well, during the two sessions of the last Congress, there were introduced in the Senate and the House of Representatives exactly 39,248 bills and joint resolutions. There were also introduced uncounted tens of thousands of petitions which required careful and honorable consideration. Each Senator and each Representative were expected to give proper consideration to every matter of interest introduced; because each one of those statesmen must be called upon to vote for or against every proposition. There were upward of 40,000 matters of individual importance thus brought to the attention of the last Congress, which would make fully 20,000 cases per annum. The Senators and Representatives who gave consideration to these matters received salaries of $7500 each per annum, or $15,000 for the two years of the Congress. No lawyer could have taken care of all of them, and no law firm would have handled them for less than $100 per case; so that the individual Senators and Representatives are doing for $15,000 what any law firm would charge not less than $2,000,000, for services rendered.

But when you realize that some of the bills considered carried appropriations of from $1000 to $150,000,000 each, you will see that an average fee of $100 per case would be exceedingly small. Any case involving $1,000,000 would bring to the lawyer a fee of not less than $50,000. The reader will concede that the Senators and Representatives are not overpaid, but really underpaid when compared with lawyers earning professional fees.

Now, how do they take care of those 40,000 cases? It would be physically impossible for each statesman to accomplish the work. As a matter of necessity, having confidence in each other and relying upon the average intelligence of each other, for all of them are men of education and ripe experience, they refer certain classes of cases to committees for careful consideration. The reports made by those committees are accepted by the Senate and by the House of Representatives as the best work obtainable. Each committee is, as it were, a prosperous firm of lawyers interested in each case brought before it.

For example, there were, in round numbers, 5000 bills proposing special pensions for old soldiers of the Civil War. Each one of those cases is of interest; and of patriotic interest, too. There were many thousands of those volunteer soldiers who were mere boys when the great war closed in 1865; boys who had been good soldiers for two or three or four years. But, when the last battle had been fought, they wanted to get home. Regiments were required to make camp at certain points, and wait there indefinitely, for a week, or a month, or two months, until the proper officers could come along and muster them out, and give them honorable discharges. The young fellows grew restless. Thousands upon thousands of them disappeared from those camps, and went home. They had good records; some of them marvelous records for obedience, discipline and great heroism. But, they were boys of 20 years or less, and they lacked mature judgment. They went home, and when the final muster rolls were made out they were marked "Deserted" on such a date.

They never thought of pensions. They were young, strong, ambitious and proud. But as they are growing old and feeble they need the aid of the government which was saved by their valor, and they apply for pensions. They are barred at the Pension Office on account of the record. They go to the Congress for relief. They prove their cases, not merely for the sake of the pensions which they need, but they do not want that record to stand, on account of their children and grandchildren. The Committee on Pensions, consisting of thirteen Senators and fifteen Representatives, examines each case. There is voluminous evidence furnished, all of which is carefully examined in a lawyer-like manner. Once in a while there is found to be a fraudulent claim; and it is rejected. Usually the claims are correct. But, because of the possibilities of fraud, each case must be examined with lawyer-like care. Upon the reports made by their committees, the Senate and House ultimately take action.

That committee is only an example. There are fifty standing committees of the Senate and a like number for the House of Representatives; and each committee has all of its time fully occupied during the sessions of the Congress.

Those standing committees meet daily during the sessions of the Congress; some of them at 9 and some of them at 10 o'clock in the morning. They are busily engaged until noon, when they must go to their places in the Senate and in the House of Representatives, at the opening of the daily sessions. Thus, you see, that although they meet at noon, that is not the beginning of the day's work of the Congress, although it seems to be, to the average observer.

If the Senate and House of Representatives had nothing to do but hold their open sessions, they would indeed have good pay for very little work. But the majority of them return to their committee-rooms and are engaged there at work, while the Senate and the House are in open session. This also needs explanation.

If it happens that the Committee on Pensions has the right of way, the members of that committee remain on the floor of the Senate or of the House, and there are present also all of those statesmen who are interested in the pending bills; but the others go back to work in their committee-rooms, and they are called by electric bells, when their presence is needed to vote on pending measures.

Substantially each Senator and Representative remain up late at night looking into pending bills and attending to the letters which come to them by the scores each day from their constituents. Moreover, when the Congress adjourns, each one of them takes home with him numerous bills which the committees require to be investigated during the recesses of the Congress, and they are looking into those proposed measures while they are away from Washington, and when the people do not imagine that they are attending to public business.

It can thus be seen, from a very brief outline of the work of the Senators and Representatives, that they do not have such great pay for little work. They earn every dollar that they receive in salaries for their services. In order to attend to their duties and be present at the meetings of their committees, it is impossible for them to begin their open sessions earlier than noon.

Web of Madagascar Spider.

"It is interesting to know the practical uses to which the webs of a large Madagascar spider might be applied to replace silk for woven fabrics," said Fisher S. Williams of London, who is interested in the manufacture of silk.

"I know from visits to the interior of Madagascar that the webs spun many feet across the walks or shady avenues of gardens are sufficiently strong to hang thereon a light bamboo walking cane. At the Paris Exposition of 1900, a whole piece of fabric eighteen yards long and eighteen inches wide was exhibited which was woven out of this web, for which it was necessary to provide 100,000 yards of spun thread of twenty-four strands.

"For its manufacture, 25,000 spiders had to be brought into requisition, and these were procured by offering the natives so much a hundred; but not knowing or ignoring the purposes for which the insects were required and having a get-rich-quick desire, they brought them in by basketfuls, mostly dead. It was found necessary for the winding-off machines to go to the spiders instead of calling in the spiders to the filatories. However, the piece of cloth was completed and was of a shimmering golden yellow color.

"The idea of obtaining silk from the spider is an old one, as distinguished men in France discoursed on the subject as long ago as 1710, but the first study of this Madagascar spider came up some ten years ago, and the spinning of its web was then undertaken. It is only the female that spins. The first difficulty in obtaining the thread direct from the insect consisted in contriving how to secure the living spider so as to wind it off by some mechanical process from the insect. This was originally performed by confining spiders in empty match boxes, with the abdomen protruding. The extraction of the web does not apparently inconvenience the insect, although care has to be taken not to injure them."—[Washington Herald.

Buenos Ayres to Salta.

AN INTERESTING MIDSUMMER TRIP IN SOUTH AMERICA.

A DESCRIPTION OF A THOUSAND-MILE RAILROAD JOURNEY OVER THE PROJECTED PAN-AMERICAN RAILROAD ROUTE, STARTING FROM THE SOUTHERN TERMINUS, RELATED BY THE FIRST NORTH AMERICAN WOMAN THAT TOOK THE TRIP.

By a Special Contributor.

THE Argentine summer had reached its solstice. In Buenos Ayres the heat of the long days was almost unbearable; and the short, breathless nights brought no amelioration of our discomfort.

One night, after a particularly trying day, the head of the house, who inscribes E. E. after his cognomen, arrived home from the office, and announced that he had been assigned to a station in Salta, capital of the province of that name, in Northern Argentina.

The name brought no recognition with it. It was, indeed, terra incognita to us; but, as we were told that Salta was located in the mountains, 1000 miles from Buenos Ayres, its distance, latitudinal and altitudinal, from our present point of heated misery, sounded cool and alluring, and, therefore, good to us. The unusual heat had so transformed beautiful Buenos Ayres that we rejoiced to turn our backs on what threatened to be the summer of our discontent, and seek greener fields and fresher pastures elsewhere.

Scene in Salta.

The dismantling of our humble abode was soon accomplished. Our household goods were speedily installed with a branch of the perennially hospitable storage family. Our trunks were packed and labeled in our best Castellano.

With Christmas and Salta forty-eight hours away, the evening of the eventful day of our flitting found us at the Retiro station, awaiting the train which was to take us the first stage of our journey. Several of the faithful of the American colony were also there to bid us godspeed in our new undertaking. We left these friends, the tried and true, with real regret, when, presently, our train with its high-shouldered English locomotive pushed its way into the station. As we waved our farewells, we realized that we were embarked on a new phase in our Argentine experience and quien sabe how it would turn out.

The railroads in Argentina are owned and controlled almost exclusively by English syndicates. The employés on the trains and at the stations are usually Argentines; but the positions in the main offices of the important railways, where large forces of men are employed, are favorite berths with Englishmen, who are very much in evidence in most of the South American cities.

We found our stateroom large and commodious, compared with the usual sleeping-car accommodations. It was one of several opening from a narrow corridor which runs along one side of the car. The room was arranged for four people. The berths close the same as in our Pullmans, but run crosswise of the car, thus giving greater length than the ordinary berth. This last-named quality was particularly appreciated by the partner of my joy and sorrows, for he is so constructed anatomically, and what he lacks in breadth is made up to such an extent in height that it almost seems he is best described by the mathematical definition of a line, "that which has length only." Under such conditions, with everything else correspondingly comfortable, it is not surprising that we passed a most peaceful night.

Morning found us out in the open country speeding over the pampas. At intervals we passed magnificent estancias or ranches. These are usually owned by Englishmen or Germans. They measure their lands in leagues. The imposing mansions of the owners are surrounded by numerous smaller dwellings and outbuildings. The life here is not unlike that enjoyed on the plantations in our Southern States in former days. The employés, of which there is a small army, all live on the place. As they are remote from town, each estancia has to be complete within itself, furnishing its own supplies and necessities. It is a land almost literally flowing in milk and honey. Vast cultivated fields blend into larger stretches of fertile green, wherein are herded great droves of sheep and cattle. It is a scene of almost unparalleled peace and prosperity.

Between ranches were intervals of unoccupied land where our gleaming rails cut a swath through a sea of waving pampas grass, with its crest of graceful, creamy plumage.

We are loyal North Americans, and we hated to admit that any country could equal our beloved States, but, in the bosom of our family, we could not help expressing our thoughts of what a revelation these rich acres would be to our eastern farmers, who toil early and late, and at last reap a harvest in which rocks and thistles preponderate. This southern land compares more than favorably with the prairies of our Middle West, rich as they are. The greatest part of the Argentine soil is virgin and so fertile that all it needs is the hand of the tiller to yield abundant returns. The mild climate, sub-tropical, makes it possible to harvest several crops each year.

In perfection of climate, productiveness of soil, in natural, agricultural and mineral wealth, Argentina yields the palm to none. Except in the most northern part, Argentina is favored by generous rains, so there is no necessity for expensive irrigation, which retards expansion in our own Southwest.

Meanwhile we had left the pampas. The scene rapidly shifted. We were now approaching the foothills of the Andes. We got our first good view of them while we were at breakfast. The dining-car was some few cars ahead of ours, and was reached after various acrobatic feats. As the cars were not vestibuled, we jumped from one to the next, over a chasm traversed by an annexing chain which lengthened and shortened alarmingly under one's feet. After each safe landing, I felt like echoing the fervent "Gracias a Dios," which an asthmatic Argentine woman of generous proportions ejaculated, wheezingly, behind me after each leap.

Soon after breakfast, we reached Cordoba. This city, a popular summer resort for the aristocracy of the country, is picturesquely situated in the lower Cordilleras, but from a station viewpoint, it is of the desert, deserty. There are many imposing buildings, good pavements, and all that, everything in cream or sand-colored cement. There is sand everywhere. Great banks and mounds of it blaze the trail as you approach the city, and excavation and quarries reveal the same eye-tiring, heat-holding element as you leave.

At Cordoba, we changed to another sleeper on the Central Argentine Railroad. We found this train very similar to the one we had left. The dining-car was equally well equipped and the food was delicious. The road passed over a rather rough bed as we were now climbing a steep grade. Huge boulders and low-growing brush confronted us from the windows. No rich estancias nor even shacks were to be seen. It was peaceful and quiet, yes, but with a growing desolation. The shadow of the hills was projecting itself, and a silence grew upon us as we sped on and on.

We must have covered much ground in the night, for early morning found us at Tucuman. This odd little city is perched high up on a ledge, with a bewildering background of mountains, rising tier on tier. The wonder is that the little toy town has not been shaken from its eyrie long ago, for earthquakes are frequent. Although the city has suffered severely from these visitations, we were assured by some English residents that life in Tucuman is delightful. I can understand the bliss of awaking every morning to the magnificent panorama Nature spreads so lavishly here. If, at times, the spectacle should become a moving picture, que importa, one at least escapes monotony.

A young English lady related the following experience. She was at an evening party in Tucuman. She was talking with a man, a fellow-guest, who was seated on the ledge of a balcony, when suddenly he disappeared. A playful temblor, en passant, had shaken him from his seat. At her scream, the other guests rushed to the windows to see what had happened. When the young man reappeared over the balcony, in his impromptu Romeo act, and none the worse for his spill, he was hailed with delight. The episode but added to the evening's entertainment. But, alas! the earthquakes do not all turn out harmless jokes as this one did. Half of Mendoza, a beautiful city not far from Cordoba and Tucuman, was swallowed up in one of these convulsions of nature a few years ago. If a spice of danger and general uncertainty add zest to life, South America with its earthquakes, revolutions, shifting river channels, and changeable money values, is well supplied with that commodity. "A short life and a merry one," I was told, was their watchword, and they apparently live up to it.

THE PASSENGER FROM LEXINGTON TRIES TO DO RIGHT.

By a Special Contributor.

"WHAT'S the matter, Chapman?" asked the Omaha drummer of the traveling man from Milwaukee. "Seem to have something the matter with your tubes. Lose your voice trying to sell that old crank at Dubuque, or is it a case of epizootic?"

"Aw gwit yer giddin'," wheezed the Milwaukee salesman. "I god a gold, a dab bad gold."

"Well, I should say you have, old man. It's a peach. Where did you pick it up?"

"Didn' big id ub; id bigged me ub. I god id in Minnezoda dryin' to blay hero."

"I know you play a bad game of pinochle, Chap, but I can't imagine you playin' a hero. How was it?"

"I don'd know how id was. I god in a bunch o' vagation beoble ad Minnedonka. Had to gross the lage ad Egzelsior to gatch a drain on the other zide. "Well, don't take it too hard, old man. It might have been worse. It might have been——"

"You bet it might have been worse," chipped in the passenger from Lexington. "I did a trick o' that kind once, and I got something that made a bad cold look like an ice cream soda."

"How was that?" inquired the red-headed man in the corner, as he awoke from a nap.

"Why, I was up at Petoskey for a couple of weeks' lay-off. First vacation I'd had for five years, and I went the limit. Had the greatest time you ever saw, and I got 20 cents value out of every dollar I spent, which is goin' some for a summer resort. But nothing in particular happened until the last day—the last minute, you might say— of my sojourn. I'd packed my trunk, sent it to the depot and had it checked for Cincinnati two or three hours before train time. Then, havin' nothin' else to do, I strolled down to the bay and there I met a couple o' fair maidens I'd got acquainted with up at the hotel. 'What's the matter with a farewell boat ride?' says I. 'Just the thing,' says they. So I negotiated for the use of a rowboat, handed the ladies in and paddled out for deep water. They were some heavy. Did you ever notice how weight predominates at a summer resort? Two out of every three women you see are good and hefty. My two were certainly hefty, and so far as I know they were good, too. But a life preserver's of more value than virtue when a boat turns over in deep water, and that's just what happened to ours. The ladies took a notion they wanted to change seats, and while they were at it and the boat was rockin' like a cradle, a wave struck us broadside and over we went.

'You can see for yourself that I'm no Jim Jeffries, and I was pretty tired, anyhow. But I managed to steer the ladies up and give 'em a strangle hold on the bottom of that boat. Then I commenced hollerin' for help, and it wasn't more'n a minute or two till some fellows run up with a launch and took us aboard. Would you believe it? Those two women wouldn't speak to me, wouldn't look at me, all the way back to shore, and when we landed they turned up their noses and walked streamin' away, leavin' me to drip alone. I never could understand women, anyhow.

"When I got back to the hotel, I found my train was gone, and there was I, soaked to the skin, and all my dry duds on the way to Cincinnati. Moreover, I was pretty near broke. The landlord was a good soul, and he fished out a suit o' clothes that had been left there by a party who'd gone off without payin' his board bill. It was about four sizes too big for me, but it was dry, so I put it on and took the next train for the south.

"Well, I'd been ridin' along two or three hours when I happened to catch hold o' the bottom of the coat with my right hand and felt something like a piece o' paper down in between the linin' and the outside. Of course, that stirred up my curiosity, and I went to investigatin'. I found there was a hole in the bottom of the inside pocket, and, workin' my fingers down through, I got hold of the piece o' paper and pulled it out. It was an old envelope, torn open at one end, and on it was the address, 'Jerome P. Grumpkin, Xenia, Ohio.' I was just about to throw it down on the floor, when it occurred to me that I'd better see what was in it. And I did. I squeezed the edges and looked inside. Then my eyes bulged out like a couple o' raw oysters. There wasn't any writing or any common paper inside, but there was a piece o' paper that's mighty uncommon with some people, includin' myself. It was one of Uncle Sam's gold certificates, and it called for $1000.

"'Gee!' thinks I to myself, 'Mr. Jerome P. Grumpkin must be a mighty absent-minded man to jump his board bill when he had this in his cast-off clothes. And then I commenced an argument with myself as to whether it was mine or whether it was Grumpkin's. There was a good deal to be said on both sides, but my daddy was a stern old Presbyterian, and some o' the things he hammered into me when I was a kid stuck. I couldn't satisfy myself that it was right to keep it, so I made up my mind to look up Mr. Grumpkin, and, on the principle that if you're goin' to do a good deed you might as well do it up brown, I decided to go to Xenia and hand the money over to him personally. It would be worth the trip to see his face when he got it. That's the way I figured it out, you know, and I could already feel my chest swell with pride in my generosity. Then it occurred to me that an address on an envelope wasn't certain evidence of ownership, so I telegraphed back to the hotel man at Petoskey, asking for the name and address of the man who had left the suit I was wearin'. An answer was waitin' for me at Cincinnati. It read: 'John K. Dallingworth, Tonawanda, N. Y.'

"Well, you can guess that balled me all up. Whose thousand-dollar bill was that, anyhow? It was in Dallingworth's pocket, but the fact that he'd gone away without sayin' good-by to his landlord would indicate that he was a bit crooked. Maybe he'd stolen the money from Grumpkin. I decided to try Grumpkin first, anyhow.

"It was two months before I got a chance to go to Xenia, and all the time that big yellow back was burnin' a hole in my safe deposit box. When I did get up there I found that Mr. Grumpkin was a man of some prominence, and I had no trouble in getting to him. I didn't beat around the bush a bit.

"'Mr. Grumpkin,' says I, 'I have come all the way from Kentucky to do you what I consider an unusual favor. I have accidentally come into the possession of some money,' says I, 'which I have reason to think belongs to you.'

"Mr. Grumpkin raised his eyebrows to the roots of his hair.

"'Money!' says he. 'Money! I don't remember losin' any money.'

"'That's too bad,' says I, 'for, of course, I should have to insist on satisfactory identification of the property. I want to do the square thing, but I've got to protect myself. I'll say this much, however,' says I: 'The money's in the shape of a thousand-dollar bill——'

"Before I could get any further, he went right up into the air. His face turned purple, he clinched his fists and rattled his teeth together. It was a minute before he could say a word, and all that time I thought he was goin' to explode or have a fit. At last he broke loose.

"'Get out!' says he. 'Get out o' here this minute! You can't work no bunco game on me. Get out quick, or I'll set the dogs on you.'

"Gee! but I was mad. I'd come clean from Lexington, paid my own money for railroad fare, to do this fellow a good turn, and to be called a con man. I just couldn't stand for it. I didn't say a blamed word, but I hauled off and let him have my fist right on the end of his nose. He crumpled up on the floor and I turned around and walked out.

"That was a foolish thing to do, especially in a strange town. I found out how foolish it was in about an hour when a policeman put me under arrest, charged with assault and battery. There wasn't anybody there to go on my bond, so I got out that thousand-dollar bill and put it up as cash collateral to guarantee my appearance in court. Then I looked up a lawyer.

"I was explainin' the situation to him when in comes a United States deputy marshal with a warrant chargin' me with passin' counterfeit money. My thousand-dollar bill was no good, the bank said. Well, sir, that knocked my legs right from under me. I just laid my head down on that lawyer's desk and blubbered. Here I was with the county officers pullin' me on one side and Uncle Sam on the other, both chargin' me with terrible crimes, and all just because I tried to be honest. It was doggone tough.

"'Cheer up,' says the lawyer. 'They can't hang you on any of these charges, and while there's life there's hope. Anyway,' says he, 'I'd like to know what made old Grumpkin so touchy.'

"But I couldn't cheer up, and I couldn't see what Grumpkin's touchiness had to do with it. Nevertheless, I went to jail and stayed there for a week before the lawyer could arrange for new bonds. Meantime, the case had got into the newspapers and gone around the country. It looked like a dead sure thing that I was a goner, for the only witness I had was the hotel-keeper at Petoskey, and he didn't know anything about the money. About a week before the time set for the trial, though, my lawyer got a big package, and when he opened it, he found a lot of original letters from Grumpkin to a man named Peel, and copies of letters from Peel to Grumpkin. The letters were all in cipher, but the key to the cipher was inclosed, and it showed that Grumpkin had been tangled up in a deal in bad money, in thousand-dollar bills, and this man Peel had him right by the scalp lock. There wasn't a word to show who had sent the letters, but on a separate piece o' paper was typewritten: 'Save the innocent, but hamstring the guilty.' We guessed they came from Peel, and I had a notion that Peel was another name for Mr. John K. Dallingworth of Tonawanda, but I never did find out for sure.

"Anyhow, my lawyer took those letters up and had a little heart-to-heart talk with Grumpkin, and the old duffer got busy. He had a whole lot of influence and he had relatives who had more. The officials began to see a new light, and they finally concluded to quash the indictments against me for lack of evidence. More'n that, old Grumpkin had to pay my lawyer's fees, as well as all my expanses, a pretty good sum for the time I'd lost and a little added on to sort o' heal my wounded feelin's. That was a mighty good lawyer, I want to tell you.

"But," concluded the man from Lexington, "I don't go boat ridin' with any more fat ladies."

On the Boulevard.

WHERE THE CONFIDENCE GAME SUCCEEDS WITH AMERICANS.

By a Special Contributor.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—This year 100,000 Americans will do the boulevard. They will sit in the exact center of the world. It is the open sidewalk round the Place de l'Opera—and in the offing, under the awning. They are 15,000 little tables and 49,750 little chairs. Beneath the awnings blow breezes perfumed with absinthe, violets, coffee, cordials, and the sachets of pretty women of all lands. A mighty human river flows past—idlers all.

In this charming razzle, the most cool-headed Americans have lost their caution and their money. The other day, the representative of a New York bank, sat under the letter "I" in the word "Paix" of the flapping awning sign of that world-famous café. He bought a delicate mauve-colored drink, with tinkling ice; it seemed as weak as circus lemonade, but tasted delicious.

These sidewalk tables filled with agreeable American tourists, are as good for impromptu conversations as a steamer deck. The New Yorker was soon discussing pauperism in the East Side; and his new friends, moved by his earnestness, actually offered him 5000 francs for distribution to the poor of New York.

SIDEWALK SEATS OF THE PARIS BOULEVARDS.

The New York man—enthused, said he would add 3000 francs of his own. Another American, worked up by overhearing the philanthropic conversation, came to them. Another pale mauve drink came to them. The various sums of money in clean French bills were on the table. Mutual receipts were exchanged and documents and money put into a big yellow envelope for the New Yorker. The new American desired to add 1500 francs, and he hesitated to quit the sidewalk; he was on the lookout for a friend to pass. Would some one take this big French note and get it changed inside?

"You take it!"

"No; you."

Each one hesitated out of super-delicacy, till the man with the big note said:

"Oh, I'll go myself and get my money changed. Come with me you and talk French for me. Our friend from New York will keep a lookout for my passing friend. He is a tall, spare, red-headed, smooth-faced man in a light gray suit."

They went.

The New York bank man, with the yellow envelope full of big notes in his pocket, scanned the human river tranquilly. He thought no harm; yet harm there was. No one came back; the yellow envelope proved to contain no money, and his own 3000 francs had naturally disappeared with the rest. It was a simple variation of the green-goods substitution of valises.

The Paris boulevard is the only place in the world where such things still happen to men of intelligence. Some pretend that the insidious novel drinks are to blame.

There is a drink called "For the Princes," bearing no hint on its label of the cocaine, poppy and hyssop it contains. Absinthe is green with opalescent fires; the "Prince" drink is violet paling into lilac, striking diamond scintillations when the ice swirls in it. A staid Amercan real estate agent liked its looks because it matched his tie.

"Is it temperance?" he asked.

"Very," said the waiter. "And the more you put in water it is more so."

"I have not drunk strong drink for eleven years," the real estate man told the waiter at 4 p.m. At 5 he was explaining it to a stranger; by 5:30 he had invited four people to dinner; at 5:45 he was persuading the policeman to help him count a wad of big notes on the sidewalk table.

At 6 p.m. he sat with folded arms and closed eyes in a beatific trance. All life was brilliant; the tints of women's hats and gowns were dazzling; every one was young and gay; he heard happy laughter. Horses pranced, autos whizzed past; pretty shop girls danced on to their homes; and a glorious red sunset promised a new dawn to humanity. He heard music in his heartbeats. He felt his powers grow within him. He was young, brilliant, daring; and he said:

"As soon as I have done a little more reflecting, I will buy the boulevard and give it to these charming people!"

There is no such free amusement in the world. There are Americans in Paris who spend half their time on the boulevard. They drink coffee or Vichy. They seek no gallant adventures. They do not read the cafés' gratuitous papers. They do not play the cafés' dominoes, backgammon or cards. They sit out upon the terrace dreaming gently, stimulated with kaleidoscopic movement, lights and color, leisure, pleasure-seeking, gaiety, pell mell, the throbbing mix-up of all peoples come to Paris, not to earn, but to spend money.

The sidewalk seats beneath the awnings give a sensation of superiority over the vast pedestrian throng. I know a New York physician who comes every summer to Paris.

"My vacation is the Paris boulevard," he says. "I spend it in the open-air shade of these awnings. I want no better combination of rest and amusement than to leisurely watch the human river flowing by. There is no crowd like this on earth; great nobles, renowned financiers, engineers, kings of industry, rub shoulders incognito. Famous beauties of foreign capitals, great actresses and singers, flit past unknown, in their tourist tailor gowns.

"Swindlers who have got away with millions, criminals who have made rich hauls, are drawn to the Paris boulevard irresistibly. In the throng passing us are men who have built great railways, factories, or made inventions—for the pleasure of seeing Paris! Here are brigands and robbers from every land. In the rubber swamps of South America, on the blistered sheep ranges of Australia, men make dates to meet upon the boulevard. Dusky African kings, watching the southern cross at night, are wondering of it."

The American playwright, whose piece was the greatest success of the last New York season, wrote it at these sidewalk tables. When he was merely a journalist, I thought it pretext for lotus eating. He would take a front seat, a raspberry syrup and ice water. Before him rolled the human river. Fakers offered him gold watches and opera glasses at a bargain; they whispered in his ear: "Transparent cards! No two alike!"

All around him sat the chattering, laughing idlers. He had some white paper and a pencil. Sometimes he would write; but we thought that he did it to tell his wife that he had been working. We were mistaken.

"The boulevard gives the stimulus and repose that help me do my best," he told me later. "At home in my luxurious workroom, the white paper stares me in the face, and the clock ticks accusingly."

One of the most popular English musical composers gets his inspirations from the Paris boulevard.

"The rumble of the omnibuses and the sweep of the great throng, suggest a hundred schemes for orchestration," he says. "In the intershocking steps of a thousand promenaders, I catch the cadence of a new air. The soft, yet mighty, roll of traffice forms a neutral background for the musical imagination."

Certainly, I know of two physicians who send half their patients to the "boulevard cure," for nervousness, indigestion, sleeplessness and melancholy. The New York physician considers it a medical discovery.

"You cannot sit at one of these sidewalk tables without taking the air, nor watch the human river, however listlessly, without catching interest," he says. "The cadence of the multitude is calming to the nerves. The gaiety of pleasure seekers is contagious; and insomnia seems to be peculiarly benefited by an agreeable, rhythmic tiring of the nerve centers."

The boulevard soothes everything—even suspicion. This is as good an explanation as the pale mauve drinks. There seems to have been nothing pale mauve in the confidence of Mr. Cook, when, guide-book in hand, before the architecture of the Madeleine Church, he got into conversation with a well-dressed man who said he was Mr. Douglas, editor of a New Zealand paper.

On their way to the spot where Ma guillotined, they met a friend of Mr as Mr. Spencer of Philadelphia. The in the Bois.

Up to this moment, all was usual Next day, young Mr. Cook met Spen on the terrace of 'a boulevard café. they watched the charming spectacle going throng.

"Why could we not do this at home?" is delightful to sit on the sidewalk."

"Look! that man has dropped his claimed Mr. Spencer.

Young Mr. Cook hastily picked it to give it to the stranger, when Spen that it belonged to him, required his tents.

The grateful stranger, John Corco Americans upon the boulevard and drink. But young Mr. Cook insists Vichy water with a pale blue syrup in

He was the sweet plum.

Mr. Corcoran was on his way to one of the last requests of an uncle young Mr. Cook on his honesty, Mr. him to act as his agent in America on a mission of $10,000. Seeing that young tated, Corcoran, to prove his confidence, pocket-book while he left a moment his return, Spencer joked him, saying Mr. Cook would not return such confi

UBLE FOR EVERYBODY WHEN E KAISER GOES A VISITING.

From a Staff Correspondent.

IN, Aug. 10.—There is an interesting task ting the statistician who has the enterprise raw up comparative tables showing the dis- versed by the monarchs of Europe every year ost of these journeys. But there t who would head the compilation. He is the who set the vogue for traveling among his peers, William II, the "Reise Kaiser," or g Emperor," as he is called in Germany. Both monarchs were accom- eir responsible advisers and on both occa- e courts received the visitors with every onor, with the greatest pomp and display. sits being political events of the first order r, it will be understood how much prepa- quire and how much working-out of the s. Although it is whispered in the chan- e that the Kaiser has a habit of suggest- s to friendly monarchs, as a matter of fact early always emanates from the host at d meeting which the Kaiser has every he course of his Mediterranean or north- th one or other of the ruling sovereigns urns to Berlin the Kaiser goes over the numerous engagements often booked as ar ahead, which his secretarial staff has time a period when he can best pay the visit. The dates in question are then by the German Ambassador accredited erned to the sovereign, although some- ror does this himself in one of his characteristic autograph letters. The monarch host consults his political advisers and, they making no objection, the requisite assent is forwarded to Berlin on which the Emperor gives to his court chamberlain the broad outlines of his wishes and intentions for the forthcoming visit. Then the work for the imperial entourage begins. First of all the personal suite to accompany the Emperor has to be selected, often a rather delicate proceeding as political considerations come into play.

His Majesty when abroad is always accompanied by a representative of the German Foreign Office to deal with the constant flow of dispatches and reports which follow the Kaiser wherever he goes. Baron von Rucker-Jenisch, Prussian Minister at Darmstadt, has filled this very responsible position for several years past, but, as, for instance, on the Emperor's last visit to England, it is sometimes thought desirable for the foreign secretary to form one of the suite. Then there are the heads of the Emperor's naval, military and civil cabinets, his court chamberlain, who goes in his capacity of master of ceremonies to attend to the smooth working of the programme, and the numerous personal adjutants, both naval and military, who perform their duties in rotation.

There is no difficulty in arranging about the personal servants of His Majesty, or of the Empress when she goes with him, for these always accompany the sovereigns on their trips abroad. On a state visit then the number of the imperial party is apt to be extremely large as will be seen from the suite which accompanied the Emperor and Empress to England two years ago. It comprised the court chamberlain, two personal aides-de-camp, six adjutants, two physicians in ordinary, twelve personal attendants and one secretary, all in waiting on the Kaiser, while for the Kaiserin there were Her Majesty's master of ceremonies, two maids of honor, six tiring women and two grooms of the chamber. There were further twenty coachmen and stable attendants to look after the two carriages and twelve pair of horses taken, and ten chauffeurs for the six automobiles and two more luggage vans which were included in the imperial impedimenta.

Housewives will be able to realize what an amount of preparation the housing and accommodation of this large party demands, so while the plans are being discussed in Berlin the court officials at the scene of the visit are no less busy. As soon as the monarch host has approved of the programme for his imperial visitor's entertainment, it is forwarded to Berlin, where it is laid before the Emperor. Meanwhile, the day of departure having been fixed, a high official of the Ministry of Railways is in constant consultation with the court chamberlain's office as to the rail route to be taken by the Kaiser's private train.

All the German genius for organization is here called into action, for traffic is stopped wherever the imperial train has to pass, and all the signal boxes, railway crossings and watch huts are connected by telephone, by which the news of the Emperor's progress is passed on from point to point. By special edict of the Minister of Railways all stations through which the imperial train passes have to be decorated irrespective of the hour, so this detail has to be seen to. Sometimes circumstances render it necessary for the train to stop at some little station, otherwise totally unprovided for the reception of so distinguished a guest. The railway administration has provided for this emergency by keeping portable pavilions at the principal junctions throughout the empire. In a very few hours these can be conveyed to the station concerned and quickly put up.

Furthermore, the police authorities have to be communicated with, the criminal police for patrolling the route followed by the imperial train and the secret police for guarding the Kaiser's person outside Germany's frontiers. There is a special staff of detectives, the pick of the Prussian plain-clothes staff, which assumes this very heavy responsibility. Often they find it necessary to disguise themselves in order to keep close to the Emperor at the various functions of some state visit and when, as on the occasion of the Emperor's visit to the Guildhall in London, His Majesty drives along a processional route, German and English plain-clothes detectives mingle with the crowd at frequent intervals along the way.

Like King Edward, the Kaiser has a private train for his personal use. It is of quite recent construction and is generally made up of nine cars. The imperial saloon, sixty yards in length, is situated in the middle of the train, and is entered like an ordinary corridor wagon from either end. Passing through a narrow lobby at one end one walks straight into the Kaiser's traveling study. It is quietly upholstered in blue damask and lighted by large windows of beveled glass in the daytime, and at night by electric candles set in massive silver sconces hung between the windows. The ceiling is of carved maple and the floor is covered with a thick pile dark-blue Turkey carpet. The furniture is as plain and scanty as possible, to leave the center of the car free for movement, since the Kaiser likes to pace up and down when working or talking.

In the far corner is a gray maplewood escritoire upon which are a silver ink stand and photographs of the Empress and some of the imperial children. Behind it on the wall are book shelves containing what the Emperor calls his miniature library, a few standard works and books of reference. The desk is mounted on springs so that the Kaiser can write on it irrespective of the jolting of the train. Three easy chairs and a table against the wall complete the furniture. Next the desk is a sliding door which gives access to the Emperor's bedroom which in turn opens into the bathroom. The walls of the bedroom are lined with blue satin while the ceiling is of carved white maplewood. At the end of the living-room is another door which leads to the saloon for the suite, sleeping-cars and accommodation for the servants. There are two vans for the luggage and a special locksmith's workshop for attending to any damage sustained by the imperial baggage in transit. The exterior of the car is handsomely enameled in blue and white and blazoned with the German and Prussian eagles.

The Emperor is a confessed lover of railway traveling, and gets through an astonishing amount of work while speeding across country at forty-three miles an hour, which limit the driver of the imperial train is never permitted to exceed. He hears verbal reports from ministers, generals or heads of departments or dictates for hours to a secretary. As little time as possible is spent at meals; as a matter of fact, dinner en famille in the Kaiser's household must never last longer than an hour at the outside. After dinner His Majesty plays a game of cards over a cigar and a glass of beer until it is time for bed. If the time can be spared, the Emperor never sleeps while the train is in motion. It is shunted to a siding for the night while the local gendarmerie keep guard outside. On such occasions, the most stringent orders are issued to the drivers of trains passing in the vicinity of the imperial Pullman not to whistle lest they disturb their monarch.

If a sea journey is necessary the Kaiser generally uses his steam yacht, the Hohenzollern. His Majesty is a notoriously bad sailor, as he has often ruefully confessed to acquaintances, but his dogged indifference to all weathers has hardened him somewhat in this respect. All agree that as soon as he sets foot on the deck of his beloved yacht he becomes a changed being. He throws off all ceremony, and is full of boyishness which often takes the form of good-natured jests and practical jokes. The Empress, too, is fond of the sea, but rather for the recreation it affords her from the worries of a large family and an engrossing household. She employs her time on the cruises with the Kaiser in doing fancy work or knitting, and is said to have presented the Emperor with a pair of socks at the end of last year's Mediterranean trip as the fruit of her industry on the voyage. Naturally these trips of the Emperor run away with a great deal of money, paid, however, out of his own pocket. So, for instance, last year's journey by train from Berlin to Venice and the return from Pola via Vienna to Munich and Donaueschingen cost $10,000.

Probably the most harassed officials on the occasion of one of these state visits are the keepers of the Emperor's and Empress' wardrobe. One of the most essential features of the programme of a state visit are the details of the uniform to be worn at the different functions, and these details are always given with the utmost exactitude. It is etiquette for the visiting monarch to wear throughout his stay the uniforms of the ranks which he holds in the army and navy of his host. A very intimate knowledge of the accoutrements and trappings of the forces of all nations is therefore required of the imperial valets, seeing that the Kaiser possesses about 150 different military and naval uniforms. He has the right to wear the uniform of colonel of every regiment in the German army, is a German field marshall and admiral of the fleet, and is moreover a British and Austrian field marshal and admiral, a Spanish captain-general, and a Swedish, Danish, Russian and Norwegian admiral, besides being honorary colonel of the British First Royal Dragoon Guards and a dozen or so other regiments the world over.

There is a certain officer in the German army who probably has not forgotten his feelings one day some years ago when, charged with superintending the dispatch of the luggage containing the Kaiser's uniforms for a state visit to Vienna, he contrived to lose a trunk containing the trousers to one of the chief uniforms. When the mishap was reported to the Emperor, there was a bad quarter of an hour for everybody, but luckily the missing box was retrieved at the crucial moment and the situation saved. The wardrobe department of the Empress' household, too, is in a fever of activity as the day of departure draws near. New dresses have to be fitted and packed, the Empress' decorations sorted out and her jewels arranged.

Among the multitude of trunks which the Kaiser takes away with him on a state visit there are always several filled with decorations which, according to the etiquette observed on such occasions, have to be distributed on the termination of the visit to all the chief court officials, the leading statesmen and officers. The recommendation of recipients for such distinctions is the work of the German embassy at the court visited.

There is one man in Germany who invariably accompanies the Kaiser on his travels, wherever the monarch goes, whatever the occasion. That is Francois Haby, the Emperor's barber, the man who has made the fortune of caricaturists in two hemispheres by inventing for his imperial client the upturned mustaches made famous by the Kaiser. Once, however, His Majesty in his search for absolute privacy even relinquished the services of his faithful Figaro. It was when the Kaiser went to Highcliffe, in Hampshire, after his visit to Windsor in 1907. But Herr Haby was spared the pain of seeing another take his place for the Emperor used a safety razor and shaved himself throughout his stay.

Mountain Lilies.

Like tongues of flame, the lilies lit
The mountain banks of brown,
Their golden petals spotted were,
Their stamens tipped with down;

Star-like they shone on stalks so tall,
And smiled to greet the sun—
As if they thought their own bright hue
From its great light was won.

A trail of fire these lilies gold,
In mountain haunts they grow,
And only those who gather them
Their glory fully know.

HOW THOMPSON CAME TO REALIZE HIS IDEAL.

By a Special Contributor.

THE reporters' room of the Surf City News seemed especially dark, narrow and paper-littered to Thompson, now that he was renouncing journalism; and he recalled with derision the day when he first entered there, proud to be the oldest "cub" ever on the News staff. As he glanced at a scrawled copy paper on his desk he chuckled scornfully:

"A society stunt, by Jove! Very fitting for my last assignment!"

Thompson's ideals had begun to fade early in his apprenticeship. His comrades looked upon their work as simply a means of a livelihood, but he considered it almost a sacred calling. Therefore when he found himself obliged to suppress news, or write garbled stories at the behest of advertisers, his zealous soul sickened His daily work was done seriously and hopefully, however, until little Cora Hall came down to the seaside to act as summer correspondent for a metropolitan newspaper.

He had wondered at first that such a helpless-looking little creature should have so great a responsibility put upon her, for in summer Surf City awakes; its half a thousand hotels swarm with guests, rows of cottages are tenanted in a night, and pleasure seekers from a score of great cities make important news stories daily.

Thompson had been like the rest of his associates; it needed but one sight of the girl's sweet, delicately beautiful face, crowned by golden hair, one glance from her brown eyes, one syllable in her tender southern accent, to make him fall down and worship. The others took the non-success of their own wooings most philosophically; but Thompson made her his goddess—a dream-woman who was a constant companion. He never doubted that he could win her, and he had set about it with that same deadly earnestness which had gained for him whatever else he possessed.

But as he reflected that this afternoon marked the end of his journalistic career, he realized that his love affair would cease with it. He had concluded in the beginning that the girl's work was spoiling her. She had as keen a nose for news as any of her co-workers; but her very devotion to duty led her to lose dignity in his eyes—dignity at first, and then esteem, until the simple-hearted fool groaned in spirit, and mourned as men do for a loved one slowly being lost to them.

If she must be a newspaper woman, he reflected, there was no need for her to barter her smiles and her artless, gracious little ways in exchange for news stories; and none knew better than she how to modulate the voice until the tone of it was a caress. Thompson knew why she never failed to worm out information from politicians and men of note who came to Surf City, and the hypocrisy of it made his blood tingle; he was going back among elemental folk, who laughed or wept only when they were glad or sorrowful; who smote in anger, and caressed only when they loved.

Once more he read the note on his desk. It was an order from the city editor to take the motor car which was at the service of the News staff, go to Briercrest, the seashore residence of the Dixel-Clares, and get the details of an amateur theatrical performance which marked the end of a house party there. And at the bottom of the note: "Wait until 3 o'clock for Miss Hall, who is covering the story for her paper."

So she could cajole even that old martinet, Vincett, into letting her go to Briercrest in the News car! Well, the road was good, and grizzled old Miles, the chauffeur, needed but a hint to go at top speed. From somewhere in the building a clock struck 3 and Thompson arose as the door opened and a youth thrust in his head:

"The machine's out in front, Mister Thompson, but you'll have to run it yourself today. Miles went home sick, and there's nobody else can be spared. And a young lady's sitting in the back seat."

"Very well," responded Thompson, shortly, and he hurried down to the curb.

The girl sat in that slightly drooped attitude which he knew so well. Once he supposed it due to weariness from overwork; but now in spite of himself he feared it to be only another affectation to excite sympathy and smooth the way. He bowed grimly, and sprang into the chauffeur's seat.

The way to Briercrest lay along the shore; sometimes the leaping surf almost reached the road, and again the sea was hidden by tall pines and fragrant undergrowth where the highway wound through reaches of the wood that lay to landward. They were well out of Surf City before the girl spoke:

"Are you still determined to desert us, right at the beginning of the season, Mr. Thompson?"

"Yes," briefly, and the machine took on increased speed.

"Mr. Vincett told me that this was your last day; he seemed sorry to lose you. I presume there is nothing that he—or any of us—could say or do to make you change your mind?"

"No," and the car rushed forward again. He longed to cry out and tell her that he was growing morbid—almost mad—from his anxious brooding over her; and that the very effort she was making to show him she wished him to remain only served to make her seem the more of a hypocrite. He felt a touch on his arm and turned his head; she was leaning forward in an attempt to shield her face from the rush of wind caused by the flying car.

"I didn't suppose you would be in such a hurry today, or I'd have brought something to protect my face," she said, and she smiled in a way that made Thompson curse himself until he remembered that he had seen that same smile when a great man's private secretary was disposed to be churlish about some information her paper wanted.

"You must forget your complexion," he said.

"It's not that, it's my eyes. I was foolish enough to indulge in a good cry awhile ago; and while it may have relieved my mind, it strained them. But there's Briercrest just ahead; we'll get the story, and then perhaps I'll go back by train."

"As you like," returned Thompson, gripping the tiller wheel hard to keep himself up to the stern role he had essayed. Oh, for some way to discover whether those sweet tricks of manner that made her so fascinating were indeed the innate witcheries of a child grown up, or only the stock-in-trade of a consummate actress, bound to make her way in the world. Even if the latter proved to be the truth he could not cease to love her, but she never should know of his folly.

When the automobile stopped at the porter's lodge of Briercrest a woman came out to meet them.

"You're reporters, ain't you?" was her greeting. "There's no use of your getting out; Mrs. Claire didn't like the way the papers talked about her other house party, and not one of you gets past this gate."

The light of battle shone in Thompson's eyes, but faded out again as he settled back in his seat.

"I shall celebrate my last day in the harness by treating the Briercrest folk with the silent contempt they deserve, and seeming crave," he said. "If you want the story, you can get it from some of the guests as they come out. Just pick out an impressionable man and smile at him; he'll talk then, readily enough."

"No," replied the girl, wearily. "I don't care about the story, now—I don't care about anything; take me to the station, please."

The car glided down the gentle slope of Briercrest Hill toward a clump of houses that nestled around the station. Along the way were market gardens, tilled by swart Italians whose small houses stood close beside the road. A crooked, gnarled old apple tree guarded one doorway, and a tiny child who had managed to clamber along its leaning trunk crept out on a swaying limb that stretched across the highway to get a better view of the machine as it went by. A warning cry from the Italian mother in the house startled the little one, and it fell headlong into the road. The car swerved and stopped as the wailing mother gathered up the unconscious child in her arms.

"Get in," Thompson ordered. "We'll take you to the doctor." But Cora had opened the door of the tonneau and pounced upon the child as the mother blundered into the car.

"Tell her it's not hurt," said Thompson, as they sped down the hill.

"But I fear it is! See, the poor little thing is lying in my arms as limp as a rag dolly! Can't you get more speed out of this old car?"

The mother was on her knees in the tonneau, inclosing both the babe and the young woman in a hysterical embrace. Cora alternately cried over, or prattled to the unconscious little one, and Thompson listened as she attempted to reassure the mother, or joined in her grief.

Of late, when her eyes were moist and her voice vibrant with emotion, he doubted her sincerity. He had no more reason to believe that she was not acting now, than he had in the past to reach the opposite conclusion; but now it was borne in upon his morbidly suspicious mind that here was no sham. The mother instinct of the girl was aroused, and it transfigured her until she seemed to be of finer stuff than the rest of humanity. And in the outburst of that mighty primal instinct Thompson was convinced at last that her gentle nature was as free from guile as was the babe's whose touselled head she pressed against her breast. But the overpowering peace which this assurance brought was instantly shattered by the thought that he had doubted her.

The machine turned into the vilage street and stopped before the doctor's door.

"Dr. Gilbert's spending the afternoon at Briercrest," called a voice from an upper window, and Thompson turned the machine about again. Once more they sped along the road to Briercrest; and this time Thompson drew up before a carriage gate near the porter's lodge.

"Tell Dr. Gilbert to come at once!" cried the girl to the woman who had repulsed them before. "Tell him a child has been hurt—a poor little baby!"

In a moment the gate was open and the machine was flying toward the house. The doctor met them at the doorway, and took possession of the women and the child.

Cora was radiant when she came out some time later, to tell him that the child was not seriously injured, and that as soon as a bundle of trinkets were gathered up for the babe they would be ready to depart.

"Mrs. Claire was very gracious to me when she learned who we were," she said, "and I have all the details of the house party. We can make a good story of the theatricals. Bless that dear, dirty baby."

Thompson echoed her—bless the baby. Now that the reaction had come, he felt very like a tired-out youngster himself—one who had been grievously naughty, but who might perhaps be forgiven if he confessed his fault—and he was determined that she should know how he had misjudged her.

At last the women took their places in the car. The youngster with candy clutched in each sticky fist, sat in the mother's lap, while Cora eyed it almost jealously.

The ride back to the little farmhouse was made in the gathering dusk. When mother and child had been set down at their door, the girl turned to Thompson with:

"Is it too late for me to go back by train?"

"No," he answered very soberly, "but won't you please ride back with me—beside me, on the front seat?" and she complied.

While the car rolled homeward in the deepening twilight, Thompson pondered deeply, vainly seeking for words. He was hardly conscious th however, Wysinger had written:

'Love expire on Reason's breast?'" first gasped at the audacity of the man, then rallying to the occasion, she sent her answer by the next mail:

"Love will never bear enslaving; Summer garments suit him best;"

and felt quite proud of herself.

Wysinger returned her serve with admirable promptness and no little boldness:

"Phyllis, you little rosy rake,
That heart of yours I long to rifle.
Come give it me and do not make
So much ado about a trifle!"

He had often called her "Phyllis" in the mountains!

Marjorie's fighting blood was now thoroughly aroused, and for once she had a worthy antagonist. Things were getting exhilarating. She contributed her quota:

"'Yes' I answered you last night;
'No,' this morning, sir, I say;
Colors seen by candle light
Will not lok the same by day."

His answer rather bowled her over a bit, to use her own expression. It was:

"You change your heart, ma belle coquette,
As oft as you change your glove.
And I know that you would pine and fret
In the chains of a lifelong love.
If we were married, you'd flirt with Jack—
Or whoever the man might be—
So I am content that you marry him,
And then you will flirt with me!"

But she lovingly fingered a little volume of "Point Lace and Diamonds," and from it culled the following:

"Flirtation's the leaven of life,
It lightens its doughty compactness.
Don't always—the world with deception is rife—
Construe what men say with exactness.
I pity the girl in society's whirl
Who's troubled with matter-of-factness."

In spite of all that had gone before, Marjorie was not prepared for the directness of his reply:

"Are you then a thing of art,
Seducing all and loving none?
And have I strove to gain a heart
Which every coxcomb thinks his own?"

She had read Elizabeth Browning to some purpose, however, so an answer to this was easily forthcoming:

"Love me, sweet, with all thou art,
Feeling, thinking, seeing;
Love me in the lightest part,
Love me in full being.
Thus, if thou wilt prove me, dear,
Woman's love no fable,
I will love thee—half a year,
As a man is able."

The last line she heavily underscored.

His answer was emphatic:

"I have loved as a man may love but once in his life, Hereafter my heart shall pulse as the shells to remembered seas."

This was more satisfactory, and Marjorie was now on such sure ground that she could afford to take chances. She chose to be whimsical, and thus expressed it:

"Most of all would I flee from the cruel madness of love,
The honey of poison flowers and all the measureless ill."

To her surprise he answered her from her own selection:

"You are all unmeet for a wife. . . .
You have but fed on the roses, and lain in the lilies of life."

Naturally she was provoked at the skillful manner with which he continued to parry her thrust. In sheer desperation she wrote:

"Was ever woman in this humor wooed?
Was ever woman in this humor won?"

That he was quite unabashed was evidenced by his reply:

"She's beautiful, and therefore to be wooed;
She is a woman, therefore to be won."

Marjorie's wits were nimble, but they refused to arise to this occasion, so she wisely made no reply. In the course of a few days the familiar envelope again put in its appearance with the single query:

"Why art thou silent? Is thy love a plant——?"

The abrupt termination of this quotation was too absurd, so Marjorie felt that she had retrieved her position in her reply:

"Learn to win a lady's faith
Nobly, as the thing is high,
Bravely, as for life and death,
With a loyal gravity."

She received another shock, though, when his answer arrived. It read:

"What I most prize in woman
Is her affections, not her intellect.
The intellect is finite; but the affections
Are infinite and cannot be exhausted."

To meet this, she fired back an adaptation of Browning's lines:

"You like us for a glance, you know—
For a word's sake
Or a curl's sake:
All's the same, whate'er the chance, you know."

Wysinger had the most provoking way of completing her quotations to further his own point. He did so now.

"And in turn we make you ours, we say—
You and youth, too,
Eyes and mouth too,
All the face composed of flowers we say."

This could not be gainsaid, so Marjorie veered a little:

"I pray you do not fall in love with me,
For I am falser than vows made in wine.
Besides, I like you not."

Again she was disconcerted, for his agility in leaping from quotation to quotation was much greater than she had imagined. This time he fell back on his old poet:

"She should never have looked at me if she meant I should not love her!
There are plenty—men, you call such, I suppose, she may discover
All her soul to, if she pleases, and yet leave much as she found them:
But I'm not so; and she knew it when she fixed me, glancing round them.
What! To fix me thus meant nothing——?"

The exciting novelty of this courtship was commencing to try Marjorie's nerves. She began to feel that she was fighting herself as well as this exasperating man. She appreciated the emotions of a trapped animal. She took one last stand:

"The maid that loves
Goes out to sea upon a shatter'd plank,
And puts her trust in miracles for safety."

As usual, his reply put her on the defensive. It was:

"'Marjorie,' I believed thee true
And I was blest in thus believing;
But now I mourn that e'er I knew
A girl so fair and so deceiving!
Fare thee well."

Something about that last word stabbed Marjorie with a new pain. It might be final. She waited uneasily a whole week, and when no familiar envelope had yet put in an appearance, she stopped not to consider consequences, but wrote unhesitatingly:

"Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for naught?"

His answer flashed back:

"I'm the veriest fool
That walks on earth to have belived thee false."

And on the heels of this came a second message:

"Come live with me and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove."

Marjorie searched for some time before she found the answer she desired, but a wonderfully new soft light burned in her eye as she copied her quotation and directed and sealed the envelope. She had asked:

"If I leave all for thee wilt thou exchange
And be all to me?"

His answer was beautifully simple:

"Lay thy sweet hands in mine and trust to me."

And with only the qualms of a loving woman casting the die, Marjorie sent her complete capitulation:

"I believe my faith in thee,
Strong as my life, so nobly placed to be,
I would as soon expect to see the sun
Fall like a dead king from his height sublime,
His glory stricken from the throne of time,
As thou unworth the worship thou hast won."

For Marjorie the coquette had been completely captured.

The World-Mechanism of the Wheat.

London has no elevators, and never has had, although it buys more wheat than any other city. It has 6,000,000 mouths to feed, so that the grain is devoured as fast as it arrives. To give bread to London would take the entire crop of Indiana or Siberia. Neither are there any elevators of any importance in Paris, Berlin or Antwerp. Whatever wheat arrives at these cities is either hurried to the mill or reshipped. Wheat is too precious in Europe to be stored for a year or for two years, as may happen in Minnesota. Rotterdam has one elevator only, and of moderate size. Neither Odessa nor Sulina has any of large proportions, for the reason that in Odessa the labor unions have an unconquerable prejudice against elevators, and in Sulina the grain is held only a short time and then forwarded elsewhere. This Sulina, as a glance at the map of Europe will show, is the loneliest of all the wheat cities. It stands on a heap of gravel at the mouth of the Danube—an oasis of human life in a vast marshy wilderness. The children born there have never seen a railway; but 1400 ships leave the stone docks of Sulina every year laden with enough wheat to feed London, Paris, and Berlin. To find the exact reverse of Sulina, we must go to Buenos Ayres—the premier wheat city of South America, and the gayest of them all. Built up at first by the cattle trade, and now depending mainly upon wheat, this superb city has now become the topmost pinnacle of South American luxury and refinement. It has several new elevators, erected by the railway companies.

For every 18,000 pounds of wheat that goes to the city, there will go back to the farmer one pound of gold. For every loaf of bread upon a Londoner's table, there will go a cent and a half to the man behind the reaper. And so, the sale of every wheat crop means that the gold will come throbbing out into the arteries of business, like the blood from the heart, and on its way back and forth nourish the whole body of the nation.

More wheat and a more efficient organization of wheat agencies—that is the programme of the future. Already one unsuccessful effort has been made to hold an international wheat congress; and the second attempt may end more happily. Now that the world has become so small that a cable dispatch flashes completely around it in twelve minutes; now that there are forty-four nations united by the Hague conferences and fifty-eight by the Postal Union; now that war has grown to be so expensive that one cannon shot may cost as much as a college education and one battleship as much as a first-class university, it is quite probable that the march of coöperation will continue until there is a congress, and a central headquarters and tribunal, which will represent nothing less than an international fellowship of the wheat.—[Herbert N. San Gabriel Canyon.

BEAUTIES IN FOREST AND LAKE FAR IN OUR MOUNTAINS.

By a Special Contributor.

SERIOUSLY, we shouldn't be so modest about our own San Gabriel Cañon. Nearly every one of long residence in Los Angeles county knows vaguely that there is a long, meandering gash in the Sierra Madre Mountains which empties a green and turbulent stream into the valley the Spanish padres named for a most beloved saint. Visitors are told that the miles of fruit orchards through which they ride are watered by the San Gabriel River. It has its head waters, many will tell you, somewhere in the vicinity of Old Baldy's base, which is true in a small sense, but conveys nothing of what may be seen up in that boulder-strewn country, tortured beyond expression by some irritability of Mother Nature before time received a reckoning.

Up there in that stern jumble there are scenes before which the Yosemite is a placid garden. Up there, where the forest ranger digs in his heel through the leaf mold to find the firmer shale rock, and coaxes his pony to follow, searching the origin of a forest fire, which may be the glittering focus of the sun on a bit of isinglass, or the camp fire of some half-mad prospector, the world has a grim passivity like that of a battalion sleeping on its arms. Up there man loses just a bit of his egotism, and falls to wondering if the world was indeed made with the single idea of its being inhabited by him. There seems to be much up there that does not respond to human dominion.

But, after all, the San Gabriel Cañon, which is the only road to this interior, is not the impassable gorge it is thought to be by the dwellers in the valley. Man has accomplished enough against the indifference of the mountains so that it is possible for man or woman to sit easily in the saddle while the cañon ponies pick their own intelligent way, or to take seats in the several stages that go out each day from the stables at the mouth of the river and toil upward to its inception.

Pine Flats On Mt. Islip

And hour after hour, the turns of the cañon meet you with strange barbarisms in beauty, terrible heights and depths, sheer cliffs and sun-hovering flats, gardens of wild blossoms, and everywhere, God's unplagiarized architecture, now warming the human atom to admiration, now repelling with some inexplicable, awful monstrosity.

San Gabriel Cañon accepts the water from many brawling forks, but to the seeker after beauty that is understandable, the North Fork, on the way to Mount Islip, is most desirable, for it is more companionable. The trail from Azusa, at the mouth of the river, leads one across the fording-places many times until the main river is left behind. Then the saddle horses or stages follow the windings of Cold Brook, beneath a canopy made by the white-boled mountain alder, the most beautiful tree of California fastnesses. Cold Brook is the only trout stream worthy of mention in Los Angeles county. The spring waters that feed it are icy and darkened by plentiful shade, and the mountain trout seek its pools with the trout's true appreciation of cool, sequestered streams. In the great groves of alders, the fishing camps take toll through the summer from the impetuous waters, and the hail from the stage is always "How many?" and never "Did you get any?" The State has placed the limit of catch for one day at fifty, with a further stipulation to throw back the trout that does not measure five inches. After an interval is passed, the neat cottage of the ranger of the National Forest, who rides up and down the cañon each day, cautioning the campers against carelessness in building camp fires, and watching jealously for infringement of the rules laid down for the protection of our marvelous forests.

Following Cold Brook for eighteen miles from the mouth of the main river, or eight miles from where it tumbles into the broader San Gabriel, the trail for stages ends in a natural plateau, 5000 feet above sea level. Here the tents of the campers are scattered on the banks of the widening brook beneath the water-loving alders, and age-old pines and oaks, lovely beyond the possibilities of our language. The mountains form a natural amphitheater here, and in the evening the sun leaves the scene as suddenly as though a command had come from the Master Magician.

Mount Islip begins without preface here, forming the north bulwark of this amphitheater. The trail for mountain ponies goes on up its precipitous sides, through manzanita and sage, stunted pine and protruding shale, until, after three miles of arduous climbing, the mesa of Pine Flats is reached, 1500 acres in extent, and level as the fertile valley far below. The mountain is as silent as the enchanted valley of sleep. A few buzzards, and occasionally the rarely-seen eagle, circle in a fleckless sky. Save the floating birds, life seems to have forsaken this wilderness of brush and stone. The footfalls of the ponies echo out into the yawning cañons, and the loose stones rattle down the hillsides to fall into the sickening depths of the gorge, breaking for a moment the silence of this lonely, somnolent mountain. The pines rise, centuries old, straight as a message to God. Their shaggy boles are oftentimes six feet through at the base, and the last heaven-pointed cone more than 100 feet from the ground. They stand in groups on the level mesa, or march off in long ranks, as though the hand of man, and not unassisted nature, had bade them grow in allotted places. They cover the ground with a coarse fabric of needles, punctuated with great, ripened seed cones, and above, the lower branches, killed by the shade of the tree on which they cling, curve downward, white and gleaming like the inverted tusks of the mastodon. And in this cathedral, like the religiously-placed stations of the cross, stands the bloom of the yucca, softly white as the vestments of the saints, divinely pure as a gift direct, as it

Aunt Elizabeth's Burglar.

How a Midnight Marauder Was Frightened Away.

By a Special Contributor.

SEVERAL years ago when repeated burglaries were committed in a certain suburban town not far away, Aunt Elizabeth never laid aside the morning paper without remarking: "It will be our turn next!"

In spite of this predicion, nothing happened to disturb the peace of the family, although nearly every house in the neighborhood was entered by burglars during the season. Lists of valuables taken from the homes of her friends became Aunt Elizabeth's daily reading.

"If the burglars knew how easily they could get in our house," Aunt Elizabeth observed one morning as Uncle John stood in the hall waiting to learn what errands he was expected to do in the city that day—"if they only knew that our front windows have no fastenings, we wouldn't have an ounce of silver left to our name."

Uncle John looked properly uncomfortable. Promising to send a man to put the fastenings on those windows had become a daily habit. "I'll certainly remember to send a man up today," agreed Uncle John. "There should be fastenings on the windows of course, although you may depend upon it, Elizabeth, no burglar is going to be so foolish as to try one of those front windows, considering the electric light on our corner and the police force employed around here at present."

That night Uncle John telephoned that he was detained in the city by business and wouldn't reach home until late. As usual he had forgotten to send a man to put fastenings on the front windows, and as usual, Aunt Elizabeth had a premonition that the house would be entered by burglars.

As a precaution against the quiet entrance of burglars, Aunt Elizabeth arranged chairs before the front windows in such a way that no man could climb into the house without knocking down more or less furniture. This done, Aunt Elizabeth followed her family upstairs and fell asleep, comforted by the conviction that if a burglar attempted the front-window entrance, his coming would be announced through the house by falling chairs. Aunt Elizabeth then intended to shoot the man unless he straightway promised to depart in haste. She would give him a chance to escape with his life, minus the family silver.

When Uncle John returned that night, he discovered that he had forgotten his latch key. Not liking to startle the neighborhood at so late an hour by ringing the bell, he hesitated for a moment, blaming himself for carelessness, when he recalled the windows. How fortunate that he had not sent a man up that day to put on the fastenings. Uncle John determined not to forget tomorrow. In the meantime, he could enter the house without arousing any one.

Until that night, Uncle John never realized how softly the big windows opened. He lifted one without a sound, and was in the act of climbing over when a feeling of dread made him awkward. What if a policeman should see him in the broad glare of that electric light? Fear of being shot in the back made Uncle John plunge into the room, only to encounter two rocking chairs so placed they fell with a crash.

Uncle John was so out of patience with himself for waking the entire family, as he supposed, that he made a few emphatic remarks aloud, pulled the window down with a bang, picked up the chairs and dropped them with force enough to shake the house. Then he turned on the lights.

Feeling sure that Aunt Elizabeth would appear in a moment, the family in procession, searching for the burglar, Uncle John tramped around the sitting-room, the parlor and the hall, and awaited developments. He even imagined the conversation that would follow the advent of Aunt Elizabeth. After waiting a few moments and hearing not a sound in the house, Uncle John lighted a cigar, sat down and smoked. To this day the man hasn't recovered from his surprise. How the family could have slept through such an uproar was beyond comprehension.

Having finished his cigar, Uncle John turned off the lights, removed his shoes and tiptoed upstairs to bed. Since Aunt Elizabeth was asleep, it seemed too bad to waken her with the news that her long-expected burglar had entered the house.

The following morning Uncle John overslept. He was roused at last by Aunt Elizabeth, who was talking in excited tones about burglars.

"John, John, wake up!" said she. "Our turn came at last! There were burglars in our house last night!"

"Entered by the front window, I suppose," murmured Uncle John, without bothering to open his eyes.

"Front window, I should say not! They entered by the back door. Cut the lock right out! But John, the strange thing is, they not only escaped by the back door, leaving it wide open, but they left the silver."

By this time, Uncle John was wide awake. "Elizabeth," he demanded, "what are you talking about?"

"Come down and see for yourself! The burglars ransacked every closet and drawer off the dining-room and living-room. The house all but the front rooms and hall, looks as if a cyclone had struck it! But why in the world didn't they carry off the silver? There it is all tied up in bundles on the dining-room table! Solid silver! Why didn't they take it?"

"The situation is clear as noonday when you have all the facts in the case," Uncle John replied. Whereupon he explained the noise and commotion attendant upon his home-coming at midnight. "They must have believed the whole police force was after them," was his suggestion. "I'll send a man up today to put fastenings on those front windows."

Aunt Elizabeth is hard to understand. Instead of being thankful that their possessions remained under the family roof, she expressed great indignation when she saw the evening paper.

"Listen to this, John," she exclaimed. "The neighbors will think we haven't a thing in our house worth stealing! Do listen: 'The residence of John Bradley, on Marion avenue, was entered by burglars last night. Nothing taken.'"

"Too bad," sympathized Uncle John.

CITY OF BURNISHED COPPER.

Deserted Town Discovered by Arabs on the Great Sahara Desert.

[Pall Mall Gazette:] The Egyptian Gazette announced quite recently that an important expedition is to start shortly into the Sahara in search of the City of Burnished Copper, the remains of which are said to exist there, but which has been lost to human sight for many centuries.

The expedition will also visit the Oasis of Siwa, where the great Senussi tribe has one of its headquarters, and will also explore Jarabub, the Mecca of the Senussi, into which as yet no European has penetrated.

Interest has been revived in this ancient city by the recital of some Arabs, who not long ago returned from those parts. It was quite by accident that they came upon it. They were endeavoring to smuggle contraband across from Tripoli last winter, but were surrounded by the Coast Guards.

Some of the band got away and rode steadily southward for three days. They wandered for a long time in the hope of getting on the beaten track again, for their provisions had come to an end.

They had given up all hope, when suddenly they saw on the horizon a glittering mass like a large city, which at first appeared to them to be but the delusive effect of a mirage.

On closer acquaintance it turned out to be a real deserted city, built of burnished copper. They entered it, but the only signs of life were some sand grouse, which they promptly shot.

They explored the entire place, and then replenishing their water at one of the excellent wells in the city, they set out on the beaten track again, and returned to Cairo.

They naturally told their experiences on arrival, and their tale acquired many fantastic features in the telling, for there is no more imaginative being than the Arab. Their story naturally got to the ears of the antiquity authorities, who, after making due allowances, came to the decided conclusion that the city seen by these Arabs is identical with the lost "City of Copper," the legends of which appear in very ancient manuscripts.

Proof that the Arabs are not inventing the whole story was afforded by some relics of copper, which they brought back, and which are of very fine workmanship and unique design. Apparently the city is in an excellent state of preservation, due no doubt to the dry Sahara air.

The Egyptian Government Antiquities' Department is lending every assistance to the expedition, which is being privately financed, and which will be under the leadership of Mr. Dow Covington, who for many years has been engaged in exploring Egyptian antiquities.

The expedition will to a certain extent be aided by the Senussi tribe, and it is expected that most interesting and valuable information—apart from antique relics—of this ancient site, which had been completely swallowed up in the wide expanse of the Sahara, will result from this enterprise.

Your Picture With Taft's.

If you want your picture taken with President Taft, come to Washington. It's a sure-thing proposition. Whether the biggest man of the nation is at Beverly or Ballymahoo, it's all the same thing. For the nominal price of half a dollar or a bagatelle of that sort you can go thundering down to posterity on a piece of pasteboard clasping hands with the King of America or cosily locking arms with His Honorable Greatness. Of course, as far as the President goes, it is absent treatment, pictorially speaking. All you've got to be particular about is to be on hand your own self.

'Way down "the Avenue," close to the Capitol, an obscure little photographer's shop floats on its frontal a drapery of white cloth bearing blatantly the black legend: "Come in and have your picture taken with President Taft."

The trick is turned, of course, by the simple method of imposing the customer's figure beside the stock plates of President Taft with outstretched hand, as if in greeting, or in a friendly arm and arm pose. The illusion, however, is very good, and the perpetrator has been making money ever since the inauguration, when postcard fakers filled the streets with similar enticements. The Capitol or White House looms convincingly in the background., and in the forefront there you are in the Presidential grip and under the radiance of the Presidential smile. Of course your friend in Wayback believe they have ocular demonstration that you are the whole show when you come to Washington!—[Courier-Journal Washington Correspondence.

How Sea Lions Capture Gulls.

The sea lion displays no little skill and cunning in capturing gulls. When in pursuit the sea lion dives deeply under water and swims some distance from where it disappeared; then, rising cautiously, it exposes the tip of its nose along the surface, at the same time giving it a rotary motion. The unwary bird near by alights to catch the object, while the sea lion at the same moment settles beneath the waves and at one bound, with extended jaws, seizes its screaming prey and instantly devours it.—[London Globe.

The Mutiny of Molly.

A WOMAN TO THE RESCUE IN AN ECONOMIC EMERGENCY.

By a Special Contributor.

"SOMETHING'S got to be done," declared Molly Stanhope, gazing despairingly at two pink toes sticking through an aperture in a stocking for which the darning needle had done its best. The room was bitterly cold. Molly shivered, though she wore a coat and sat very near to the gas radiator, which, turned down low for economy's sake, burned with a smelly blue flame.

"I've struck it," she informed the wall. "Woman's work, indeed! I ain't going to stay here and bake biscuits when it's money we need."

She caught up the morning paper, kicking her feet to keep up the circulation. "HELP WANTED—FEMALE." "Domestics"—no, sir! "Stenographers"—she couldn't even spell! "Seamstresses"—she could only mend and make shirt waists. Suddenly one little advertisement seemed to jump out in letters of flame.

"WANTED—A pretty young woman who can sing and dance, to fill a place suddenly vacated in vaudeville. Only local engagement of two weeks. Inviting terms."

The blood began to sing in Molly's veins. Certainly she was pretty. Joe was prejudiced, but others said so, too. Singing and dancing was easy—and inviting terms! Then her exuberance wilted. There was one obstacle—Joe. And Joe, being her husband, was an overwhelming obstacle.

Joe and Molly were old married people, who had faced the battle of life together for six whole months. It was a real battle now, too, for Joe, who was what Molly called "a littery man," had lost his position with the newspaper, and his plays did not sell, somehow. He tramped the streets interviewing editors day after day, and came home fagged, resentful, mute; imploring Molly's leniency with tired eyes. And Molly burned with the desire to do something to keep the wrinkles away from the corners of Joe's eyes—her own eyes didn't matter now, though when she had been a glove-counter girl she had studied the Beauty Column assiduously. But Joe had fixed ideas regarding woman's work, and said she must never go out into the world again. All Molly could do was to keep the infinitesimal one-room apartment with the three-by-six kitchen shiningly neat, and to cut down the gas bill by shivering all day.

The doorbell jangled, and she discovered a boy with a telegram. It was for Joe, but he would not be home for hours. Molly opened it:

"Mother ill. Interest on farm mortgage due. Can you help? JAMES STANHOPE."

Joe's parents in wan And Joe had left with 15 cents in his pocket that morning. Molly did not weep. Instead, she gave the arts and crafts table, which they had purchased on the installment plan in a moment of unthinking fervor, a little kick, and then repentantly knelt to wipe off the mark with her handkerchief. Then she drew forth her own little hoard of savings, money which she had laid aside, "for a cloudburst," she said, and folding all the bills but one together, thrust them into an envelope which she directed to James Stanhope, Truville, Indiana. Next she looked into the mirror. She had bought some 59-cent puffs the day before, and she was, indeed, a creature to dream of. It took her just three minutes to put on her hat and gloves, cut out the vaudeville ad., tumble downstairs three steps at a time, and make off toward the stage manager's office.

There were other girls there before her, girls she thought prettier than herself, and who were certainly more experienced. Invincible beings they appeared, in their cheap imitations of prevailing modes. But somehow, when the stout man with the harassed face appeared at the door, he looked straight down the line to Molly—and his glance stopped. He spoke to the younger man behind him, and what he said was: "Beauty! and precisely Dorine's type."

He beckoned to Molly, who followed him into the office. After hurling a few terse questions at the girl, who honestly confessed her inexperience immediately, Manager Hart said: "You see, this particular act has been so extensively advertised that Dorine Drummond's illness threatened to cause us big loss. We must secure a young woman of similar physical qualifications who will not disappoint our audiences—a blond of the sweet simplicity type. Dorine's special appeal is to the boxes, not the gallery. She sings directly to some man in a stage box. Now, there's a happy medium in that sort of thing. Think you can strike it?"

"For Joe, for Joe," whispered Molly between clenched teeth. Jumping up, she carolled a popular ditty, holding out her arms to the two men with a tender grace so delightfully roguish that Hart threw away his cigar to clap, and the other man muttered: "Bully!"

Not long after, she burst into the apartment and threw down her bundles, singing like a lark. Then she arranged her blond hair exactly like the lady in the smartest hair-shop window in town, arrayed herself in a fresh pink gingham, changed her ragged stockings for the one whole pair she owned, polished her nails, and began to get supper.

When Joe arrived, the room was pleasantly warm and filled with a savory odor.

Molly's heart was quaking, for she had to tell Joe of his mother's illness and her own rash step. But she flew into the old tan overcoat's embrace as if she had not a care.

"Hello, Moll! Great doings," chuckled Joe.

"Oh, Joe, you haven't sold the play?"

The big, brainy young man turned away his face, which was now, as always, as expressionless as a wooden Indian's. A gambler had once told Joe he would give $10,000 for as non-committal a face as his.

"Not exactly," he said. "I've two tickets for 'The Red Mill' tonight. Johnson—he criticises, you know——"

Molly executed a jig of joy, her husband looking on, his wooden Indian countenance remarkably illumined.

"Likewise," he continued, "I've found something that will stave off the wolf a bit. It's not permanent, but it'll pay well. John Grey Simonds, the author, wants some work done, evenings, putting his African memoirs in shape. Johnson told him about me and—well, I got the job. I begin Monday, hours 8 to 11."

Molly stopped dancing. It seemed like Fate. She had signed an agreement to appear in vaudeville every evening for two weeks, beginning Monday. Joe need not know anything about it, if she chose. All the pros and cons flashed through her mind, but a casual spectator, watching her bright face, would never have guessed that she was thinking seriously.

"We have lamb chops and Saratoga chips for supper," she chirped, unhooking from the kitchen door a board which, laid across a box, became their table. "And a jar of real cream," she continued, juggling knives and forks and plates with lightning rapidity. "And some chocolate——"

"Flub-dub," finished Joe, eyeing with disgust the dish of blanc mange. "I never do like that soft dope you make, Moll. Good old pie for mine."

"Oh, Joe, it ain't healthy to eat pie all the time, and we had so much of it at Jake's counter——" Then, seeing Joe's twinkle, she accused: "Meanie! You're teasing!"

"Cheer up, old kid," said Joe. "I'll consume your fairy floss with a patient smile. Why, Molly, maybe you think I don't realize the difference between the way I used to knock around and life in our home here," surveying the four walls with a lordly air. "Hello, there's the laundry man," as the bell pealed.

He came back with a paper bundle from which, like a crepe banner, a distressful-looking black length filled with jagged holes trailed down.

"What in thunder's this, Moll?"

Dismay smote Molly. "My stocking," she faltered.

"Molly, girl, you're not wearing stockings like that, are you?"

Then, as she did not answer, he flung himself into the arm chair, took her on his lap, and forcibly removed her trim little shoe.

"There, you see, Joe, these are all right. That's an old one I black shoes with," gasped the girl.

But Joe, incredulous, put her down and marched over to the bureau in stern silence. He dumped his wife's pitiful supply of hosiery upon the floor and examined each gaping wound with touching solicitude. This done, he bolted for the door.

"Where you going, Joe?" quavered Molly.

"To buy you some stockings," Joe shot back. Then he rushed toward her and suddenly, without warning, knelt at her feet and laid his shock of rough red hair against her arm.

"Molly, girl, have I brought you to this!" he choked. "And you always wear good ones when I'm around so I won't know!"

Molly, looking down at his head through a blur of tears, saw some gray hairs.

"Oh, don't feel bad, my dear," she sobbed. "I never did like stockings, Joe, I——"

Then she broke down, and for a while there was a redundancy of tears in the Stanhope flat. When the storm was cleared. Molly's nose was powdered, the chops consumed, and the dishes washed, they had to start for the theater, and she had not yet told her news. Nor could she summon courage to when she looked into her husband's tragic, shame-stricken face, from which the mask of inscrutability had fallen. He had too much to bear already.

Coming home from the theater, Joe let fall some chance remarks which complicated the situation still more.

"I like to see a good show," he admitted, "but I'm glad you're not an actress, Moll. I hate to see human beings making a public exhibition of themselves, made up and diked out to represent anything and everything but nature. I write plays because I know that if one ever took, it would bring in more lucre than years of other scribbling. But you know my ideas, Kid. The best women never do anything so well as the work they find to do in their own homes, and you're essentially that kind of woman, dearie. You were like a wild rose, among all those cheap glove-counter girls, and I want to keep you that way. God knows I hate myself for not doing better by you so far, but I haven't croaked yet, and I don't intend that you'll ever have to earn your so many plunks per, again. You're better off in a home, however humble."

Guilty Molly shuddered. But she had burned her bridges that afternoon, and there was no way out. She clasped Joe's arm convulsively. Why had she ever taken such a reckless step? Would he ever forgive her, even though he knew it was done for him?

She peered up through the darkness into Joe's face. It was grim, with a grimness which was for the relentless world, not for Molly, but which awed her just the same. You may be sure she stared long at his chin, which was very much of a chin, and which she both loved and feared. That scrutiny settled it. Without more ado, Molly decided that Joe must never know of her escapade. He would be away every evening, and it would be a simple task to hide it from him. Lest she add to his burdens, she would not tell him about his mother unless she grew worse. If the old folks did not need more money, she could replace her former hoard with what she earned. She would pay for the arts and crafts table herself, and the grocery bill, too—Joe, dense old dear, would never be the wiser. Intellectually her superior as he was, he was no manager, and Molly knew it.

She had no difficulty in slipping away to morning rehearsals. And after the first fearful Monday evening, when stage fright and Joe—fright nearly overcame her, her little strategy gave her no trouble. Joe departed for his seance with John Grey Simonds (for whom Molly offered up frequent prayers) before 8, and that left her

LOST!

Simple word, but sometimes fraught with tragic significance.

To become lost in the timber is no idle pastime, where one is prone to travel in circles and where even the most familiar objects assume a strange, unrecognizable aspect. It is no pleasant experience to be lost in the mountains where there are towering landmarks and debouching cañons to follow in the creepy hope of arriving somewhere at some time if strength and courage hold out. It is no occasion for frivolous jest to be lost at sea without compass or sun whereby to fix an aimless course.

But for absolute, hopeless bewilderment without reason or remedy no similar experience can surpass, if indeed it can equal, that of being lost upon a great trackless prairie of the Middle West in a dense fog.

Prairie fogs are not of frequent occurrence, but when they do materialize, they seem persistently inclined to make amends for any tardy marks which may be registered against them; often lasting from 24 to 48 hours without a single rift, or a breath of wind to stir the oppressive air. And for sepulchral, death-like opacity the celebrated fogs of London are shorn of much of their well-earned fame in comparison.

It was upon one of these gloomy occasions that Mabel Stilwell, a girl from Blue Earth settlement, in Southern Minnesota, drew rein upon a slight eminence a score of miles from any known white habitation and gazed about her into the blank wall of slowly-settling fog with terrified eyes.

The time was early October, the Indian summer of the Middle West, and the morning had been so pleasantly exhilarating, the sky so soft and blue, and the distance so hazy and inviting, that the girl could not resist the silent call to saddle up her pet pony and take a spanking ride over the crisp brown prairie stretching for unnumbered miles to the southward.

In her keen enjoyment of the delightful freedom which a dash over the beckoning prairies ever stirs in the most sluggish blood, she had seen with heedless eyes the slowly-thickening haze and gradually-yellowing tint of the sunlight until too late to avoid the ominous danger closing in on every side.

At the first realization of the truth she had headed away in what she believed to be the direction of home and urged her pony to its topmost speed.

But after hours of severe riding, she seemed to have only gotten deeper and deeper into the cavernous depths of the terrifying gloom, and with sinking heart she realized that she was lost in the ghostly, unnatural twilight.

She thought of giving her pony free rein, trusting him to find the right direction homeward, but she remembered that in these peculiar fogs the instinct of horses, usually so unerring, is as much at fault as that of their human masters, and that small hope could be held out from this source.

And while she grew numb with icy dread at the gravity of the situation an added terror forced itself upon her already suffering nerves.

From out the depths of the gloom the wailing cry of a prairie wolf came to her ears, a sound by no means pleasant even to the most hardened frontiersman. And back on her trail the uncanny note was taken up and echoed from other unseen throats until seemingly a dozen of the wild creatures were gathering to the sinister call of their leader.

These wolves, a species now nearly if not quite extinct, were about four times the size of the coyote, a little smaller than the great timber wolf of the North, and possessing strength and cunning second only to their royal kinsmen of the Canadian boundary.

Scarcely if ever would they attack a human being outright, but when desperate with hunger were capable of making a most unpleasant demonstration of greedy rage, as might a band of savage dogs.

The girl's pony, panting from its strenuous exertions, trembled in every limb at the sound of the prairie wolves, and but for the restraining hand upon the bridle rein would have run away in terror until he dropped in his tracks exhausted.

The first feeling of paralyzing fear passed away in some small measure, and Mabel Stilwell remembered that she was a daughter of the frontier settlements and possessed the power to protect herself from harm in many of the dangers and emergencies of her life's environment.

In riding about the prairies, she always carried her light repeating carbine secured to the horn of her saddle, and this weapon she knew how to use with telling effect when occasion demanded it.

Nearer and nearer sounded the snarling chorus of wolfish voices, and soon a number of shadowy forms and glaring, yellow eyes appeared from the misty gloom.

Quieting her frightened pony by a stern word of command, the girl raised the carbine to her shoulder and shot the foremost wolf dead in his tracks.

The others scattered wildly at the sudden rifle shot, but almost immediately gathered again and with savage ferocity pounced upon and devoured to the last shred the flesh of their slain leader.

Mabel trembled as she witnessed the cannibal feast, for she knew that the taste of blood would render the animals more ferocious and vastly more dangerous than before.

But her safety was in standing her ground and fighting them away, and when they had finished devouring the first wolf carcass she fired again, this time into the seething pack of shaggy forms without taking any special one for a target.

She saw two of them roll over in the grass to become food for their frenzied companions, and she began to feel a trifle encouraged. The spirit of battle, especially to the victor, does much toward banishing the more petty human emotions of fear and helplessness.

Eight shots were sent from the girl's carbine, and at least six wolves were either killed or seriously crippled before the rest decided to fade away from the vicinity and seek diversion elsewhere.

That danger was at least temporarily past, and Mabel breathed easier.

Her victory over the first peril of the situation nerved her to fresh effort, and after allowing her pony to rest for a short time she replaced her carbine upon the saddle horn, gathered up the bridle rein and rode forward at random, hoping to eventually strike a creek bed or something which would lead her to the Blue Earth River, the course of which she could follow homeward.

She tried to think of some stream or peculiarity of the ground within a radius of twenty or thirty miles outside of the river settlement which she might recognize if she should chance to stumble onto it, but the more she tried to think the more confused her mind became, until all she could recall to mental vision was the vast, billowy expanse of autumn-seared prairie, treeless, trackless and deadly monotonous.

But she would keep moving while daylight lasted, any way, and then—she dared not allow herself to picture any possibility of what then. The inky darkness of a long, torturesome night upon the desolate prairie was too terrible to contemplate.

She must have covered a number of miles judging from the feeling of fatigue which she was beginning to experience, when her pony stopped, distended his nostrils as though scenting danger ahead, and refused to move another step in that direction.

A new fear blanched her cheeks, for this was the way Dustfoot always acted when Indians were near. There were many straggling bands and camps of Sioux in the country at that time, and none were of a disposition to merit the trust or good will of the white settlers. While not openly hostile, these redskin bands were insolent, treacherous and thieving, and frequently suspected of more serious crimes which they were cunning enough, if guilty, to successfully cover up.

Mabel Stilwell preferred by far to take chances with a pack of wolves than with a roving band of Sioux.

The pony laid his ears flat against his neck, shook his head in a peculiar way, then stood still as a rock with body lowered and nose pointing straight out ahead of him.

A few moments later a procession of weird, ghostly forms, seemingly of gigantic size as they were dimly outlined in the murky fog, passed by in single file, silent and uncanny as graveyard specters.

Their fantastic attire and waving head plumes told that they were Indians, and Mabel dared not even breathe until the last one had passed from sight and was swallowed up in the vast cavern of gloom.

Almost a sob of thankfulness escaped her lips when she saw that they had passed on without suspecting her presence, and leaning over the saddle, she laid her face against the pony's neck and gave him a generous hug as a reward for his faithful signal of danger.

The animal raised his head, pricked up his ears, and looked around as though to convey to his mistress the information that he was ready to proceed on his way.

She lifted the bridle rein, and he started forward at a brisk walk, stepping rather gingerly, however, and sniffing at the ground as a dog might have done.

A few rods ahead a well-worn footpath crossed their course, and this the Indians had evidently been following. Doubtless it was an old Indian trail originally.

Mabel halted and debated for some time whether to take this trail in the opposite direction as a venture, or to keep on the aimless course she was going.

Small choice was there between the two, but she decided to follow the old trail and take chances on the result.

Dustfoot seemed willing enough to keep the path, and after a ride of a few miles he halted at the precipitous bank of a narrow, lazy stream of water. The girl's heart bounded with joy, for she knew this must be none other than her own Blue Earth River. But the next moment her spirits sank again; she realized that she might be above or below the settlement many miles, and there could not be many hours of daylight left.

The path divided at the river bank and led in either direction along its course. Almost mechanically she turned the pony's head downstream and proceeded in that direction, not knowing whether right or wrong.

She was nearly blind with fatigue, and every muscle ached from her long ride in the saddle, while the thought of the night now close at hand filled her with indescribable horror. Her courage was almost exhausted.

Far beyond the great pall of fog the autumn sun went down in a blaze of splendor. As he did so the fog lifted for a brief period along the river, and his yellow beams trailed long shafts of golden mist across the dark walls of deepening gloom upon either side.

Dustfoot neighed with shrill delight, and Mabel fairly shouted in hysterical relief as the blessed vision of Blue Earth settlement was revealed, scarcely a gunshot distant, in the yellow sunlight.

CLYDE SCOTT CHASE.

Summer Night.

With sheaf of silver lilies in her arms
She comes across the lilac plains of dusk,
While linnets' wings go flutt'ring soft alarms,
And all the air is sweet with rose and musk;
She trails her gown of faintly-flower'd brocade
O'er the pale splendor of last sunset bars,
Then, as the nightingale in yonder glade
Flings golden spray of song 'mid softest shade,
She stays to list, and, like a heedless maid,
From her loose posy scatters blossoms far:
And lo! each flow'r that near her heart has laid Shines out a star.

" 'Humph.' Mystified, Blank knelt on the floor. 'What,' he said, 'am I doing now?'

" 'Ha, ha, ha! Saying your prayers,' was the reply.

"Blank then held up in succession before the telephone his watch, a hat, a fan; and Dash, at the other end of the wire, named the articles promptly and correctly.

"So Blank, the gullible Blank, was convinced; and before ringing off, he told Dash to be sure to send the spectroscope agent around, and he'd buy two from him, one for the office and one for the house."

Mr. Crane laughed, lighted a cigar, and began to talk elevators again.

"The joker Dash," said Mr. Crane, "had been talking from a friend's office across the street, and through the window he had had a full view of Blank all the time."

Why Truth Goes Naked.

SECRETARY MEYER, at a Newport luncheon, answered an interesting question.

"Why," a naval cadet asked, "do we always speak of the 'naked' truth?"

Secretary Meyer smiled and answered:

"There is an ancient fable, and one very appropriate to this hot weather, which tells us that on a summer afternoon Truth and Falsehood set out to bathe together. They found a crystal spring, they bathed in the cool, fresh water, and Falsehood, emerging first, clothed herself in the garments of Truth and went her way. But Truth, unwilling to put on the garb of Falsehood, departed naked. And to this day Falsehood wears Truth's fair white robes, so that many persons mistake her for Truth's very self; but poor Truth still goes naked."

THE Right Rev. Bishop of Delaware tells the following story:

"A young man came to me one day and said: 'Bishop, I want you to marry me on next Wednesday.'

" 'All right, young man; I'll marry you,' I assured him.

" 'Well, I want the bell to ring,' he continued.

" 'Very well, you can have the bell rung.'

" 'Well, I want the organ to play.'

" 'All right; you can have the organ played.'

" 'And I want everything else that anybody ever had at a church wedding.'

" 'Certainly; you shall have it.'

" 'Well, the night came, the bell rang, the organ played, the church was crowded, and everything went off as the young man wanted it. When the ceremony was over, the young couple waited, instead of leaving the chancel. So I held out my hand, shook hands with the bride, and then held out my hand to the bridegroom. He had his hand deep in his trousers pocket, and as I stood with my hand out, he said, somewhat impatiently and in a tone that could be heard all over the church:

" 'Now, don't be in such an all-fired hurry, Bishop; I'm getting the money out just as fast as I can.'

"And everybody in the church giggled."—[Lippincott's.

" 'Who's that fat old hippopotamus of a woman opposite?'

" 'That's my wife,' was the reply.

" 'Thanks,' said the officer hastily. 'Thanks. That's all I wanted to know.'

Glutton Gus.

WILLING SPENCER, at a dinner in Newport, praised French cooking.

"Cooking like this," said Mr. Spencer, during a course of poulet à la crapaudine, or small broiled chickens with tartare sauce—"cooking like this is almost apt to turn a man into a Glutton Gus. At least," he amended, "it brings old Glutton Gus to mind."

"Glutton Gus?" said a young matron in a corselet frock.

"Glutton Gus," said Mr. Spencer, "lived in Conshohocken, a flourishing town near Philadelphia. He worked in the iron mills, and all over the place he was notorious for his large appetite. Glutton Gus they called him, almost to his face.

"One evening, Mrs. Gus prepared, against her omnivorous husband's return, a large, thick slice of ham and six boiled eggs. But Gus shook his head as he looked at the meal, and laying down his dinner kettle and peeling off his coat, he said feebly:

" 'I don't want no supper tonight, Kid. I'm sick.'

"He rubbed his stomach uneasily and turned away.

" 'Oh, do eat a little something, Gus,' said his wife. 'You look terrible. An egg will hearten you up.'

" 'Well,' he sighed, 'I will take a bite or two, if you think it'll do me good.'

"So he sat down at the kitchen table, polished off the ham in a twinkling, and was just about cutting the top off the last egg when his little daughter entered.

" 'Gimme some egg, Dada?' she lisped, leaning against his knee.

"He thrust impatiently into her hand the top of the egg that he had just cut off.

" 'There,' he said. 'Take it and eat it, ye greedy little glutton, and let yer poor sick father starve.' "

"Why," said he, "the poverty of Europe is so acute that I am credibly informed it is quite a common thing over there for little children, knocking at neighbors' doors, to whine:

Why They Grinned.

MRS. GRANT was undoubtedly the disciplinarian in the family, and Mr. Grant, who was a very busy lawyer, was regarded by the two children as one of themselves, subject to the laws of "Mother." Instead of making the impression he had fondly hoped to do he saw the two little imps glance in a surprised manner at each other and then simultaneously a grin broke over the faces of both culprits, and Gladys said in a voice of derisive glee:

BURBANKIAN CONTROVERSY.

THE MATTER CAUSING UNNECESSARY CRITICISM.

By Ernest Braunton.

THROUGH both personal interviews and correspondence the writer has been repeatedly urged to enter into the controversy now being waged locally over Luther Burbank and his so-called creations. It is not the wish of the writer to enter into this "squabble," for it is certain that in the end Mr. Burbank will get credit only for whatsoever of unquestioned value he has given the world, and those things of little or no value will be dropped as is the case with the products of each and all. As Mr. Burbank has not sought to belittle the horticultural work or besmirch the character of the editor of this department (or anybody else, for that matter,) no warrant exists for an attack upon him or his plant output. On this page plants considered worthless have been condemned, and yet praise has not been withhel when due, either to Mr. Burbank or other plant breeders, and this policy will be continued so long as the writer remains "in print."

THE WASHINGTONIA, NATURALIZED AT LOS ANGELES.

As to the merits of the present controversy, it has not been denied, on the contrary, it has been conceded by all, that Mr. Burbank has given much of value to horticulture; has any of his detractors accomplished more or as much? He has made some failures, but they are common to each and all. From all the evidence thus far brought to light, it would appear that all this harsh criticism is unwarranted. Mr. Burbank has been charged with "insufferable egotism," but it is admitted that it is further charged that it is not out of proportion to his horticultural achievements. Can the same be said of his critic? Not of any whom the writer now calls to mind. It is further charged that it is a hard matter either to see Mr. Burbank or get into direct correspondence with him, but the writer has not found it so. His "egotism" has not prevented his writing a personal letter to the editor of this department stating: "I have read your valuable horticultural writings for several years and with a great deal of interest." Of the many letters received, all have been from Mr. Burbank personally, and any one of recognized horticultural standing can get an interview with him. He is so much pestered with self-styled plant breeders and experimenters who are only seeking to get into the horticultural limelight that he has to refuse to see them or waste his entire time and accomplish nothing.

As to the "Wonderberry" over which such a press war has been waged; it is worthless so far as the writer is concerned. It is an improvement, in flavor alone, over the common nightshade, but the same time and effort put forth with something higher up in the scale of fruits would seem more like the work of a Burbank. The common nightshade is so vile as an article of food that any improvement possible would not give us a fruit worthy of the high praise bestowed upon the Wonderberry by the seedsman who has sold it to a confiding public. Let us all judge Luther Burbank and his horticultural work as we would that of any other man and remember that he is not personally responsible for the overcolored statements concerning his plants put forth by reporters for sensational periodicals. "If you can't boost, don't knock." What there is to be gained by attacking a man whose actual achievements have made him famous is a problem too deep for the writer. It is a question in the mind of the writer if any one engaged in this local controversy is capable of properly judging of the value of Burbank's work. Let us view it in the spirit of Him who said: "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone."

The Most Baffling Plant.

Just now, there is passing out of bloom a native plant known as the "Yellow Tree Poppy" (Dendromecon rigidum) that baffles every effort of the gardener and nurseryman to grow it from seeds or cultivate or even establish in the garden a plant collected in its native habitat. A few have been started from seeds, but from the day of their appearance they begin to die, and with each successive move more perish. If any survive transplanting to the garden, they gradually succumb to some unknown influence.

Even in their native haunts they endure but for a time, and this probably accounts for their limited numbers about Los Angeles. Three years ago the writer gathered some seeds for a Wall-street nurseryman to experiment with, from several large bushes up in the Arroyo Seco. Since that time, the bushes have died and the remains are still to be seen, though nothing has changed in environment or conditions. Out of about a dozen plants known to exist in this Arroyo between Pasadena and the foot of Switzer's trail, there is but one now growing that was alive about eight years ago. In the Tejunga Cañon and Wash, the same conditions are true. Out on the wash near Roscoe Station, on the S.P. R.R., there are generally quite a number, but their numbers and position are constantly changing. The shrub is an attractive one, growing under favorable conditions to eight feet in height. The foliage is blue, fully as blue as that of its near relation, the Matilija Poppy (Romaneya Coulteri,) but its leaves are not divided like the latter's, but are broadly willow-shape. The flowers are like the common yellow (not orange) California poppy, also the same color as the Mexican Tulip Poppy (Hunnemannia,) though not so large as well-grown garden flowers. It may be that in cultivation the Dendromecon flowers would become much larger.

Water Freely Now.

There is no time in the year when garden plants in general require so much water as at present. All plants are now growing vigorously, and Mother Earth and the surrounding atmosphere (in Southern California at least) are as dry as they will become during the present year. Sprinkling lightly is of little use, and in some cases worse than nothing. The soil needs saturating, and often, too. Each irrigation should be followed by a thorough stirring of the surface soil, for by this means you may save one-half the water. It is really better for a plant to have a gallon of water once in two weeks with a proper cultivation, than a gallon each week and a baked soil surface.

Ignorance of Landscape Gardening.

In the July number of the Outlook, the editor has in an amusing manner the popular ignorance of landscape gardening. He records an interview with a well-known landscape designer, the conservation being taken down by a stenographer. The whole article should be read by every one at all interested in gardening (and who is not?) The first paragraph is here quoted:

"I represent," said the editor, "the intelligent popular ignorance on the subject of landscape gardening. So far as I have observed, the average American citizen, even the educated American citizen who has some taste and some interest in beauty, has generally regarded landscape gardening as a kind of trowel and wheelbarrow trade—possibly a little higher in the scale than kitchen gardening, but not much. This is, of course, an exaggerated way of putting it, and yet to a large extent I represent that view. My talks with you during the past six months have given me an inkling that landscape gardening is a science as well as an art—that it should perhaps be called 'landscape architecture.'"

What the Nice Gentleman Said.

A certain lady in Philadelphia took her 5-year-old son to a photographer. The little fellow could not be kept still. The camera man was pleasant and considerate as he could be, called the child all the sweet, endearing names he could think of, while using every device of gentle persuasion to make the wiggler keep quiet. Finally he turned to the mother, who by this time was almost in despair, and said: "Now, Madam, if you will leave your darling with me just a minute or so I think I can take his beautiful face to perfection."

The mother withdrew for a short time. Soon the photographer summoned her and exhibited a successful negative.

When they reached home, the mother asked: "Harold, what did that nice gentleman say to you when I left you alone with him?"

"Well, he thaid," lisped Harold, "if you don't thit still, you ugly, squint-eyed monkey, I'll thake the life out of your trembling carcath.' Then I that perfectly still, Mamma!"—[Detroit News Tribune.

NATURAL PARKS.

NIA PECULIARLY FAVORED IN THIS RESPECT.

ORNIA is peculiarly a land of beauty, and her borders there exist some of the grand-tural parks to be found in any land, parks of and diversified charms that they would by put to shame the finest example of man's in landscape building. It is to be regretted Federal or State government cannot secure for all our people.

pon the edge of the Colorado Desert, a little a hundred miles east of Los Angeles, and illage of Palm Springs (known to the natives aliente,) lies a cañon about which the world knows but little, yet one that has an inter-ory, full of romance, and so filled with natu- that visitors have often called it the "Little Chino Cañon in its wanderings is many but the approach from the floor of the des- most charming part is about three miles, of about 1600 feet through huge boulders, path allowing but scant room for the single person or animal. After compass- stretch of rocks a mile wide and three one suddenly comes upon an oasis that in nearly every tint of living green may in season be seen wild flowers of part of the floor of the cañon runs, year, a stream of the purest sparkling the perpetual snow of the cañons on the Mt. San Jacinto. About 300 feet to the slightly greater elevation bubbles a mag- whose waters are nearly as white as to have some medicinal virtues. Only a feet still farther westward is a sluggish of clear water the temperature of which, summer, is 115 degrees Fahrenheit. Surely meeting of the (many) waters," and it is the like exists, within so small an area, California.

black mucky peat, and over several acres of wild peaches in every stage of develop- switches to fallen monarchs that span of life and died of old age. These of trees grown from seeds brought here fathers in the days of long ago. Along grow immense, quaint old sycamores in- stately water alders of great age with and spreading cottonwoods. Lesser in great variety on every side. At once the site of a branch mission, the nearly, or in many places quite, perpendicular, composed largely of a soft sandstone, honeycombed in places by caves of various shapes and sizes, some of them of considerable depth. From this vantage ground the cañon appears to come to an abrupt end just a half-mile above, and the steepest slope of old Mt. San Jacinto rises above you in all its grandeur, thickly studded in every part with giant cone-bearing evergreens through which tiny brooks tumble to meet below and form the Chino Cañon Creek.

This is but one of the many beauty spots to be found in the vicinity of Palm Springs. Though the writer has traveled over California for more than a score of years, he has seen no cañon scenery more worthy of preservation by our government than that of charming Palm Valley.

Beauties of Palm Valley.

Chino Cañon is not the only one about the borders of Palm Valley that should be set aside for a national park. There are cañons fairly choked with giant specimens of our native fan palm (Washingtonia fillifera,) all that now exists except for a few on another part of the "desert." Fires have decimated their numbers and destroyed their beauty, and we cannot be assured of their preservation unless taken under the wing of our Federal government.

Obstructing Street Trees.

In nearly every precinct in Los Angeles there are street trees with branches so low-hanging as to interfere with pedestrians on the sidewalk. The regulation of street trees is under the control of the police department, for only an officer walking along the various streets knows when such interference exists, and the public has a right to free and unrestricted use of the sidewalk and street. In this duty the police of our city are somewhat negligent, for it has always required a complaint on the part of neighbors before relief is given, except low-hanging branches sweep the helmet from the head of him whom we pay for seeing that our trees do not place us in danger of an Absalom-like suspension. When we get simmered down to a business-like method of dealing with the street-tree problem, we shall have a corps of official pruners under control of the city forester that will keep our trees in the best of condition.

Cities Buying Extensions.

In order to control the planning and use of additions, many cities in Europe, more especially in Germany and Switzerland, buy surrounding lands needed for extending the municipal limits. The city of Ulm, in Wurttemburg, owned, 1901, more than three-fifths of the land within the town and about 3000 acres outside the boundaries, where the city is expected to reach within a short time. From this land they have made enough profit to cover the expense of many valuable municipal improvements.

German City Planning.

F. L. Olmsted says that in Germany, due regard to the welfare of the future inhabitants of a city must be had at the time of planning, for the Saxon requires that the following must be taken note of:

To the claims of security from fire, of the public traffic which is to be expected, and of health; to a suitable supply of drainage; to the position and development of the place, and to the need for dwellings corresponding to the local conditions; and also to insuring that streets and squares shall not be disfigured.

The width of the streets is to be decided by the requirements of local traffic . . . care must be taken to provide short and convenient connections between streets and with the chief centers of traffic . . . open spaces and public shrubberies must be so arranged in respect of size, position, and number as to be useful in relation both to convenience of traffic and to general welfare . . . sites for churches and school buildings, as well as public playgrounds and recreation grounds, must be provided in sufficient number . . . front gardens, except when they are provided only in view of a future widening of the street, must have a depth of at least fifteen feet . . . in no case may the back buildings of a street form a continuous row.

Evolution of the Boulevard.

As the common name of "boulevard" implies, these broad thoroughfares originated in the opportunities which are repeatedly presented during the expansion of fortified cities for so utilizing the sites of the older and outgrown military defenses, technically known as boulevards or bulwarks. But the utility and popularity of these circumferential boulevards early led to a demand for similar thoroughfares running in and out of town on radial lines, where danger of traffic congestion is obviously much greater than on circumferential lines; and they came to be a regular feature of progressive city planning on the continent of Europe during the latter half of the nineteenth century. These boulevards are not in most cases primarily pleasure drives, as is usually implied of a so-called boulevard in America, but are used by street railways and all kinds of street traffic, heavy and light, the trees and decorative features being a mere incident, though an important and a highly-appreciated incident of this general utility.

Dope.

Yes, but, Muriel, it isn't the word "dope" that the Globe objects to, but the slang use of it, which perverts its meaning. Dr. William Everett was right when he said that "dope" in its proper sense is a valuable addition to the language. It is the violent extension of it, to make it mean a prediction, or to predict, that is objectionable.—[Boston Globe.

Winter in the Tehachepi.

Departing autumn spread her sallow grass
  Thatch-like upon the slanting hill roof steep;
Athwart it now the dull rains safely pass
  Into the eaves trough of the cañon deep.

Thin cottonwoods, bereft of folial cloaks,
  Reach pallid fingers toward a misty sun.
Impassive stand the stolid, Spartan oaks
  Above their drifted leafage, dank and dun.

Wraith-like the sycamores loom cold and stark
  With rigid limbs as gray as wrapped with snow;
Too frail their aspect to sustain the dark
  And heavy knots of vampire mistletoe.

The lonely path beneath the ravished trees
  Is hidden by a cover brown as rust.
No ferny fragrance delicately weaves
  Its freshness with the molding, earthy must.

Fair, fervent Summer's fire is vanished long,
  Its ash the scattered hoar frost on the rock,
Chilled into silence is the south bird's song
  While rude winds at the bare nest-cradles mock.

One voice alone in glad denial lifts:
  The dauntless mountain streams together sing,
"See where we catch the blueness through the rifts!
  Fare heartfully; life ever moves toward spring.'
—[Neeta Marquis, in Sunset.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

EVOLUTION OF A HEN RANCH.

A RED-LETTER EXPERIENCE OF AN INVALID IN ARIZONA.

SEVEN years ago there came to Tucson, Ariz., a young clergyman from the East in the important matter of health. One night as he lay awake under the million-starred sky of Southern Arizona, he said: "This may be the country God forgot," as said the Knocker, "but there is no sky dome on earth so fretted with golden fire as this in Arizona; give me back my health, and I will praise thee forever." Here, too, was born a strong desire to get away from city life and live in the country. Action soon followed resolution and the young minister and his family moved ten miles east of Tucson into a land of nowhere in particular. Here he pitched his tent and sat down to meditate under hospitable cottonwoods.

It was here he heard the call of the hen. Not that he had come down with "hen fever," but merely that he remembered how companionable the old hen used to seem to him when a boy. So he bought twenty-four hens that didn't figure in the Standard of Perfection, and entered the only school of poultry culture that he has ever known. He spent a year crooning to those hens, affectionately overfeeding them and doing about everything that untutored good will could do to send his hens to the other shore.

LYNEHURST RANCH.

When at the end of the year he found he had not killed more than half of them, he courageously bought an incubator—the "only one," of course—and filled it with eggs imported from the East. Strange how devoted to their old homes are these men from the East! Well, it happened that these eggs from the East were what men in the West call pretty rotten. They blew up in the later stages of incubation, and the young parson half-concluded that he had turned down the wrong street in quest of a diversion that would make for health. On the twenty-first day, however, there was a welcome noise in that incubator. Chicks! real ones—twenty of them from 200 eggs! But what a fine assortment! There were Plymouth Rocks, Barred and White; White Leghorns and Brown; Black Minorcas and one that looked like a Cochin. Of course, the whole bunch were "the limit," but where is the man who isn't as proud of his first hatch as a mother of her baby—no matter how ugly a duckling it might be? These chicks survived a few weeks, then a Higher Mercy sent a skunk and swept them all away. Then seemed to be fulfilled the saying: "You can't raise chickens in Southern Arizona."

But the next year, he tried again, and raised 100 pullets. Then down went the parson with a real attack of hen fever, from which he has not yet recovered. Next year he bought another incubator and more brooders. More luck and more hard work.

But why make a long story of this? In his zealous work among his hens the Rev. Frederick Lyne forgot his appointment with the undertaker, and has lived to make the Lynehurst Ranch famous throughout the Territory. From the small and unpromising conditions herein outlined has grown the present layout of 4000 standard-bred White Leghorns. The ranch is run on a purely commercial basis, and no eggs are sold for hatching. Indeed, eggs for the Lynehurst incubators are bought in California. Mr. Lyne's theory being that men should be encouraged to specialize as breeders.

The Lynehurst Ranch explodes a time-honored fiction, which begins, like a hundred other fictions, with the words "You can't," and vindicates the wisdom of one "sky pilot" who has proven that he, at least, is more than a mere navigator of the air. Anything can be done in Arizona that a good citizen ought to do.

Double-Yoked Eggs.

A number of Cornish fowl breeders have reported an unusual prevalence of double-yolked eggs among their hens, which is not only unusual, but undesirable, as it affects the vitality and breeding value of the birds. Double-yolked eggs may be considered twin eggs, though usually they are infertile, or, at best, the germs are weak. None of the authorities consulted give any specific information as to the cause or causes leading to their production, much less do they suggest a remedy or preventive measures. Edward Brown, one of the foremost English authorities, says that "very large eggs are generally double-yolked and unfertile, or, if fertile, produce malformed chicks." Robinson, in his Poultry Craft, says that "a double-yolked egg is a twin egg. The tendency to produce twins, as observed in human beings and in farm stock other than fowls, seems to be hereditary."

We very much doubt if anything can be done to overcome the laying of double-yolked eggs by particular hens, excepting to refrain from using them for breeding purposes. If hereditary, the evil may be eventually overcome in this way.

Dried Hen Fruit.

A dispatch from Topeka, Kan., recites the fact that dried eggs, like dried orchard fruits, are now a feature of commerce. The plant, established at that point, consumed 1,355,000 dozen eggs during twenty-five weeks this season. It requires three dozen to make one pound of dried eggs, which find a sale to the bakeries, boarding-houses, and on ships where it is at times inconvenient to always secure the fresh article. Heretofore much of the dried-egg product used in this country along the Atlantic Coast has come from Russia, China and Japan. With the advent of the home product it is to be hoped that this trade can be supplied by the American hen. In addition to the dried product, there are also many eggs canned, both yolks and whites being first emulsified. The principal product in the latter class comes from Russia and Denmark, which finds an outlet in England.

Good Money for Winning Birds.

The premium list of the State Fair at Sacramento (August 31 to September 5) shows that the poultry division is well remembered, the allotment for premiums being $3000 divided in 2000 cash prizes to the poultry and pigeon raisers of California, divided as follows: Firsts, $2.50; seconds, $1.50; thirds, 50 cents. Pens—$4, $2, $1. Turkeys—$4, $2, $1. Ducks and geese—$4, $2, $1. Pigeons—$1.50, $1, 50 cents, and a large number of cash specials from $15 down. That certainly looks good to us. If some of the birds we know of in Southern California go after this money, it will certainly come their way.

An Oracle and His Flock.

M. A. Brownell of this city writes that he has a young hen with red comb, good feeder, spry in her movements and laying until lately, but she has a cough—for want of a better term. When feeding in the scratching pen and frequently through the day, she gives a little quick sound as though there was some trouble with her windpipe, but none can be found by examination. There is no sign of canker or "swell" head. Will you please tell me what the trouble is, and what to do for it?

A rattling in the throat as you describe is due to a cold with bronchitis, which if allowed to run may lead eventually to roup. For a remedy, take equal parts of cayenne pepper, ginger and mustard, mixed stiffly as possible in lard, then flour worked in to make a stiff dough; form in slugs or pellets about the size of a small hazelnut; give by opening the mouth and dropping down the throat. A single treatment often cures; if it does not, it should be followed by another dose in twenty-four hours.

Emory Vine of Devore, Cal., submits a Plymouth Rock egg on which he asks an opinion as to color of shell, size, etc., arguing because but slightly tinted it might be advisable to breed a strain of Rocks laying pure white eggs.

There is nothing extraordinary in the Plymouth Rock egg under consideration. Usually the Plymouth Rock egg is a trifle darker in color and also a trifle larger. It would be perfectly safe to breed your pullets, but there would be nothing new in the breed. As a matter of fact, there is nothing to be gained in the creation of additional varieties of Plymouth Rocks. It would be far better to put in a good strain from some reliable breeder and by careful mating and close observation try to improve that strain.

Signs of the Business Zodiac.

Straws show which way the wind blows. If indications both East and West mean anything at all, the coming season will be an improvement over that of last year for the poultry breeder. Conditions are more his way; the prevailing high prices for the grain foods during the past two years have resulted in many birds going to the butcher, which has reduced local supply of market birds as well as breeding stock. With a return to normal conditions, there will be a healthy sale for good stock, while the general market will take all available hen fruit and carcasses; the pure-food laws, which make punishable by fine the selling of storage eggs as "fresh ranch," will also tend to brighten the outlook for the local breeders. It is our conviction that the breeder with good stock will find his business much improved this season over what it was a year ago.

An Electric Hen That Really Works.

This is indeed an age of invention, to which the poultry industry is no exception. Coupled with the creation of new things by individual enterprise, we have fully one-third of the agricultural stations of the nation carrying on experimental work along lines calculated to foster and develop the industry. As a means of exploitation the Oregon Agricultural College has a poultry exhibit at the Alaska-Yukon Pacific Exposition, at Seattle, which is strikingly unique and affords a suggestion for our poultry-show managers. One part shows a miniature poultry farm with the buildings and equipments necessary to successful poultry culture. Another portion demonstrates the productiveness of the average hen and illustrates her high efficiency in converting raw material into the finished product. A stuffed hen is displayed, beside it 100 pounds of the va

"There was one girl, a very pretty little thing, who came here one day to see one of the editors. She had left a story with him and she wanted to talk to him about it. Well, she was very pretty, and the editor was not busy, and he saw her. Her story seemed to appeal to his risibles and he is a very frank, not to say brusque, westerner, this editor. In a few of his choicest phrases he told her what was the matter with her story. Man-like, he did not see the tears rising, and before he had finished, she had burst into tears and had laid her head down on his perfectly good mahogany desk to do so. Then he didn't know what to do. He tried to smooth it over and be kind to her, but she only sobbed, till at last he rushed madly in here with anything but a pleasant expression on his face and begged some one to go and send the girl home to her mother. And she is not the only girl I've seen cry in an editor's office because he very kindly told her what was the matter with her story."

Wooing of Victoria.

A MISUNDERSTANDING IN THE WINSTANLEY FAMILY.

From London Tatler.

"LORD SCARSLEIGH is coming this afternoon," remarked Mrs. Winstanley as she arranged herself carefully in the chair she usually occupied on her "days." She looked across at her daughter meaningly.

"Very well, mother."

Victoria spoke quite unconcernedly. She was accustomed to Lord Scarsleigh's visits, and they did not interest her in the least. Besides, her mind was extremely busy over other matters just now.

She went on quietly with her embroidery without even looking up.

"He remarked this morning that your color was pretty and natural-looking."

"Very kind of him, I'm sure."

Mrs. Winstanley put up her lorgnettes and surveyed her daughter critically.

"He seems to have a curious prejudice against anything in the way of what he calls 'make-up;' I have heard him talk of other girls. I wish, love, you would run upstairs and wipe the powder off your face before he comes. It might make him suspicious of your coloring."

Victoria hesitated. She had had to return from her morning trysting-place in rather a hurry lest she should be late for luncheon, and was hot and tired. It was two flights of stairs up to her bedroom, and her mother had made her use powder since she was 17, and always told her she looked unfinished and gauche without it. An expression of mild annoyance crossed her pretty face.

"Don't you think you had better take the same precaution?"

"Don't be rude, Victoria.'

Victoria's slim figure rose, and a smile quickly replaced the frown. It had suddenly occurred to her that Lord Scarsleigh's frequent visits might help to expedite her own little plans.

"Very well, Mummie, I will do my best to make your environment all that His Lordship would approve of."

Lord Scarsleigh had arrived when she reached the drawing-room again. He was an elderly man, tall, with a military aspect. He sat down near Victoria and watched her and played with his mustache.

Her mother was at the other side and talked gaily to him across her.

"I suppose you will soon be leaving town now. London is beginning to get a cheap, second-hand appearance that is quite unpleasant; isn't it? The best people are all going."

"I—er—hadn't noticed it."

"Oh, everybody is making their plans for the autumn now. Next week sees the last of the opera. I saw dear Lady Flora this morning; she is just off to Cowes.'

Mrs. Winstanley leaned back and fanned herself pensively. It was rather fatiguing making all the conversation this hot afternoon.

Lord Scarsleigh left off fingering his mustache for a few seconds.

"Does—er—Miss Winstanley like yachting?"

"Intensely."

Victoria started slightly. Her mother must surely have forgotten what a pitiful sailor she was, and how she loathed the water. but she restrained an exclamation and went on quietly with her embroidery. She did not wish to spoil any one else's plans.

"The sea has a great fascination for us both," Mrs. Winstanley added serenely. "My dear father was an admiral; no doubt Victoria and I inherit it from him."

"I have a yacht.'

"How delightful! It has always been one of the dreams of my life to possess a yacht. How lucky some people are!"

Mrs. Winstanley sighed softly and waited expectantly.

His Lordship's next remark was not quite what she hoped for, but it contained latent possibilities.

"I will have it painted."

Tea was brought up and other callers arrived. Lord Scarsleigh promptly departed, but graciously signified his intention of coming again the following afternoon.

When Mrs. Winstanley told Victoria they must stay at home again, she was as much annoyed as such an amiable, well-brought-up girl could be.

"But surely I need not stay, too?"

"Nonsense! Of course you must."

"But, mother, it's very tiresome. I promised to go to tea with Mary Lester. How long is this going on? I shall be glad when something is settled."

"So shall I," returned her mother fervently.

The next afternoon Lord Scarsleigh sat at one side of Victoria again and fondled his mustache and watched her pretty head bending over her embroidery, and Mrs. Winstanley sat at the other and talked to him.

She did not sew; she leaned back and waved a fan gracefully to and fro and wondered what she could do to expedite matters.

"Are you going abroad for the winter?' she asked pleasantly.

"It depends on circumstances."

"Circumstances" might mean anything. Mrs. Winstanley felt quite hopeful.

"I do not wish to be unduly inquisitive," she laughed, "but one likes to hear what one's friends are doing. I I am still very uncertain in my own mind where Victoria and I will go."

She paused. It was as well to give him opportunities for making suggestions if he wished to.

Apparently he did not.

"Of course Scotland is very pleasant next month—I hear your place is perfectly lovely. I suppose most people will move north at first, but for myself I feel the cold so I shall soon be in a hurry to get south again."

Lord Scarsleigh only caressed his mustache and watched Victoria.

Mrs. Winstanley wished desperately she could think of some washable excuse for leaving the room.

"Your daughter is—er—very fond of needlework?" he remarked while she ruminated.

"She's devoted to it."

The opportunity being given for airing Victoria's womanly virtues, Mrs. Winstanley did not hesitate to make the most of it.

"Victoria is a most sweet, domesticated girl altogether," she purred, "fond of quiet, feminine occupations. She does not care for rough, outdoor sports like so many young women of the present day; a needle and piano, or book, are her chief delights."

Victoria hardly recognized herself from this description, but remained dutifully silent.

"I like a lady to be able to sew," Lord Scarsleigh remarked, rising. "Good afternoon."

"How abrupt he is and how slow," sighed Mrs. Winstanley after he had gone.

Victoria, on the contrary, felt extremely cheerful. It was only 5 o'clock. She flew upstairs, put on her hat, whistled for a taxicab, and had a second tea with Mary Lester and, incidentally, with Mary's brother.

Next morning, there was a note from Lord Scarsleigh asking if they would give him the pleasure of sharing his box at the opera.

Mrs. Winstanley was rapturous.

"It will be almost equivalent to a public announcement."

"Make Adele do your hair very nicely, Mummie, and do be careful about your complexion," was Victoria's sage advice.

Mrs. Winstanley was visibly excited after they reached home again.

"He has asked if he may call tomorrow morning; a morning call always means business."

Victoria was very much interested, too.

"He is coming between 12 and 1—he must mean to propose."

Mrs. Winstanley's voice positively trembled with triumph.

"You darling! I'm so glad. A coronet and plenty of money are really very desirable possessions."

"Darling girl!"

When Lord Scarsleigh arrived at 12 o'clock, she was walking at the farther end of the park with Freddy Lester. She returned home at luncheon time.

"What is the meaning of this, Victoria?' her mother gasped. "Where have you been?"

"Why, you haven't been anxious, have you, Mummie? I knew you would like me out of the way this morning. I met a friend and we had a lovely time together."

Victoria was getting a little reckless.

"But I thought, my love, that you quite understood you would be wanted at home. Lord Scarsleigh has been waiting nearly two hours, and is in a hurry."

"I really do think you are a very lucky man. I'm so pleased, Mummie, though I shall hate sharing you with any one else. Perhaps now you are both so happy I may as well tell you of my own happiness. I am engaged to Freddy Lester, and if you don't mind, Mummie, we think it would be very nice to have a double wedding."

Five minutes later, Lord Scarsleigh left the house in a violent hurry, while Mrs. Winstanley collapsed panting on to the sofa.

BARBARA CARESS-WILSON.

Embarrassing.

An iron hoop bounced through the area railings of a suburban woman's house recently and played havoc with the kitchen window. The woman waited, anger in her eye, for the appearance of the hoop's owner. Presently he came.

"Please, I've broken your winder," he said, "and here's father to mend it."

And, sure enough, he was followed by a stolid-looking workman, who at once started to work, while the small boy took his hoop and ran off.

"That'll be half a dollar, Ma'am," announced the glazier when the window was whole once more.

"Half a dollar!" gasped the woman. "But your little boy broke it. The little fellow with the hoop, you know. You're his father, aren't you?"

The stolid man shook his head.

"Don't know him from Adam," he said. "He came around to my place and told me his mother wanted her winder mended. You're his mother, aren't you?"

And the woman shook her head also.—[Detroit News Tribune.

Burbank Repudiated.

THE action of the Pasadena Gardeners' Association in placing Luther Burbank among the "nature fakers" was consummated with a dash and an aplomb equal to the course of our great African hunter in his treatment of Dr. Long. This matter has been brewing for a long time, as I have become aware from a considerable correspondence asking me to controvert this and that outgoing about the Burbank creations. With the exception of correcting a few individual cases of fulsome, yellow extravagance, I have refrained from the encouragement of the mutiny that has become public by the action of the Pasadena florists.

If the Pasadena gardeners have overwrought themselves and taken action unjustly toward Mr. Burbank, it should be looked upon more as a protest against the egregious advertising of which the alleged friends of Burbank's work have been guilty, than as a condemnation of Mr. Burbank's achievements, although the wording of the gardeners' resolution does not lead in that direction. It is a case of continued and long-standing abuse of public credulity, uncontradicted and unrectified by any one whose courage and standing would assist in protecting both Burbank's reputation and the public's exchequer at the same time. It was only a few months ago that the honesty of Burbank prevented the greatest exploitation of horticultural credulity ever attempted in the world. In their just indignation over the sinning of yellow journalism, the fulsomeness of some of Burbank's friends and the mysticism that has been thrown over functions and facts known to every good florist in the State, the Pasadena gardeners have gone to the other extreme in a protest, not vain, but lacking conclusiveness. Much can and should be said in Burbank's favor, and the late action of the florists will not be accepted by the public as the closing of Burbank's career by any means, even though the whole State should join in an outcry justified by the continued legerdemain to which printer's ink has been applied, but not justified by the facts that should long since have been set forth to correct what seems to me to have been a public craze that has been extremely destructive to Burbank's great reputation.

The action of the Pasadena association may cause the public to pause and consider just how far it has been deluded by the false claims that have been made in behalf of the Burbank creations, and how far it has been cheated by not being allowed to form its own estimate of the scientific and practical value of Burbank's remarkable career. Whenever sensational "journalism" juggles with scientific veracity it is sure to make a mess of it, and the sequel of this whole matter will prove that all the executioners of truth and conservatism should long since have been put out of action, for the last state of this misconstruction, misstatement, fallacy and even of misapprehension will require years in conclusion where a few well-directed inquiries and a few ounces of confidence in the first place might have prevented an alignment for and against the greatest name in the annals of plant breeding.

Quarantine Officer Resigns.

THE State Commissioner of Horticulture has received the resignation of E. M. Ehrhorn, who for several years has been in charge of the quarantine division of the State Commission. History but repeats itself. On the 19th day of July, 1904, Alexander Craw tendered his resignation from the same post to accept the position of quarantine officer under the Board of Agriculture and Forestry of Hawaii. He turned the California office over to Mr. Ehrhorn at the end of the month. Now the Agricultural Board at Honolulu has chosen Mr. Ehrhorn, and he will leave for that post to take charge of the office on the first day of October.

Mr. Ehrhorn has not published the consideration that induced him to leave his present work, but has intimated that the salary is considerably in advance of that he is receiving. While it is disconcerting to be continually losing our best men to the Islands and to the Federal service, it is pleasant to know that in every case the relations between these retiring officials and their fellow-officers have been without friction. It has been merely cases of better pay than the Legislatures of California have provided for these deputies. Fortunately, the quarantine work at San Francisco has become so well systematized that it will not suffer from any change that may be made.

Mr. Ehrhorn's work has been efficient in safeguarding the fruit interests of the State from the invasion of new pests. Outside the quarantine work his services have been great. His knowledge of insect control, of horticulture and of the State law has been of great value to the fruit men of the Coast, and all will regret that from any cause he should voluntarily relinquish the work he has so carefully supervised for the last five years.

Dredge-Mining Contest.

I HAD the profit recently from attending a large meeting of land owners and others, called to consider the encroachments of the new mining dredges in the Sacramento Valley. Like many another farmers' consultation, I have witnessed, the meeting had no head or definite purpose. And yet the deliberations were characterized by the most intelligent discussion, the fairest feeling toward all interests involved, but with an ill-directed determination to bring the matter of dredge mining to a closer determination. All agree that this kind of mining should be subjected to all regulations necessary to the protection of navigable streams and from overflow chargeable to the accumulation of the débris tailed out by the dredges; some hold that the dredge owners have no rights whatever to turn upside down the agricultural lands of the State, though the lands may be absolutely the property of the dredge companies.

One of the prime movers in this anti-dredge propaganda holds that the State should prevent dredge mining absolutely. The fine lands now disappearing, under twenty feet of boulders by hundreds of acres and ruined for all time is under the custody of the State. Both common law and self-preservation justify, yes compel, the commonwealth to stop the destruction of this land, and the interests of posterity demand it. Just how the State is to do this in the absence of statutory authority, and the next Legislature two years away, none of the proponents of drastic action have explained. One way out of the difficulty would be to compel the dredge companies to leave the land as good as they found it before dredging, although it is their own property. This is equivalent to compelling them to cease operations, for this land will not be fit for cultivation in a thousand years left as it is, and no other quittance would permit the extraction of the gold. One thing is certain, this question bids fair to be of great issue here in the future, and it will require all the agitation and statesmanship available to prevent the final destruction of all the gold-bearing farming land in the State.

When the great hydraulic mining industry was legislated out of existence, many real friends of agriculture and protectors of navigation were content with a compromise permitting the impounding of débris where it could be successfully done, and the mining allowed to continue under these conditions. Fortunately the topography of most mining districts prevented an attempt to continue hydraulic operations under the impounding restrictions. But those impounding works cannot be built to withstand decades of elemental attacks, and the question resolves itself under the law as to whether it is not best to prohibit hydraulic mining absolutely. The farmers are asking the same question about dredging.

Almost Over the Line.

WHAT a tight squeeze we are having this year trying to breast the tape that marks the 30,000-carload line of oranges. Almost, but not quite, unless there are more Valencias yet on the trees that have not been taken into account. Well, the tape will not be in danger of breaking next year, of that we may be assured. Some eastern towns which knew the celebrated seedless citrus fruit this year will know it no more till the growers learn how to make a fair crop "set" under adverse circumstances. I am not predicting an orange shortage of 40 per cent., as one grower has predicted. In fact, no one can have much idea of what the deficit will be till the associations have made up their usual fall estimates. But it is reasonable to forecast, that with the return of normal industrial conditions, the question of orange distribution will be pertinent only in holding small but valuable markets to the habit of using California oranges.

Co-operative Prune Selling.

UPON a recent visit to San José I was favored with a long interview with one of the pioneer propagandists of mutual activities in marketing prunes. The growers of that magnificent section are attempting to organize their business similar to that of the citrus-fruit growers. Those most favorable to this plan told me that the idea is gaining ground very slowly, and while a few associations have been formed, the majority of the prune growers are as inert as usual. Indeed, this gentleman informed me that, in the twenty-five years he had been connected with the prune trade, the outlook had never been so dark. Others take a little more hopeful view of the situation, and one accustomed to think upon the problems of coöperative marketing will find himself thoroughly puzzled should he attempt to form a rational conclusion from one visit to the center of the prune industry.

One thing is certain, the growers, packers, brokers and commission men are discouraged and the future gloomy. Is the difficulty in the attitude of the San José people upon some fundamental commercial principle, or is it in an inherent element of the industry that inhibits the application of the selling plan adopted by the California Fruit Growers' Exchange? Can prunes be sold through the growers' own agencies scattered all through the markets of the East, or must it be done through commission men only, and from large distributive centers? I think the trouble largely one of attitude toward certain basic principles in the selling of produce. One of the coöperative leaders, for example, told me that the prune growers should adopt the citrus growers' plan only up to the selling point, and that there they should turn their business over to the commission men, who could do it better and cheaper than could any growers' agency. As the selling plan is more than half the value of the scheme in operation by the citrus people, it will be seen by this man's attitude just how far real coöperation has progressed at San José. I am not claiming that because success has come from owning its own selling agency with the orange, that it must come only in the same way with the prune. But when every effort to market prunes fails to bring results, it would be provident to try a new and radical measure—new and radical in prune and conservative now in the marketi

Changing Crops.

THE HANFORD SENTINEL says that Chester Bloyd has twenty acres of alfalfa on what was a few years ago the Downing pear orchard. The blight took the pears and the woodchoppers took the trees, and the place has gone into general farming. Well, Mr. Bloyd has twenty acres of alfalfa there from which he has taken up to date this season seventy-nine and three-quarters tons the first cutting, and fifty-seven and three-quarters tons the second cutting, making for those two cuttings 137½ tons. We have spelled part of this out so that the reader will have no chance to say that the figures got mixed. The 137½ tons sold for $7 a ton in the stack, making $962.50, making over $48 an acre thus far. He expects to take off the same land this season three more cuttings, the amount of which will be reported later. He will get at least $75 an acre off that twenty acres in alfalfa this year, and that is 10 per cent. on $750-acre land. Considering the amount of labor necessary to farm alfalfa as compared with some other crops that do not bring in as much, alfalfa is one of the king pins in the industries on the farm.

Plants About the House.

THE title of this article may be misleading, in a sense. I shall not treat of plants all through the house, but rather of plants located close to the house, set in such a manner as to hide the foundations thereof, and in the case of vines, its walls.

To the writer, a house with exposed foundations always seems unfinished. It needs the grace of growing plants to take away the bare look which is never pleasant, no matter how expensive the foundation may be. There is a beauty in leaf and flower that cannot be put into stone and mortar.

Perhaps I may be allowed to use this expression—the use of plants close to the house, while not detracting in the least from the dignity and importance of it, prevents us from looking upon it as something that boldly challenges the attention—an idea not in keeping with the home sense which ought to characterize the building in which those live who care less for show and admiration than for beauty. All of us have seen houses which seem to absolutely force themselves upon our attention. We may admire them, in a way, but it is a way with which the idea of home is not associated.

They have too public a look to suggest hominess. But if shrubs, and perennials, and vines were planted about them, their aggressiveness would be hidden, or at least modified, and we would soon begin to think of them as homes instead of houses.

I don't know that the reader will get just the idea I have in mind, at first reading, but little thought along this line will soon make it clear to him.

No very tall-growing plants should be used anywhere about the house if they will interfere with the outlook. Windows are made to let in light and sunshine, and we cannot afford to darken them with bushes or vines. The windows are darkened, free outlook is interfered with, and the general effect is monotonous.

One vine, planted at the corner and trained along the cornice, over the windows, with a few branches allowed to droop here and there, would have given a much more satisfactory effect. A vine used in this way has a chance to display its individuality. You see all its charm of leaf, and habit of growth.

The best plants to use about the base of the house are those which do not grow much higher than the wall. Among hardy kinds there is nothing better than Dicentra, the dwarf varieties of perennial phlox and the herbaceous Spireas. Along with these can be used such annuals as the Nasturtium, Nicotiana, Aster, Ten Week Stock and Coreopsis. Here Geraniums and Coleus can be made to do duty in summer.

Bulbs for early blooming can be scattered along the outer edge, close to the path. To edge the planting, pansies, Bellis perennis, and the low-growing varieties of Phlox can be used effectively. To furnish brilliance in midsummer, the Gladiolus can be planted in groups here and there, and the tube rose to give bloom and fragrance later in the season.

Indeed, these about-the-walls collections can be made up of a "happy family" of plants that will give a vast amount of pleasure because of lack of formality in arrangement, and because of genuine merit possessed by them. Homey, old-fashioned plants will please best of all, because they will be in keeping with the character of the place they beautify.—[American Farm World.

Garden Moles.

MOLES in a garden do harm only by disturbing the soil about the roots of young growing plants, which may sometimes destroy small, tender plants. They feed generally upon grubs and other underground insects, and in that way they are beneficial. There are several ways of getting rid of them. A number of efficacious mole traps may be had on the market. They may be caught in buckets. A hole may be dug down through a new tunnel deep enough to set a two-gallon bucket in the soil so its top will extend only as high as the bottom of the mole run and so the mole run closes over the top of the bucket. The opening above the bucket may then be covered with a board to keep out the light. As the mole passes along the run it will drop into the bucket, and cannot escape up its smooth walls. Small steel traps set in the bottom of the runs are employed successfully by some people. There is a mole plant, Euphorbia lathyris, which if planted in the garden is claimed to drive moles from its vicinity. The writer has never tested this plant, and cannot speak for or against its efficiency in this respect.—[Farm and Fireside.

Medical Buzzards.

THERE is a no more despicable creature on the face of the earth than the man who, for the sake of filthy lucre, preys upon the fears of suffering humanity, and purposely exaggerates the danger of his patient's condition. He is a disgrace to what should be an honorable profession.

It is a fact that some of these fellows will deliberately prolong, or even produce, a sickness, so long as their victims have money to expend, and are willing to pay.

It is not necessarily because they advertise that doctors are to be condemned. Not at all. There is no good reason why a physician should not advertise in the papers, any more than any other man who has something of value to offer to the public. The medical fraternity condemns advertising—when it is paid for. This does not prevent the "regulars" from scrambling over each other in their efforts to obtain deadhead notoriety. In a recent article contributed to a medical publication by Dr. Lydston, he cites the following instance:

"A certain medical man—big, brainy, square-toed and altogether lovable—felt called upon to explain to a certain official medical body the publication of his picture amid a group of other distinguished physicians in a certain newspaper. 'I called at the newspaper office,' he explained, 'and demanded the picture. I was informed that it was the property of the paper. I find that I have no legal means of redress,' etc., etc. This in face of the fact that the eminent gentleman's name has appeared in connection with the treatment of prominent citizens oftener than that of any physician in the country. Why, I once saw it in two or three separate places in the same paper! Not long since, his attendance on a certain multimillionaire and his large fee for the same were newspaper talk by the column for days and weeks."

Again in a recent article in the Saturday Evening Post entitled "The Itch for Publicity," in which the author shows how various classes of men exert themselves to keep in the limelight, the writer refers as follows to the medical fraternity, who are forbidden by the "ethics" of their profession to advertise—when they pay for it:

"And the doctors! No doctor would talk about a case, except in the way of a bulletin reciting the tempo of the pulse and the resps of the respiration when his patient is of public interest. That is the most unethical of all unethical things. But a lot of names of doctors are frequently in the newspapers. Some of them are quite familiar. A celebrated surgeon is employed to cut an ingrowing halo out of a captain of finance, or something of the kind. The celebrated surgeon firmly declines to say a word, but, strangely enough, a full account of the operation is printed, with the doctor's office address, said full account falling in the way of the reporters through the medium of a man who happens to know all about it, not, perhaps, unconnected with the celebrated surgeon's pay roll. The celebrated surgeon is furious, but what can he do? Nothing, except hope that other captains of finance with ingrowing halos will read the story and call on him when they desire to have theirs extirpated. Take it by and large, quite a bit of medical news, always with the names and office addresses of the doctors attached, gets out in the course of a year. And when a doctor discovers the germ that causes housemaid's knee it is possible, at times, possible, you understand, to obtain a few lines about it for the Sunday supplement."

Remember, further, that all these quacks, who offer their services to the public, have regular M.D. diplomas hanging in their offices. Otherwise they would not be permitted to practice. And this while State medical boards are prosecuting and persecuting worthy and honest and drugless healers. Why don't they clear their own skirts? If, as they claim, they are powerless to take action in this matter, then surely the entire system of State medical control is more of a farce than it is generally understood to be.

"Business Methods of Specialists" is a little book of 110 pages, by Jacob Dissinger Albright, M.D. (published by the author, No. 3228 North Broad street, Philadelphia.) It is apparently written more with the object of suggesting to the "regular" practitioner some business methods by which he might increase his income than to expose and condemn the nefarious practices of these medical outlaws.

The author declares that the first requisites to a successful career in the advertising medical business are not, as some might suppose, profound knowledge and ability, but "good sound business ability and a thorough knowledge of human nature, first, last and all the time."

Asking why the public prefers the irregular physician, the author answers that it does not, unless it can obtain from him something that cannot be obtained from the regular. To illustrate this, he says:

"Take, for example, any town in which the regular physicians are progressive, up to date, well posted on human nature and as well on human ailments, able to treat hernia or hemorrhoids by injection, cure a fissure or a fistula without the loss of blood, without pain and without anesthesia, ligate a varicocele, not only tap but cure a hydrocele, alleviate the sufferings of women afflicted with diseases peculiar to their sex without removing a pound of flesh, and in that town the advertising specialist will make a short stay.

"Why is it that we have no advertising specialist treating pneumonia, diphtheria, smallpox or scarlet fever? Is it not for the simple reason that the family physician is posted along these lines and is prepared to give his patients the best there is in the way of treatment?"

Later on in the book, he says:

"Any one who has investigated the business of advertising specialists knows that it is true that 90 per cent. and more of the patients treated by them do not consult them primarily, but as a rule only after they have been mistreated, maltreated or trifled with by some member of the regular profession."

Here is the way in which the quack fisherman plays his sucker:

"Several symptoms that the patient mentions are usually mentally noted by the doctor, and after he is through talking and has forgotten much of what he has said on account of embarrassment, the doctor knowingly informs him that he has discovered the trouble, and that he needs but a few confirmations to decide the matter definitely. He then proceeds to say that if his diagnosis is correct, the patient would have well-defined symptoms of a certain character, and names these just referred to as having been mentally noted, thereby impressing the patient with the thought that he is a careful observer, a shewd diagnostician and thoroughly understands the existing condition.

"Diseases, whether actually present or not, are always magnified and their seriousness and danger forcibly brought to the notice of the patient, always coupled with the assurance, however, that relief and cure may still be obtained if prompt and proper treatment is at once instituted."

A chapter is devoted to the subject of the advertising specialist's guarantee. This guarantee looks so honest and fair that it fools many people. As Dr. Albright says, these guarantees are "fearfully and wonderfully made." They are cleverly framed to fit almost every contingency that might arise. One of the strongest cards of the specialist is the natural disinclination of men to have it published abroad that they have been suffering from venereal diseases. This card the "specialists" play as a trump, when others fail to do the trick.

As to whether an advertising practice pays, the author says:

"The majority of advertising specialists agree that the business is overworked, that the public is becoming more and more educated to the fact that many of the advertisements are deceptive and show no regard for the truth, and that the statement made in a paid advertisement that a certain physician is skillful, honest and learned does not by any means make him so.

"The attitude of the newspapers and high-class magazines toward the advertising medical specialist is also a matter that must be considered, as many of the better grade of daily papers and popular magazines will not accept advertising of this nature, and when sexual matters are more or less boldly referred to, the 'yellowest' journals are not anxious to carry the advertisements. Papers that still admit this class of advertising charge a rate that is almost prohibitive, knowing that, although 'it comes high, they must have it.'

"In this city (Philadelphia,) the large dailies that admit medical advertising (some of them do not) charge from four to seven dollars per inch of space, single column, each insertion; rates that make a broker's capital necessary in order to carry on a year's campaign of advertising, with less than an even chance of ultimate success."

In the closing chapter, Dr. Albright discusses "The Remedy." He says:

"The human race has ever been prone to wander from the fundamental rules of right living, and as a result we have pathological conditions that bear a direct relation to the rule which was violated. . . .

"This brings the matter squarely to the medical profession, and a humane, intelligent and skillful application of the knowledge that is held within it will forever solve this continually-discussed and ever-recurrent problem."

This is a somewhat lame and impotent conclusion. As remarked above, all these practitioners have diplomas entitling them to practice. It is an easy thing to find out when their practices are dishonorable. In such case, let the medical boards invoke the law upon them. Or, if the law is not sufficient, let them have it changed, so as to cover such cases. This would be much better than the devising of laws to keep naturopaths and osteopaths, and other honorable men from treating the sick.

Above all, however, the main thing is to educate the public in regard to the fact that drugs are not only useless, but harmful, whether those drugs are administered "ethically" or otherwise. We cannot, however, expect the medical fraternity to go so far as this. Therefore, reform in this direction must come from without.

ey's point is well taken. This question of prices is a most important one, both to the consumer. The leading industry of Cali- orticulture. California is the greatest fruit- ate in the Union, and one of the principal sections of the world. The growers often very low price for their product—sometimes re than sufficient to pay for the harvesting ing, not to speak of the cost of bringing an bearing and caring for it. Yet, as a rule, er has to pay a price for his fruit—rarely cest—that makes it impossible for a person means to feed his family anything like as is wholesome food as he would wish to let been discussion of late in the columns of in regard to the high prevailing retail prices ile some growers are unable to market their starvation rates. The retailers blame the men and the commission men in turn blame the retailers. Doubtless there is something to be said on both sides.

As previously remarked here, the man who could succeed in bringing the producer and the consumer of fruit nearer together would be as worthy of public regard and esteem as the man who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before. It is, perhaps, not altogether an easy problem, but it is one that is well worth solving. Fruit is the most wholesome of all foods. It is nature's medicine, containing the important organic salts that feed the nerves and maintain the organism in proper condition. If people would live largely on fruit and salads in summer, they would be greatly benefited, and the doctors would have much less to do. They cannot afford to do this, however, at present prices. It is of little use to educate the people in regard to the value of fresh fruit as a food, if they cannot afford to buy it. It is true that at some retail stores you see fruit marked at a reasonable rate, but these are the exception, not the rule.

Another drawback of the retail fruit business is that most of the fruit displayed for sale has either been picked before it is quite ripe, or else it has begun to rot. This is more or less unavoidable when fruit is sold at retail, as the retailer cannot be expected to take the chance of fruit decaying on his hands. Still, it is a bad thing, for such fruit is not wholesome.

As previously suggested here, every one should endeavor, so far as possible, to grow at least berries and green stuff in his own yard—where he has a yard—even if it costs more than he can buy it for. It is astonishing what can be done in this line, even on a piece of land 25 by 150 feet, after allowing for buildings. That is, if you utilize trellises, and walls, and sides of houses, as they do in the old country.

We have in Los Angeles a couple of wholesale produce markets that are struggling for supremacy. It is true that one may go down there and buy a box of fruit at a very low price, if you choose the proper time. The trouble for a resident is, however, to get the stuff home. As a rule, it costs you much more to have it brought to your house than the price the producer receives.

It is surprising that no effort has yet been made to establish in Los Angeles, this center of a great fruit and flower-growing region, a thoroughly first-class, handsome, well-appointed, modern, down-to-date retail fruit and flower market, such as they have in European cities, and in one or two American cities like New Orleans. Such a building should be built of glass and kept scrupulously clean. It would soon become the proper thing for ladies, with or without their servants, to go shopping at such a market. This would not, of course, remedy the evil suggested of high retail fruit prices, but it would be an important step in the right direction. Meantime, considering that all consumers of fruit and all producers of fruit are greatly interested in this question, and that such people constitute a great majority of the population, it certainly seems as if, in this practical age and country, some means could be devised whereby the producer and consumer of fruit may be brought nearer together, to their mutual advantage.

"Absent Treatment."

IN an address on Christian Science by Frederick W. Peabody of Boston, recently reported in The Times, the speaker, referring to Mrs. Eddy's supposed conception of "malicious animal magnetism" asserted that neither health nor disease can be caused by an "absent treatment."

This is only measurably true. Suggestion, whether in the form of suggestive therapeutics, or "Christian Science," or any other method may, and undoubtedly often does, help people at a distance. It does so as all suggestion works, namely as auto-suggestion. That is to say, the operation takes place in the mind of the person who believes that he is being benefited by the process. This accounts for the undoubted cases of healing due to the worship of relics, to fervent prayer, to "Christian Science," and to other forms of suggestion.

It follows, as a matter of course, that if people can be made better by suggestion from a distance they can also be made worse. The conception of the "evil eye," as it is believed among the people of Italy, high and low, has often caused deaths, in cases where persons have worried themselves to death under the belief that they were being influenced by some one possessed of this fatal power.

Mrs. Eddy's idea of "malicious animal magnetism" is on a par with the Italian conception of the "evil eye."

Then again, in Pennsylvania it has recently been found necessary to arrest several "witch doctors" and other charm workers. When a person, especially a child, becomes afflicted with any malady not easily understood the worthy Pennsylvania Dutch folks declare that the person is "verhexed," or bewitched. However, what right have we to poke fun at them so long as cultured followers of Mrs. Eddy believe in the non-existence of matter, and in "malicious animal magnetism?"

We call this an enlightened age and a most enlightened country, but there is an awful lot of superstition still abroad in the land.

A Funny Man Encounters 'Friendly Germs."

IN the Saturday Evening Post for August 14, Samuel G. Blythe had the second of a series of three articles entitled "The Adventures of a Hypochondriac," this one being called "The Calory Cure," illustrated with some of the excruciatingly funny drawings of Gustavus Widney. The place referred to is evidently the big sanatorium at Battle Creek, although no names are mentioned. It opens as follows:

"The trouble with you," said the doctor to the Man From Pittsburgh, "is autointoxication." "Gwan!" exclaimed the Man From Pittsburgh excitedly. "It's no such thing. I sold my auto two years ago."

It may be that the managers of the Battle Creek institution emphasize somewhat unduly the importance in

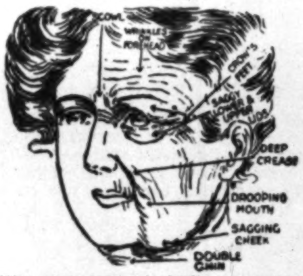
HAVE YOU THE "SAG?"



A "SAGGING" FACE DESTROYS ALL BEAUTY, MAKES THE APPEARANCE UGLY INSTEAD OF ATTRACTIVE, AS NATURE INTENDED ALL FACES TO BE.
One of the first distorting signs or advancing age that mars the beauty of the face is the "Sag"—the gradual sagging of the cheeks and chin. This disfigurement causes the nose-to-mouth furrows to deepen, the corners of the mouth to droop, the chin to bag and the crowsfeet around the eyes to become more apparent, lending a positively displeasing expression to an otherwise attractive face. It not only destroys the youthful outlines of the countenance, but also is suggestive of excesses, dissipation or unpleasant disposition.
The new style of collars is particularly unbecoming with loose, baggy, flabby skin about the chin and neck. To appear to "Best advantage," therefore, it is necessary to have the unpleasant "Sag" corrected by a very simple procedure, lift up the face to its former position, thereby taking off fifteen or twenty years from its appearance. A few moments' study before your mirror wil convince you of the wonderful improvement this simple procedure will make in your case.
If you have the "Sag" let us correct it, and you will not be disappointed in the result.
If you have, it will pay you to come thousands of miles, if necessary, to have this disfiguring distortion corrected "at once and for all."
We will be pleased to give you any further information you may desire if you will call or write for our booklet.

Accompany my method of straightening crossed eyes and restoring to use the poor eye. If this be not done, the crossed eye continually grows weaker and eventually becomes useless. DO NOT WASTE AN EYE WHEN IT CAN BE SAVED WITHOUT A SURGICAL OPERATION. The earlier in life it be done the better the vision can be made in the weak eye.

Miss Mabel Wilson says: "Your treatment of my eyes was effective and the crossed condition has entirely disappeared."

My system of eye testing uncovers all the reasons for weakness and failing sight, and shows just how to grind special lenses to correct these conditions. Remember that HEADACHES and NERVOUSNESS are more frequently the result of eyesight conditions than anything else, and cannot be removed without the eyes receiving first attention. This is the experience of the most eminent medical authorities. Free Examination.

value of their manufactured foods, and that they place too much emphasis upon the offices of "friendly germs" in manufactured sour milk, but at the same time they teach you how to eat so that you will not develop unfriendly germs in your interior department, which, after all, is the main thing.

Any one who is seriously sick could not do better than to pack up and make a bee line for the Battle Creek Sanatorium. Or, if they are unable to do this, to one of the smaller institutions scattered over the continent that are conducted on the same plan, although in no way connected with the institution at Battle Creek.

Sea Bathing.

AT this season of the year, thousands of city people are spending their vacation at the beach, and many of them are taking daily baths in the ocean—sometimes twice a day.

It is a well recognized fact that after the summer vacations the doctors have a busy time of it, especially among those who return from the beaches. To some extent this is due to the curative process of exposure to the air, sun and water, which aids nature to throw out impurities. Whereupon the able medico gets busy and gives the patient dope to stop the curative process of nature.

On the other hand, some of this illness may be directly attributed to the overexcitement of the nervous system caused by unnatural prolonged exposure to cold water and hot sunshine. Many people greatly overdo this bathing business. They go into the cold water not always because they like it, but because they have a foolish idea that it is going to do them good in some mysterious way, whereas, really it is doing them harm. Man is not a water animal, but an air animal. An air and light bath is of much greater value than a water bath, and many of the good effects following bathing in the open air are due to this exposure of the skin, which is covered up all the rest of the year.

Never take a cold bath unless you feel absolutely inclined to do so, and then stay in but a short time. After it you may lie on the beach with benefit, and take a sun bath, protecting your head from the glare.

Paying Physicians.

EMINENT physicians, at the recent meeting of the American Academy of Medicine, advocated "contract practice" by physicians as a solution of the problem of providing proper attention for wage earners at small cost. The plan presented favors small monthly payments by clients of the contract physician, who is expected to attend them in case of illness without extra charge. Dr. L. Benedict of Buffalo claimed that, under the present system, the poor, unable to pay doctor's bills, often delayed calling a physician until the disease was beyond easy cure. He said the contract-physician plan would insure the doctors against loss in unpaid bills and guarantee the young physician a living income.

This is entirely in accord with suggestions that have frequently been made in these columns during the past two years—that physicians should be paid as they are in China, to keep people well, not merely to patch them up when they are sick.

Is it not, as frequently pointed out here, exceedingly illogical and absurd that it should be in the interest of the physician—sometimes a struggling physician with a large family—that sickness and suffering should prevail, rather than that people should be well and disease rare?

The Pork Cure.

DR. W. P. BURKE runs a sanatorium in Sonoma county, Cal. He publishes a little monthly magazine called "Health"—not to be confounded with the excellent monthly magazine of that name published in New York.

Dr. Burke makes a specialty of the "Salisbury diet," which consists of lightly-broiled, chopped beef and hot water. He has some other peculiar ideas. For instance, in a recent number of his magazine he has an article on pork, in which he says:

"A Federal soldier who served in Virginia in the Civil War, voluntarily stated that the soldiers got more staying strength from salt pork than from any other army ration. It is not only a food, but is a good food medicine. Many a cure of double pleurisy and tuberculosis has been accomplished on a diet of pork, with no other food or medicine given. Many malarious cases have gotten well, when all other means failed, on pure fat bacon, boiled for an hour and a half, letting it get cold, and then cut in thin slices and heated through and eaten hot. While many cases may be given of the value of pork or bacon in the cure of disease, we will simply direct the attention of the reader to the people in mining regions who eat the hog in some shape, generally bacon and beans, as further illustrating the value of the hog as a food."

This is going even farther than Woods Hutchinson. Why don't some one start a pork cure?

The idea that there is "staying strength" in salt pork is all a fallacy. Owing to the injurious mixture of a preservative, in the shape of salt, it takes a long time to digest, and the longer a food takes to digest, the less wholesome it is. Any force derived from the pork must come from the fat, and that would be better supplied by nuts, or corn.

In another place Dr. Burke declares that "pork suits all climates." What folly! Why not advocate the eating of whale blubber in the South Sea Islands, and bread fruit at the North Pole?

People in the mining regions, who live largely on Nutritive Value of Beer.

COMMENT was recently made here on the exaggerated statement in a hygienic book that a five-pound loaf of bread is equal in food value to twenty-seven barrels of beer. As then stated, if the writer had said one barrel instead of twenty-seven, he would have been nearer the mark.

Here is an exaggeration on the other side of the question. The Hospital, a London medical journal, declares that "when a man drinks good beer he drinks and eats at the same time, just as when he eats a bowl of soup." Again, the writer says that these beverages (referring to beer and stout) "contain all the elements of a typical diet with the exception of fat, and in a proportion approximately physiological." Yet again, the Hospital quotes, without criticism, the report of a royal commission to the effect that a glass of good ale is "approximately as nourishing as a glass of milk, and that a quart of good beer is nearly equivalent to a quarter of a pound of beef."

Is it not astounding to find a leading medical journal propounding such gross, misleading and harmful falsehoods? One would suppose the Hospital to be the advertising agent of a brewery.

It would be an easy thing to test this question. Let one man diet for a month on two or three quarts of milk, and give another man the same amount of beer. The editor of the Care of the Body undertakes to say that a man who should attempt to live for a month on two quarts of beer, and nothing else, would be vastly worse off at the end of that time than another who should take nothing but two quarts of water.

About Living Forever.

IT is a strange thing that some people, who are apparently not only sane, but even intelligent, believe—or profess to believe—that it may be possible, under certain conditions, for human beings to live forever, in the physical form. One might suppose that they need only to look around them to see that the primary law of nature is change—everlasting change. Not only the animal world, of which proud man is a member, and the vegetable world, but even the mineral world is subject to this law of change. What we call the "everlasting hills" in course of time are disintegrated by the action of wind and weather, crumble away and are carried down to the ocean, where, after thousands or millions of years, they are again thrown up to form new mountain ranges. Even the celestial bodies, that we regard as permanent, go through their periods of growth, life and death. The nebulous body solidifies, gradually becomes fitted as a home for living things, until it grows old, and is a dead world, when some day a passing comet or other celestial body collides with it, turning it again into gas, to go through the same cycle of change.

Yet, notwithstanding these object lessons, there are, as stated, some extraordinary people who fancy that we little worms, crawling around upon the face of one of the most insignificant of the planets that revolve around one of the smaller of the millions of suns, may actually, "by taking thought," interfere with this great law of nature.

In conversation with a Times correspondent at Washington, Prof. H. W. Wiley, chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture, recently made the following sensible remarks:

"I might aspire to discover the secret of everlasting physical life, for then it would be possible for me to select the people who should benefit by my discovery. Since this selection is denied me, I do not want the secret known, for it might get out and the thought of some people living forever is an awful thought.

"No, we chemists must admit that we are aware of no way of renewing the tissues so as to perpetuate the living body. However, it is possible to make the body better while it lasts, so as to have sounder tissues, more energy, a brighter mind to retard the process of decay and to attain a higher maximum of development."

The Scented Set.

FOLLOWING is an extract from an article by Dr. J. H. Tilden in A Stuffed Club:

"There is, in every community, a select few, and there may be several sets. Quite frequently there is an ultra-set. It has a little more money; its toggery is of a better grade and better made, the cardboards are a shade better material, and the cigarettes contain a little more opium, which tends to inhibit the organic elimination and cause more retention of the materials which should pass out of the body through kidneys and bowels. This tends to the rounding of the bodies of this particular set. Its women are a little heavier of limb; the hips are more rotund; the busts are so heavy oftentimes that the body requires a rearing back to enable it to strike the center of gravity. The entire body of many of this set is heavily encumbered. It takes cosmetics pronouncedly odoriferous to overcome or cover the exhaled gases (which are not laughing gases, not by any means; indeed, they are no joke) which are being formed from the decomposition that must take place in such bodies, for the elimination cannot keep pace with the supply."
